KILLED BY THE CARS

Gus Butler Met Death While Working in Elkhart, Ind.

HE WAS YARD BRAKEMAN

Remains Were Brought to Buchanan Yesterday

Buchanan people were greatly shocked Wednesday evening to hear of the accidental death of Gus Butler, which occurred in Elkhart, about 5:30 o'clock, that afternoon.

Upon receiving the sad news Wednesday evening, Drs. O. Curtis and John Butler went to Elkhart, returning yesterday with the remains. Messrs. F. A. Benham, F. A. Jeffenes, S. S. Swan, W. H. Ritter, Chas. Meyers and A. L. Garman, also came with them.

The accident occurred in the yards at Elkhart, where they were making up trains on what is known as the "hump", where cars are pushed up on an incline and then shut onto different tracks on the down side of the "hump." A train was being pushed over the incline and Mr. Butler was on the back end of the first car, when fifteen cars, all loaded with coal, became uncoupled and started down the incline; they gained such a momentum that they shot down the incline at a terrible speed, and collided with some other cars that were standing on the track. The concussion was so great that the car Mr. Butler was on, was jammed against the car just back of it and he was caught between these two cars, killing him instantly.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 1:30 from the Evangelical church. All friends who wish to view the remains can do so at the home of J. C. Dick, between 9 and 13 o'clock Saturday morning, as the casket will not be opened at the church.

The services at the cemetery will be in charge of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of which order Mr. Butler was a member. A large delegation of the members of this order, is expected to be present from Elkhart, Battle Creek and Michigan City.

An April Song

Over and under,
A world of wonder,
While melody gathers and mounts
and thrills
In buoyant rhyme to,
And perfect time to,
The steps of April across the hills!

Gone the aurora's
Flashes, and Flora's
Train now flushes the banks o' the rills;
For each and all, love,
Spring's ancient thrall, love—
The steps of April across the hills!

Startling Mortality

Statistics show startling mortality, from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases, there is just one reliable remedy Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. Mystery In Bundle Of Clothes

Yesterday morning Thomas Brown found a bundle of clothing floating down the river near the Axle Works, and upon securing the bundle and opening it, it was found that it contained several pieces of woman's underclothing and a pillow. Some of the clothes had been cut and torn quite badly. He immediately notified Marshal Groves who went to the river and brought the bundle to town.

Foul play has been advanced by several of our citizens and the matter will be investigated.

It is the opinion of those who saw the package, that it had not been in the water very long as the feathers in the pillow were not wet through.

The Chicago Market Letter

Week's review of grain trade and exceptional market conditions furnished exclusively to the Buchanan Record by the house of Fyfe, Manson & Company, Board of Trade, Chicago.

May wheat is barred from ordinary transactions because it is too risky for commission people to handle orders, except on 10 per cent margins. This price had a rally for the week of nearly 7 cents. May wheat is a separate proposition from the July and September. It might as well be classed with the Northwest, which is a distinct situation in itself, entirely separate from that of the Southwest. May in Chicago and May and July in the Northwest are largely a supply and demand proposition. In this market it is conceded that there are no large individual lines, and it is now a fight between the big bull interest and those who have the wheat sold. The former are refusing offers of cash wheat on their May contracts in advance, believing that the situation is strong enough as regards supply and demand to be a factor before the end of May.

Looking at the July wheat it is somewhat of a question of early or late harvests. The finest promise now of an early harvest Southwest, may be upset by wet weather, floods, rains at harvest time and other drawbacks. Any decided change from present perfect crop conditions must be for the worse and a natural help to the price. There are level headed traders who think the selling of the new crop months was overdone on the 10 cent break of the past three weeks. These same traders think it dangerous to sell short even now after a moderately advanced price. There are just as many who are only waiting for the July to have a forced advance in sympathy with the May when they put our fresh lines for lower prices on the theory of great crop prospects.

Corn appeals to the public because prices are based on what the country thinks and what the country does in corn. Weeks ago we said to watch the corn raisers as they would make the market. The roads cut rates. The big corn handlers raised bids. The country held firm. There has been a liberal run of corn through Chicago to the seaboard. Export clearances have been well up towards 4 million a week. Local stocks and visible supply show but small increases from the big movement. Cash corn prices have ruled strong and gradually higher here, at Peoria, St. Louis and Kansas City. Shipping points are reporting very small country offerings. Europe is depending on this country almost entirely for supplies. Corn on ocean passage has decreased from 30 millions to 12 millions the past month. Best advices from shipping states say movement will fall off sharply after April 1.

The prices of futures touched 50c the past week. There was general profit-taking and 1 1/2c reaction in the May. Big holders, however, are confident of a higher level. There are many things in the situation to suggest that they are right.

Supplies of oats promise so abundant that even the bull forces expect to see but moderate gain in price until offerings will be very free. The Northwest claims to have 40 per cent of crop in farmer's hands. Market acts strongly only when helped by corn.

Our printing will please you.

LANSING LETTER

Doings At the Capitol as Seen by Our Correspondent

Lansing, March 20, 1905.

A delegation from Montcalm county waited upon Governor Warner one day last week, and preferred charges against the prosecuting attorney of that county for neglect of duty in failure to prosecute violations of the local option law, and asking his dismissal from office. The governor promptly referred the case to Attorney General Bird for investigation, and upon his report the governor will act. Governor Warner has shown a ready responsiveness to all demands of the duty he has assumed of executing the laws, and requiring that all officers in subordinate positions shall likewise observe the obligations resting upon them. The case of Mr. Dutcher, of the board of control for the asylum at Newberry, was a good illustration of this. There was no hesitation or delay in requiring him to vacate his office, as soon as the investigation showed that he had violated the law in profiting by contracts for supplies, though it was not shown that the state had suffered any financial loss thereby. Mr. Dutcher made the plea that he had committed no moral wrong, but only a technical violation of the law since he only charged the state the market price for the wood he sold. But Governor Warner believed that no officer could violate the law which he had taken an obligation to obey without committing a moral wrong, and showing himself unfit for the trust that had been reposed in him.

One of the seventeen joint resolutions that have been introduced at this session of the legislature proposing submission of amendments to the constitution, is one in the house, by Mr. Lord of Detroit, providing for a general incorporation law for cities and villages. It cannot be acted upon in time to be submitted to the voters at the approaching spring election; but it is highly desirable that something should be done along that line to relieve the legislature of the constantly increasing flood of special legislation, not only in charters of incorporation but in many other classes. The state of Illinois put into her constitution thirty years ago prohibition of special and local legislation of many classes, and provided general laws instead and if Mr. Lord's resolution does not include such prohibition, it should. The man who shall prepare for our state a practicable scheme of wide application for such purposes will do a great service.

A bill of considerable importance that has appeared in the past week is the drug clerks' bill, resulting from the convention of their association in Detroit lately, and intended to check the dangerous license with which poisons are dispensed, and the alarming prevalence of the drug habit by which "dope" victims are multiplying in all our cities. This is a habit more threatening than the liquor habit, more insidious, more unescapable for those once in the toils, more torturing and more deadly. Along with it may be classed the cigarette evil among boys, for which a half dozen bills have been introduced, and that of Mr. Ming, the stalwart member from Cheboygan, was adopted by the house last Thursday.

The house passed the sparrow bounty bill restoring the two-cent prize for the scalp of the saucy little alien, though it was fought vigorously in committee of the whole by Mr. Holmes of Gratiot, and others. Representative Harris of Menominee introduced a bill Wednesday, applying to the upper peninsula the same passenger rates on railroads, based upon earnings per mile, as in the lower peninsula.

Representative Wayne of Midland wants to move the state capital to Detroit, and has introduced a constitutional amendment for that purpose. The idea is not new, nor yet is it so old as Mr. Wayne will be when it goes into effect. Perhaps he has forgotten the life of toil which M. U. Reavis of St. Louis, Missouri, devoted to the removal of the national capital to the western city. Reavis kept it before the people for many years, with a large optimism, but he has now gone to his reward, and even his name is unknown to most people.

The colored people of Lansing, of which there is quite a large element, have held a meeting to consider the utterances of the history teacher in the high school who was challenged by his pupils in class for his criticism of President Roosevelt's dining Book-er Washington, and have filed with the board of education their protest against the employment of teachers in the public school who entertain such views as Professor Barer proclaimed on that occasion.

Triple Celebration

The Eastern Star ladies gave a reception last Wednesday evening at their hall, in honor of the ladies who assisted them in the minstrel show given recently, also in honor of Mrs. A. F. Ames, who will leave next week for Oshkosh, Wis. The 14th anniversary of the organization of the society was also celebrated that evening. Music was furnished by the orchestra; Mrs. Sig Desenberg sang a solo; A paper on the history of the chapter was read by Mrs. S. Scott, and the ladies who were in the minstrel show sang several of their choicest. A two course luncheon was served.

Mrs. Ames was the recipient of a beautiful ring, given her by the ladies.

Have Only 69 Reasons For New a Trial

Paw Paw, March 22.—The case of William Culver vs. the South Haven & Eastern Railroad Co., which has been tried three times in the circuit court of this county, and which has been heard once in the supreme court, has not wholly been disposed of yet.

On the first trial, the plaintiff, an employee of the company, who lost both feet while engaged in coupling cars at this place, secured a verdict for $10,000, on the second trial $15,000, and on the last trial $20,000. The company now asks that this last verdict be set aside by the court and another trial ordered. The company set forth 69 reasons why such new trial should be had. The motion was argued today and taken under advisement by the court.

"You Can Never Tell"

"My friend," solemnly observed the man with dandruff on his coat collar, "you, who think you are so wise, do you remember that not long since you vouch-safed to give me certain advice as to the conduct of my love-affairs?"

"Why sure!" exclaimed the friend. "And I venture to say you have succeeded admirably."

The man with the dandruff on his coat collar gave the other a look of ineffable contempt. "Succeeded admirably! I should say I did! Listen! You will remember that, in your superior wisdom, you told me that if I wanted to win the girl I should make love to the mother."

The friend chuckled. "And a very good idea that was, too."

"Foolish man!" exclaimed the other with a note of pity in his voice. "And you said, too, that if I could get the mother on my side, all I had to do was to hop around with a ring, and say 'When'll it be?' to the girl." The wise man nodded.

"Also" continued the first speaker, "you thought it would be a neat idea to hand the mother a compliment or two with respect to her youthful appearance, together with a jolly to the effect that the young women of the present were not at all to be compared with those of the past."

"Well, well!" impatiently interrupted the wise one, "how did it all come out? You've won the girl, I suppose."

"Yes, I have!" protested the man with dandruff on his coat collar. "You're a fine one to give advice in love affairs. The old lady has sued her husband for divorce and me for breach of promise!"—April Woman's Home Companion.

THE CHILD'S COMPLEXION.

Some Advice About the Important Matter of Keeping the Face Clean and About Freckles.

Teach your little daughter to wash her face properly and see to it that she follows your instructions faithfully. Until she is old enough to take care of her complexion as well as you can, do it for her, no matter how busy you are.

At night the face should be washed with warm water and a little castile soap and scrubbed with a towel until it glows. Take care, however, not to irritate the tender skin, which will not stand as violent scrubbing as yours will. Do not make a practice of applying any cream, as the less the young skin knows of anything but soap and water the better. In the morning only cold water should be used. This will close the pores of the skin and keep it from becoming tender and chapping. Children have a great way of wiping their faces only half dry. Do not permit this. Unless the face is thoroughly dried it will chap.

If your young beauty is marred by a mass of freckles, give time a chance. Many a freckled youngster has a beautiful skin in later years. Freckles almost invariably disappear to some extent, if not entirely. For the surface freckles that come hurriedly at the beckoning of the sun, you may use some simple remedy, but never apply one of the drastic bleaches to a child's face. If you want to peel yourself that is your own affair, but it is brutal to treat a child in this manner. The following prescription is quite powerful enough, and if it or some other as harmless does not accomplish the desired result, leave the freckles to work out their own salvation: One ounce lemon juice, one-half drachm sugar, one-quarter drachm powdered borax; bottle and keep for a few days, applying now and then.

The practice of putting veils over children's faces in the winter should be indulged in on only the coldest days. If it is done frequently the eyes may suffer. Never let your little lady wear dotted veil.

Waiting doesn't pay. If you neglect the aching back urinary trouble diabetes, surely follow. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve the backache, cure every kidney ail. Thousands endorse them.

William Sanders of 907 Court Street, St. Joseph, Mich., employed at Truscott's Boat Mfg. Co., says: "My back bothered me for the last four years constantly. There was a dull aching pain in the small of my back, at times so severe I could hardly attend to my work. I have no doubt it was caused by standing so much at my bench. I used every remedy that came to my notice and also took medicine for my kidneys when home on a visit to England, but none of them did me any good. At last my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I commenced using them. They helped after a few doses and before I had finished the box the dull pain in my back that had annoyed me so long ceased.

Are you thinking of buying an Incubator? If so, have you decided which of the hundreds of incubator manufacturers really make the best?

If you are interested, let me talk with you regarding the Cyphers. Let me prove to you that Cyphers Incubators are used by a majority of successful poultrymen. By poultrymen. I mean people who depend on poultry for their living; People who invest thousands of dollars on poultry plants, successfully hatching as high as 100,000 chicks annually and fanciers who raise exhibition stock and trust high priced eggs to incubators.

Don't you think you had better investigate this before buying?

EASTER OPENING

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Mar. 23, 24 and 25 we will hold our first EASTER OPENING DISPLAY.

We cordially invite the public to attend this showing of absolutely the latest creations in women's outer wearing apparel. All of the best European styles have been mingled with the cleverest work of the New York designers; there will not be a style nor a material of the season that cannot be found in our selections. It has been a well known fact among our customers that we have always shown the very latest effects as soon as their eastern inception; an examination of our selection during this opening will convince you that this policy is still in force.

Everything will be priced so as to be within the reach of all; so as to uphold our "Cardinal" principal, "of selling up-to-date merchandise at popular prices."

During opening week, every purchaser will receive a handsome little Chatelain memorandum as a souvenir.

His death was caused by the disease that has been epidemic in Buchanan this spring, called by some "Dutch measles" others "spotted fever." Mr. Trykall was only sick nine days. He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral was held this morning, conducted by the Odd Fellows, the deceased being a member of that order in Pullman, which lodge sent Mr. Ellis Roberts to this place to look after the funeral. The interment was made in Oak Ridge cemetery.

J. M. MacSmith, vice president and general manager of the Indiana & Southern Michigan Electric railway company, after he had secured a franchise from the Niles city council, left that city at once, with George Townsend of Indianapolis, and other officials and went over the route. On Tuesday night a conference was held at Niles with several eastern financial representatives. Mr. Townsend of Indianapolis, one of the principal electrical road builders in the country has the contract for constructing the line and putting it in readiness for operation. Under the terms of the contract he takes the company's bonds and does the work. The cost of construction from Niles to St. Joseph will be $500,000. Right of way is now being secured. The line is to be in operation January 1, 1906. The route from Niles will be through Berrien Springs.

IN MEMORIAM

GENITH HATTIE WILSON

Daughter of James and Grizzell Wilson was born in Kingstown, Rush county, Ind., Sept. 30, 1873. She lived there till womanhood when she moved to Marshall county, Ind., where she was married July 6, 1890, to John H. Fish. Eleven years ago they moved to Michigan and have resided in Berrien county.

Five children were born to them, Hazel 18 years, Mabel 10 years, Zella 6 years, Reba 3 years and Esther 1 year, all of whom with her husband, father, two brothers and two sisters live to mourn her departure.

After thirty-six days of suffering she passed from the earthly home, Wednesday 8 p. m., March 15, 1905, at the age of 31 years, 5 mo. and 15 days.

She was converted in childhood and united with the United Brethren church in Dublin, Wayne county, Ind. A faithful wife and loving mother has been taken, leaving sad and lonely hearts.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. John C. Beach at the home Friday morning March 17. The interment was near Three Oaks.

"As one whom his mother comforteth even so will I comfort you."

The "Rich" Club Dance

The dance given by the "Rich" club, at the Pears-East hall last Tuesday evening was one of the most enjoyable, and best attended dance given this winter. The dance hall was very handsomely decorated with flags, bunting and colored electric lights.

Seventy couples were in attendance and danced to their heart's content, to the sweet strains of music as rendered by Null's orchestra, of Benton Harbor. The grand march took place at nine o'clock, and as they marched around the room, each lady was presented with a carnation by Master Webster Kent, while the gentlemen were each given a dance program by Miss Winifred Andrews.

The arrangements were perfect in every detail and carried out exactly as planned. The "Rich" club is congratulating itself upon its signal success.

U. S. Corn Cure for ladies is good for men too. I travel all over the United States but have found nothing equal to it, one bottle took the soreness out of two very bad corns, and took the corns out in a few days." Mr. M. P. Fox, New York City. Price 15c or two bottles for 25c at Dr. E. S. Dodd & Son.

Under the Rose

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM,
Author of "The Strollers"

Copyright, 1903, by the Bowen-Merrill Company

"Yes, and presented your message with some misgiving."
"And did he treat it with the scant consideration you expected?"
"On the contrary, his majesty read it not once, but twice, and changed color."
"And then?"
"Whatever magic your letter contained," replied Callette, "it seemed convincing to Charles. My brother Francis must be strangely credulous to be so cozened by an impostor, quoth he, with a gleam of humor in his gaze."
"Impostor!" It was the young girl who spoke, interrupting in her surprise the troubadour's story.
"You did not know, mistress," said Callette.
"No," she answered and listened the closer.
"When I left, two messages the emperor gave me," went on the other, "one for the king, the other for you." And, taking from his doublet a document weighted with a ponderous disk, the speaker handed it to the duke's fool, who silently thrust it in his breast. "Moreover, unexpectedly, but as good fortune would have it, his majesty was even then completing preparations for a journey through France to the Netherlands, owing to unlooked for troubles in that part of his domains, and had already dispatched his envoys to the king. Charles assured me that he would still further hasten his intended visit to the Low Countries and come at once. Meanwhile his communication to the king," tapping his breast, "will at least delay the nuptials, and, with the promise of the emperor's immediate arrival, the marriage cannot occur."
"It has occurred," said the jester.
The other uttered a quick exclamation. "Then have I failed in my errand," he muttered blankly. "But the king! Had he no suspicion?"
"It was through the Countess d'Etampes the monarch was led to change the time for the festivities," spoke up Jacqueline involuntarily.
"She!" exclaimed the poet, with a gesture of half aversion. For some time they went on without further words. Then suddenly Callette drew rein.

"This news makes it the more necessary I should hasten to the king," he said. "The emperor's message—Francis should receive it at once. Here, therefore, must I leave you; or why do you not return with me?" addressing the jester. "The letter from Charles will exonerate you, and Francis will reward you in proportion to the injuries you have suffered. What say you, mistress?"
"That I will never go back," she answered briefly and looked away.
Callette's perplexity was relieved by the pleasant. "Farewell, if you must leave," said the latter. "We meet again, I trust."
"The fates willing," returned the poet. "Farewell, and good fortune go with you both." And, wheeling abruptly, he rode slowly back. The jester and the girl watched him disappear over the road they had come.

"A true friend," said the pleasant as Callette vanished in the gloom.
"You regret not returning with him, perhaps?" she observed quickly. "Honors and offices of preferment are not plentiful."
"I want none of them from Francis," he returned as they started slowly on their way.

Their horses crept along; the girl bent forward wearily; heretofore the excitement and danger had sustained her, but now the reaction from all she had endured bore down upon her. She thought of calling to the fool, of craving the rest she so needed, but a feeling of pride or constraint held her silent. Before her the shadows danced illusively, the film of brightness changed and shifted, then all glimmering and partial shade were swallowed up in a black chasm.

Riding near, the jester observed her form sway from side to side and spurred forward. In a moment he had clasped her waist, then lifted her from the saddle and held her before him.

"Jacqueline!" he cried.
She offered no resistance. Her head remained motionless on his breast. Sedulously he bent over her. The warm breath reassured him; tired nature had simply succumbed.

Gathering the young form gently to him, the jester rode slowly on, and the horse of his companion followed. So he went, he knew not how long, listening to her breathing that came full and deep, half fearing, half wondering at that relaxation. For the first time he forgot about the emperor and his purpose, the free baron and the desires of sweet vengeance. He thought only of her he held; how courageous yet alone she was in the world; how she had planned the service which won her the right to his protection; her flight from Francis—but where? To whom could she go? To whom could she turn? Unconscious she lay in his arms in that deep sleep or heavy inertia following exhaustion, her pale face against his shoulder, and as the young pleasant bent over her his heart thrilled with protecting tenderness.

And, but for him, whom else had she? This young girl, had she not become his burden of responsibility, his moral obligation? For the first time he seemed to realize how the fine tendrils of her nature had touched his; touched and clung, ever so gently, but fast.

He saw her, too, secretly and silently cherishing a new faith in her bosom amid a throng, lax and indim of purpose, and wonderment gave way to another emotion as his mind leaped from that past, with its covert, inner life, to the untrammelled moment when she had thrown off the mask in the solitude of the forest.

Afar the bell of some wanderer from the herd tinkled drowsily, arousing him from his reverie. The horses were ascending. The road emerged into a plain set with bracken and gorse, with here and there a single tree whose inclining trunk told of storms braved for many seasons. Near the highway, in the shadow of a poplar, stood a shepherd's hut apparently deserted and isolated from humankind. The fool reined the horse, which for some time had been moving painfully, and at that abrupt cessation of motion the jester looked up with a start.

Meeting his eyes, at first she did not withdraw her own. Questioningly her bewildered gaze encountered his. Then with a quick movement she released herself from his arm and sprang to the ground. He, too, immediately dismounted. She felt very wide awake now, as though the sudden consciousness of that encircling grasp or something in his glance before she slipped from him had startled away the torpor of somnolence.

"You fainted, or fell asleep, mistress," he said quietly.
"Yes, I remember, in the gorge."
"It was impossible to stop there, so I rode on. But here in this shepherd's hut we may find shelter."

And, turning the horses, he would have led them to the door, but the animals held back, then stood stock still. Striding to the hut, the jester stepped in, but quickly sprang to one side, and as he did so some creature shot out of the door and disappeared in the gloom. "A wolf!" exclaimed the pleasant.
Entering the hut once more, he struck a light. In a corner lay furze

He forgot he yet held her hand.

and firewood, and from this store he drew, heaping the combustible material on the hearth, until a cheering blaze fairly illumined the worn and dilapidated interior. Near the fireplace were a pot and kettle, whose rusted appearance bespoke long disuse, but a trencher and porridge spoon on a stool near by seemed waiting the coming of the master. A couch of straw had been the lonely shepherd's bed and later the lodgment of his enemy, the wolf.

"Here you may rest, Jacqueline, without fear of being disturbed again this night," he said.

She sank wearily upon the straw, then gave him her hand gratefully. Her face looked rosy in the reflection from the hearth. A comforting sense of warmth crept over her as she lay in front of the blaze. Her eyes were languorous with the luxury of the heat after a chilling ride. Drawing the cloak to her chin, she smiled faintly. Was it at his solicitude? He noticed how her hair swept from the saddle pillowing her head to the earth, and, sitting there on the stool, wondering perhaps at its abundance, or half dreaming, he forgot he yet held her hand. Gently she withdrew it, and he started.

"Why did you not tell me it was not a discussion with the scamp student?" she asked. "Why did you let me imagine that you?" Her eyes said the rest. "You should not have permitted me to—to think it," she reiterated.

He was silent. She closed her eyes, but in a moment her lashes uplifted. "And I should not have thought it," she said.

"Jacqueline!" he cried, starting up. She did not answer—indeed, seemed sleeping—her face turned from him.

Through the open doorway a streak of red in the east heralded the coming glory of the morn. "Peep, peep," twittered a bird on the roof of the hovel. From the poplar it was answered by a more melodious phrase, a song of welcome to the radiant dawn. A moment the jester listened, his head raised to the growing splendor of the heaven, then threw himself on the earthen floor of the hut and was at once overcome with sleep.
