A GREAT ALLIANCE.

Makes the Forepaugh-Sells Circus the World's Foremost Organization. A Mighty Spectacle.

The Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Enormous Shows are now owned by James A. Bailey and Ringling Brothers, and will appear in Benton Harbor on July 20. Excursions will be run on all railroads. This circus has always enjoyed the confidence of the public because every thing new, sensational and exclusive that circus invention produced the world over was always to be found in the enormous program offered. The hippodrome tent is the largest ever made, and will comfortably accommodate twelve thousand people. The menagerie annex is almost as big and shelters more than one hundred cages, dens and lairs of the rarest wild animals. This department of the big shows is singularly impressive because it exhibits not only more rarely seen wild creatures, but many of these specimens are to be found nowhere else in captivity. A fierce bi-horned rhinoceros, the rarest and most expensive of all wild beasts, is in this collection, as are two great fan-like eared elephants of African origin, a blood exuding hippopotamus, three herds of elephants, full grown and symmetrical types, and a nursery of baby wild animals, like kitten tigers, cub lions, quaintly hopping kangaroos, floundering seals, tight-eyed leopards, homely hyenas, and so on. All of the artists, or nearly so, in the big arena program are fresh faces to the circus patron of this country; and make their first appearance to woo American laurels under the auspices of The Great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Management. Before the circus acts proper begin a spectacle called Panama or the Portals of the Sea will be presented. This production involves more than a thousand people and is the most massive, magnificent and extravagant display of spectacular invention ever seen under canvas. Thousand and one kinds of human classes are brought into panoramic review in idealistic dress and stirring action as a mighty moving and magnificent tribute to the dedication of this American opening of the Panama Canal to the commerce of the world.

The Diamond Cure.
The latest news from Paris, is, that they have discovered a diamond cure for consumption. If you fear consumption or pneumonia, it will, however be best for you to take that great remedy mentioned by W. T. McGee, of Vanleer, Tenn. "I had a cough, for fourteen years. Nothing helped me, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which gave instant relief, and effected a permanent cure." Unequaled quick cure, for Throat and Lung Troubles. At every drug store, price 50c and $1.00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

eight years ago was recently attacked by the Pere Marquette, has been sustained by Judge Coolidge in the circuit court. The railroad company will appeal the case to the supreme court.

Two masked men early Monday attempted to hold up a U. S. express wagon carrying several thousand dollars from the Lake Shore to the E. station at Laporte. The guard was knocked senseless but the driver opened fire and the robbers fled. This is the second attempt in a short time to rob the express transfer.

Much fear is expressed by the farmers that the continued rain will stop the wheat to growing in the shock. The larger part of the wheat crop in this section has been harvested, and was in the finest kind of condition but unless the continued rains of the past week cease, the crop will be destroyed.

The Pere Marquette road is to buy a new $200,000 freight house in Chicago which, it is declared, will be the finest structure of its kind in the west. It will be 800 feet in length and from 20 to 75 feet wide, and will be located between Harrison and Polk streets, a part facing on Franklin just west of the Grand Central station. The building will be a "double decker" with an elevated driveway and tracks to be used in handling the inbound tracks and way for train will be on the ground.

Arlin Clark, day engineer at water works, received a severe electric shock this morning. He was Entertainment Course.

Last winter our citizens greatly enjoyed a course of entertainments given at the Evangelical church under the direction of Rev. J. A. Halmhuber. This year however, Rev. Halmhuber stated that it would be impossible for him to handle another course and suggested to Mr. C. E. Swem, representative of the Chicago Lyceum Bureau, that the course be given under the direction of the band.

The course that was picked out by the band is $100 higher than the one last year and is considered better in many ways, but in order to secure this course and not lose money on the deal, the band boys are securing guarantees for the sale of tickets.

If they can get the sale of 200 or more tickets guaranteed, they feel safe in taking hold of the course. So far 129 tickets have been guaranteed and the boys feel very much encouraged. If you wish to help a worthy organization, and at the same time see such high class attractions at a cheap price, put your name down.

The course will comprise five numbers as follows: Chicago Glee Club, Brush, Magician; Ross Crane, Cartoonist; H. W. Sears, Humorous; Buchanan Band Concert.

The tickets will be $1.50 for the season including reserved seats.

Any who wish to put their names down for tickets can do so by calling at the Record office.

Life Saving Crew Rescued Dr. Gowdy
Dr. F. M. Gowdy was rescued by the life saving crew late Saturday afternoon—not from chilling waters but from a G. & M. steamer bound for Chicago.

Phillip Hernberg, a passenger, had been severely injured by a falling tender while boarding the steamer and Dr. Gowdy was called to attend. The boat pulled out before the wounds were dressed and the physician found himself on an unexpected journey across the lake. Professional duties did not permit of the trip and just outside of the harbor the steamer was stopped and the life saving crew signalled. Capt. Stevens and his men came in the surf boat and brought Dr. Gowdy to shore.

People on the bluff who witnessed the performance thought that someone had been lost overboard and soon the piers were crowded with spectators.—News Palladium.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of School District No 1 fr. Held Last Night

NEW MEMBERS ELECTED

Various Amounts for the Coming Year Were Voted

The time of holding the annual school meeting was changed, by the last legislature, from the first Monday in September until the second Monday in July, and in accordance with this new law, the meeting for District No. 1 fr. Buchanan township, was held at the high school building last night.

The meeting was called to order by A. A. Worthington. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which two members of the board of education were elected to succeed A. A. Worthington and O. P. Woodworth whose time had expired.

On motion, the chair appointed C. F. Pears and Steve Arney as tellers and after they had been sworn in by Herbert Roe, a ballot was taken. The names of Chas. Bainton and H. R. Adams were presented, and when the ballot was counted it was found that 111 votes had been cast, Bainton receiving 32, Adams 68 scattering 11. Mr. Adams receiving a majority was declared elected.

For second trustee the names of Geo. B. Richards, Dr. L. E. Peck and Chas. Bainton were presented, and on ballot being taken 118 votes were cast. Richards received 58, Bainton 42, Peck 11, Worthington 1, Knight 1. Mr. Richards having received a majority was declared elected.

The Director's report was read and accepted. The following amounts were voted:

- Water supply $100
- Director's salary $100
- Treasurer's salary $50
- Library $50
- Repair fund $600

It was voted to hold 38 weeks of school the coming year.

This concluding the business to be brought before the meeting, on motion adjournment was taken.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS

New Act Goes into Effect for the State of Michigan on Jan. 1, 1905.

The McCarthy Bill "To provide for the immediate registration of births and the requiring of certificates of births" has been passed by the Michigan Legislature.

Briefly, it requires certificates of birth to be filled by attending physicians and midwives with the local registrars within ten days after birth, and local registrars are to make a monthly return of the original certificates to the State Department and a quarterly report to the county clerks. It is an up-to-date system thoroughly indorsed by the authorities of the United States Census and of all progressive registration states. If effectively executed, there is no better law for this purpose in the country and Michigan will at once come to the front among the most advanced communities in this important respect.

The law does not take effect, except for the preparation of blanks, until January 1, 1906, thus avoiding a fractional year. All registrars, physicians, midwives, and others concerned under the operation of law will be informed in regard to their duties and supplied with necessary blanks before the date on which the law takes effect. The interest and support of all the people of the state are desired in order that this law may be made a complete success from the very first day of its operation, and the Department will endeavor to co-operate with all to secure this result.

MUSCULAR CHERUB IS DEAD

Battle Creek Baby Was a Prodigy of Strength

Battle Creek, Mich., July 10.—John D. Artlip, the baby wonder at the sanitarium, is dead. This baby prodigy was pronounced by physicians to be the strongest baby in the United States, and promised to develop into a Samson. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Artlip, of West Virginia, who have been stopping at the sanitarium for the past year. The baby was a little over 18 months old. When quite young the father began to toss the baby up and down and make him go through all sorts of movements. This he kept up regularly every day. At the age of 8 months he could sustain his own weight upon a horizontal bar. He developed a wonderful grip in his fingers and hands, and became very strong in the arms and legs and back. The things that he could do were surprising. He was watched in his daily gymnastic exercises by hundreds of guests at the sanitarium who christened him "The Muscular Cherub." An air cushion was fastened to him and he was daily allowed to sport in the swimming tank, taking as naturally to the water as a young porpoise. His weight was 24 pounds. He was continually good tempered and was never sick until his death, which was caused by gastroenteritis.

State Items

Paw Paw was the first Michigan town to introduce the "home coming week." It will hold its third annual one August 9-16. The announcement of the event are sent out on postal cards having a photographic view of one of the beautiful spots of the village.

Special services were held at St. Augustine Catholic church, Kalamazoo Sunday for the crops. The rains of the last week has worked much damage to the wheat and hay and the indication are that much of one of the best crops in the history of this section of Michigan has been destroyed by rain.

John Sarsfield, a prominent cattle buyer of Emmet, was mowing Monday afternoon and did not see his 5 year old son in the long grass, until the blades of the mower had struck him and cut off one foot at the ankle and mangled the other so badly that it will have to be amputated. The boy will probably die from the shock.

Late Sunday night, at Saginaw, a Court street car was badly wrecked by a quantity of explosive on the tracks at the corner of Webster and Court streets. Only the motorman and conductor were on the car and both escaped unhurt. Today the executive board of the Citizens' Alliance met and decided to offer a reward of $100 for the arrest of the perpetrators of the outrage.

The attorney general, after making an investigation into the matters pertaining to the celebrated Kellogg sanitarium at Battle Creek, has decided that the state will join with the city in fighting for the payment by the sanitarium managers of city and state taxes. For years Dr. Kellogg has paid taxes under protest, and finally took the matter to the supreme court where he was sustained in his contention that, as a benevolent institution, the sanitarium is exempt from taxation.

The potato season closed at Northport with hundreds of thousands of bushels of the tubers remaining in the pits and warehouses, while quantities of them were sold in thousand bushel lots for 8 and 10 cents a bushel. Cottagers who arrived early secured 30 bushels for a quarter, that being the price they paid a man to haul them away. Last fall the farmers were offered 25 cents a bushel for their potato crop, but held off for higher prices, with the result that the market cornered them, instead of they cornering the market, and thousands of bushels were dumped on vacant land.

Hole in Bridge Causes Injury.

The other night a West Side lady came down town, crossing the Main street bridge. En route, she saw a large hole in the bridge, according to our informant and resolved on returning to look out for the hole. However, her efforts were unavailable and she stepped through the hole, severely bruising her ankle.

West Side people are generally wrought up about the condition of the bridge. The city's plea that there is no money to make repairs is all right they say, but one West side lady said today that if a property owner had a sidewalk as dangerous as the Main street bridge is said to be, the council would order him to build a cement walk, whether he had any money or not.

The city certainly does not want another damage suit.—Niles Sun.

VERDICT FOR $10,000

Benton Harbor Man Injured in Accident Brought Suit.

LaPorte, Ind., July 10.—A jury in the circuit court here has returned a verdict for $10,000 damages in the case of Peter S. Strange of Benton Harbor against the Pere Marquette railroad company.

Strange suffered the loss of a leg and other injuries crippling him for life at Michigan City and brought suit for $10,000. He alleged that the failure of the railroad company to light its yards at Michigan City caused him to stumble and he fell in front of a moving train.

TO MEN LOOKING FOR Blue Serge Suits

REMEMBER THIS:

We are selling blue serge suits at last season's prices—notwithstanding the rise in cost of serge. We can do this because we buy very largely for our other stores and buy of the largest manufacturers in the country.

All our blue serge suits are tailored by hand. We do not think machine made serges are worth having.

Every suit is made especially for us, and we have now suits coming almost every week. Our H. S. M. world famous, blue serge suits, look and fit like the finest, high priced, custom made suits.

Our prices are $12.50, $15.00, $18.50, $30.00 and $25.00 and we welcome a comparison of each grade with any blue serge suits you can find anywhere.

DIAMOND DIES ARE COSTLY

Valuable Mechanism for the Drawing of Fine Wire Is Found Necessary.

A comparatively unknown industrial detail is described by "The Electrical Review." According to that authority, diamonds are used quite extensively as dies for drawing wire of the smallest sizes; for instance, the sizes less than, say, 0.025 inch diameter. The hardest steel dies are not suitable for this work, for the reason that the wear upon them so enlarges the die that the diameter of the wire is not uniform within the required percentage of variation at the beginning and end of a drawing. Sapphires are also used sometimes for this work. Copper, silver and platinum are the metals usually drawn to the very small sizes. With diamond dies it is practicable to draw platinum to a diameter of five ten-thousandths of an inch. An idea of the fineness of a copper wire drawn to only three one-thousandths of an inch in diameter may be gathered from the fact that in one pound of the metal there are over six miles of such wire.

The weight of the diamonds used for this work is from four to five carats, and they are uncut except as to the die. The value of these dies, which, of course, are not of the first water, varies from $15 to $20 a carat, and several hundred thousand dollars' worth of diamonds are utilized as dies in the various wire factories of this country alone.

Skillful, however, as must be the artisans who sink these small dies and attenuated as the wires drawn through them may be, yet neither will stand comparison with the output of the spinneret of the common spider, which ejects a single thread of silk so fine that 18,000 threads are required to equal in thickness an ordinary strand of sewing silk.

The Profitable Hog.
Do not use any hogs for breeding purposes except those that show evidence in form, disposition and breed, of inclination to early maturity. Hogs are raised only for their flesh, and the fewer days it takes a pig to accumulate enough to be of marketable size, the more profitable it will be for its owner.

Smoked Mutton Legs.
Mutton legs can be cured and smoked just as pork hams are, and are found to be one of the very best kinds of meat when prepared in that way. Those who usually object to mutton when fresh cannot find any reason for complaint in smoked mutton leg.

The sporting page of the daily issues is also exceptionally popular, a self evident fact to those who have noted the general vogue of The Chicago Record Herald among sporting men,

LIVESTOCK

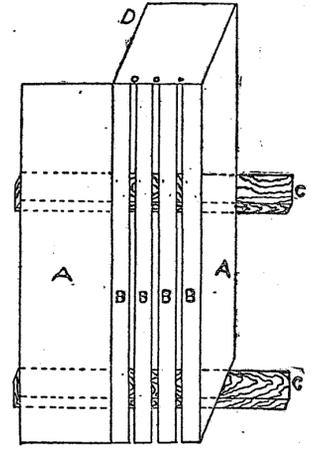

HANDY WOOL TYING BOX.

Way in Which the Wool Grower May Enhance the Value of His Product.

The selling side of farming is, in many cases, as important as the producing side. After incurring the expense of time and labor in the production of an article it is very poor policy to give so little attention to the marketing of it that its full value will not be realized. One important factor in securing the full value of an article is its appearance. There are few if any articles of exchange in which the appearance will not materially affect the price that may be obtained therefor.

While it is not proper to try to influence the appearance by such deceptive methods as putting the larger apples on the top of the barrel, the larger and riper berries on the top of the box, or the larger potatoes on the top of the load, work spent on the improvement of the appearance of the whole product is not only legitimate but is work well spent. It increases the salability of the immediate product, and creates a favorable impression regarding the character of products to be had from such a farm.

In tying the wool clip into bundles having a neat and attractive appearance a tying box is quite a convenient aid, especially to an amateur. There are different styles of tying boxes, but the following is perhaps as good as any, is very simple and easily and cheaply constructed, suggests J. J. Edgerton, in Farmers' Review. All the material needed for the construction of this box is a 16-foot dressed board 12 inches wide, two pieces of 2x4 three feet long, a few nails and four small hinges and screws to fasten them on with.

From the 16-foot board cut three pieces 4 1/2 feet long. Two of these will serve as the leaves, A A in the illustration. The other is cut into four strips, B B B B, and fastened to the 2x4 cross-pieces, C C, leaving a small crack between each two in which to place the twine. The two leaves, A A, are hinged to the two outside strips so they will open out flat or fold up against the head board, D.

This head board is made from the remainder of the 16-foot board, cutting two pieces one foot long, nailing together and fastening on top of the strips, B B, as shown in the illustration. Three holes, as shown, are bored in the lower edge of the head-board to carry the twine. A notched piece, E, can be made to hold the leaves together when they are folded up or latches can be put on the head-board for this purpose.

To use the box, set it on some empty boxes or other support of convenient height, open the leaves out flat, pass the twine through each hole in the head-board and along the corresponding space between the strips. See that the twine is down in these cracks so that the wool will not misplace it and the board is ready to receive the fleece. The fleece should be laid on the board flesh side down and lengthwise of the board.

When the fleece has been put in proper shape and the leaves are folded up the sides will be folded in and the fleece is ready to roll. Roll snugly and tie with the twine from either side; loosen the leaves, turn the fleece and tie crosswise with the center string. If the fleece has been kept in proper shape while being taken off of the sheep this will be all the string necessary to hold it in good shape.

The Bedding.

Dry, clean bedding is equally as important for the horse's best welfare as the warmer weather of spring arrives as it is during the frigid nights of winter. Standing or lying in hot, fermenting bedding not only poisons the air, but softens and weakens the walls of the hoofs, thus increasing liability of diseases of the feet.—Midland Farmer.

In Helping a Horse Up.

A horse, in getting up, puts his front feet up in front of him, raises on them and plunges forward; a cow raises on her hind feet, doubles the front feet under, raises on her knees, plunges backward. In helping a horse up pull his front feet out and help him to plunge forward.

should continue the treatment in hot weather; smaller doses and a little cool milk with it will do away with any objection which is attached to fatty products during the heated season.

LOCAL NOTES

A new porch is being built at the home of W. S. Wells.

Mrs. Mary Colvin is improving the appearance of her residence, by a fresh coat of paint.

LOST—A hatpin, with large topaz set in gun metal. Liberal reward will be given finder for return of same to Record office.

Regular Meeting of Royal Neighbors Friday evening 7:30 Report from Supreme Camp, initiation, with the introduction of some special work.

Elder William M. Roe was called to Michigan City last Saturday, to conduct the funeral services of Mrs. Eliza Clark, mother of the wife of Mr. Albert S. Wheeler, train dispatcher on the Michigan Central R. R. at whose home the services were held. Elder Roe accompanied the relatives and friends of the deceased to the Dowagiac cemetery where interment took place. Mrs. Clark was formerly a resident of Dowagiac.

Mr. Benjamin D. Davis and Miss Iva Bunker were united in marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hamilton, Sunday evening, July 9, Rev. Chas. A. Shook officiating. The Record extends hearty congratulations.

The constitutionality of the law regulating freight rates for short hauls, which, though enacted twenty eight years ago was recently attacked by the Pere Marquette, has been sustained by Judge Coolidge in the circuit court. The railroad company will appeal the case to the supreme court.

Two masked men early Monday attempted to hold up a U. S. express wagon carrying several thousand dollars from the Lake Shore to the Erie station at Laporte. The guard was knocked senseless but the driver opened fire and the robbers fled. This is the second attempt in a short time to rob the express transfer.

Much fear is expressed by the farmers that the continued rain will start the wheat to growing in the shocks. The larger part of the wheat crop in this section has been harvested, and was in the finest kind of condition, but unless the continued rains of the past week cease, the crop will be destroyed.

The Pere Marquette road is to build a new $200,000 freight house in Chicago which, it is declared, will be the finest structure of its kind in the west. It will be 800 feet in length and from 20 to 75 feet wide, and will be located between Harrison and Polk streets, a part facing on Franklin, just west of the Grand Central station. The building will be a "double decker" with an elevated driveway and tracks to be used in handling the inbound tracks and way for teams will be on the ground.

Arlin Clark, day engineer at the water works, received a severe electric shock this morning. He was cleaning one of the boilers and had taken hold of an incandescent light to hold it over so that he could look into the boiler. The light wire had become crossed with the power wire in front of the power house and as Mr. Clark, who was standing with his foot on the boiler plate, took hold of the light it formed a circuit and he received the induction from 2800 volts. He was rendered unconscious for a few minutes and fell striking his knees on an iron rod, still holding the light. This made another circuit and gave him a second shock. He was quite badly burned on the middle finger of the left hand also on his knees. Dr. Garland was called and dressed the burns. Mr. Clark is now all right but feels too much jarred up to work this afternoon.

South Bend has a larceny case with international aspects. A negro accused a Chinaman of stealing $6. The warrant was issued by a Swedish justice of the peace, was served by an American born constable, while the Chinaman will be an Irish law firm.

The M. C. R. R. Co. will run a Special Excursion train from Battle Creek to Michigan City and Chicago Sunday July 16th, passing Buchanan 8:33 and arriving at Chicago 11:45. A. M. returning will leave Chicago 7:30 for Michigan City 9:00 P. M. Fare from Buchanan to Michigan City and return 50c. Chicago $1.30.

The Maiden and the Beau Gallant

By LOUIS J. VANCE

Copyright, 1905, by S. S. McClure Co.

"Not in a thousand years," said Dorrance firmly.

"Why?"

Dorrance eyed him curiously. "I've a better plan," he said at length.

"Well?"

"I'll tell you later. For the present you stay here. I'm going to trot down to the beach and signal Hendricks. We dine aboard tonight, you and I."

"That's a mercy. At what time?"

But Dorrance was gone.

"He is just splendid, isn't he?" said Ruth.

"Dorrance? Oh, yes, he's all right. If you marry him?"

"I've promised." She hung her head in such sweet confusion that Tom Darby was more than ever envious.

"But he will not hold you to that promise."

"Indeed," she flamed defiantly, "he has the right!"

"I wish I had," said Darby. "He's a lucky dog."

Here he suddenly executed a backward leap of some several feet. Ruth had whipped out from beneath her skirts a small revolver. To Tom Darby its size approximated that of a cannon.

"Great Scott!" he cried. "You can have him. I'm not thinking of interfering. Don't!"

For a moment her surprise was only equalled by his own. Then she began to laugh convulsively.

"Take it!" she gasped. "It's—for you."

Darby was suspicious. "What for?" he inquired.

"You might need—it should uncle-Henry come. He—he would be angry." Darby approached and took the weapon gingerly.

"Is it loaded?" he asked, with trepidation.

"Of course."

"Very well, then," in resignation. He deposited it softly upon a table, convinced that at any second he might become an involuntary suicide, and retired to a distance. Ruth fled into the hallway. Darby eyed the revolver askance and swore softly, signed and lit a cigarette.

"Twilight was falling, and from behind him came stifled mirth.

Come 10 o'clock on a cool, starlit night, and the Beau Gallant was speeding westward under a full head of steam. To the north loomed the dim, low coast of Alabama.

In the saloon was assembled a motley party to a champagne supper, of which Dorrance and Tom Darby formed the only self-satisfied members, the others being plunged in deepest gloom despite all attempts to enliven them.

First, Henry Wharton, aged in years and sin, if his countenance be allowed as evidence, glowering evilly across the table at Darby, whom he had mistakenly conceived to be the moving spirit of the enterprise; then Mr. Fetter, young and weak-willed, lacking excuse for his existence, but mightily impressed with his own simulation of rakish worldliness; lastly, a pale, frightened person, a clergyman by his cloth, but deep in the clutch of a raging thirst for strong drink—these were the unwilling guests.

Mr. Wharton addressed himself to Tom Darby, who was contentedly engaging the breast of a tender chicken. Mr. Wharton shook a lean fist framed in soiled linen at him.

"I'll have the law on you!" he cried, quivering with rage. "You'll find, young man, that this is not a country where you can kidnap—yes, kidnap—peaceful citizens at your will and not suffer for it."

"I wish," said Darby calmly, "that you wouldn't wear your cuffs more than a week at a time. You spoil my appetite."

Mr. Wharton fumed, speechless. Fetter laughed.

"He's right there, pop," he said irreverently. "But don't you think you are a little lawless?" he added to Darby.

"Not at all," Dorrance interposed, smiling indulgently. "The parson will be witness that you came willingly."

The parson raised expostulating hands. "At the pistol's point," he protested very truthfully.

"I merely invited you to a stag on my wedding eve, and you came with alacrity, though I did understand that you had a pressing engagement."

The parson smiled faintly. Mr. Wharton attempted to control himself. "I'll tell you what," he said, speaking slowly and thickly. "If you'll take us back immediately I'll give you $1,000."

Dorrance laughed and shook his head.

"Fifteen hundred?"

"You ante too low," Tom Darby suggested.

"Three thousand," he snarled.

"Oh, make it worth while and I'll raise you, pop," cried Fetter.

"Five?"

"No," said Dorrance.

"Ten, then. I'll give you ten!"

Mr. Wharton's hands were trembling violently. Dorrance politely filled his glass for him. He tossed it off eagerly.

"Twenty?" he pleaded.

"Whe-ew!" Darby whistled. "I had no idea the stakes were so high."

Mr. Wharton hesitated; every moment was now of consequence. He stammered painfully.

"Fi-fifty thousand," he managed to say.

Dorrance rose and looked at his watch. "You have no security to offer but your word," he said wearily, "and that is worthless."

Mr. Wharton's jaw moved loosely, but no sounds came.

"Moreover," Dorrance continued, "I don't need your money, nor do I want it."

"I'll have the law on you," Wharton repeated sullenly. Hope was dead in his breast.

"I wouldn't if I were you. And you will not. This is rather a noisome business which you've attempted—and failed at. Your credit would suffer were it known. So you will say nothing. I'm happy to inform you that you're too late. It is 11 o'clock, and your ward will be her own mistress in one hour."

Dorrance walked to the door and gave an order. The engines began to chug more slowly, and the Beau Gallant came almost to a standstill. Mr. Wharton sputtered threats and obscenities.

"I believe you were right," said Dorrance to him. "We do not desire your company after all. Come on deck. I'll put you ashore now."

The four followed him.

"That is Mobile," he said, indicating a haze of light on the northern horizon. "There is a landing here and a fair road. By hard walking you should reach it in the early morning. Thence you can get home by noon if you're lucky. But by that time Ruth and I will be married."

"So that's your game," Fetter sneered. "I thought you didn't care for the money."

"My dear sir," said Dorrance, unmoved, "when you have associated with decent people for any length of time—if you ever do—your thoughts may be of some consequence. At present your opinion is of absolutely no moment."

"The boat is ready, sir," a man reported.

"And now, gentlemen, I thank you for the pleasure which your company has afforded me. Oh, not a word, sir—to Mr. Wharton—the obligation is entirely on my side. Good evening." He was bowing them over the side when a thought struck him. "Oh, parson, I quite forgot! We may need your services. Do not go."

So the parson stayed, most willingly, it seemed to Darby. And the Beau Gallant turned tail on the lights of Mobile, picked up her boat and steamed swiftly back over her course.

The dawn found the yacht swinging lazily at anchor. Mr. Dorrance came on deck, refreshed by a bath and a breakfast, yet with a carking doubt for a background to his thoughts. He received an immediate impression that all nature was chuckling in huge enjoyment of his predicament.

He leaned upon the rail, scowled and lit a cigar, hurling complicated oaths down at the careless sea.

Here an hour later the slothful Darby found him.

"Well," cried Darby genially, "for an expectant bridegroom?"

Dorrance favored him with a heavy glare.

"Bridegroom," he said slowly, "do eternally!"

"What! Why, but yesterday?"

"Was yesterday. Today is another matter. I'm in the devil of a fix."

"The lady hasn't sent word refusing you?" anxiously.

"No; that's just the trouble."

Darby grinned blandly at the universe.

"Romance," he propounded, "is the salt of life and its savor. Without it—"

"One escapes the holy bonds of matrimony. Tom, without exception you are the most unmitigated"—He broke off. "I'm going ashore and have over with it. Come along."

"I'll stand around oblivious at no lovers' tryst. You shall go alone."

And to this he stuck, so that the rest is only hearsay, but strongly supported by circumstantial evidence.

She was seated by the splashing fountain when he met her. She did not hear his footsteps, but sat idly dab-

bow. She was no less quick. Their hands met. He had the ring. He retained also the hand.

"Am I ever to be your debtor?" she pouted petulantly.

"I hold that which can make you my creditor forever."

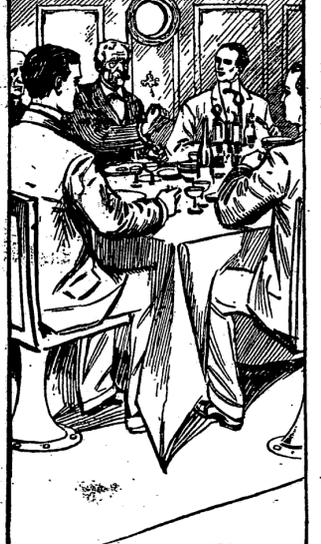

She blushed, and the day was not peer to her loveliness.

"We could never agree," she said thoughtfully. "You are so—"

"So?"

"Cannot you understand?"

He shook his head. "I am very dense.

bling her hair in the water, lost in reverie. A school of little goldfish gapping for rations swarmed to her fingertips.

"Oh!" she cried, with a rueful smile, seeing him before her.

"I've returned," he said awkwardly and lost the power of coherent thought.

"I see you have." She laughed confusedly and rose. "You—you had no trouble—were in no danger?"

"Not in the least. I"—The unavoidable grew startlingly imminent. "You have been safe, I trust?"

"Thanks to your kindness—yes." A pause; then, "I—I don't know how to thank you, Mr. Dorrance."

"Mr. Dorrance," he repeated foolishly. He rushed desperately in where both had feared to tread. "There is the way!"

"—I—of course, I!"

"Oh, then we are agreed?" Her tone was haughty as a princess.

"But I didn't mean"—she floundered. "You made your meaning plain, sir?"

"Since you feel that way about it"—He turned to go.

"Oh, one moment. I—I do not wish that you should think me ingrateful. Indeed, I am not. You have done me a great service, and"—

"And the reward?"

"But I scarcely know you."

"I haven't claimed it."

"I am sensible that I gave my word."

"But your heart?"

She sighed. "My heart remains mine."

"I knew that."

"To bestow—oh!"

She had been toying with her ring, a tiny affair studded with a single stone. It had slipped from her fingers and splashed in the fountain. Dorrance was instant to plunge his arm in to the el-

"I wish I did." The long fishes swept low upon her cheek; he tried in vain to see beneath them. "Won't you tell me?"

"Oh," she flushed impatiently, "you have never asked me. Am I to fall into your arms of my own accord, sir? You never even said you wanted me or that you—you—"

"Ruth! Ruth!" he cried, with infinite, joyful comprehension. He carried the tiny, dripping hand to his lips. "But I do love you," he pleaded tenderly. "Will you marry me?"

She was purposefully deliberative—finally:

"No," she said.

But she had tried to look him steadily in the eyes, and her own were dear traitors.

HOME-MADE HAMS.

How the Pork May Be Cured and Smoked on the Farm—A Good Sausage Recipe.

Use hams from nicely fattened spring pigs that dress about 160 pounds, or fall shotes weighing say 225 pounds. After cutting let them lie till next day and then use a strictly clean cask to put them in. Pour water enough on to cover well, then draw off the water and add good molasses till it is pleasant to drink. Dissolve in a little hot water 1 ounce saltpeter for every 20 pounds meat and add to it. Then carefully add fine salt and stir it till dissolved, and when a potato about as large as an egg will nicely float in it pour it on the meat. Keep in a cool place for 8 to 12 weeks.

Remove from the pickle and lay the rind side down for four days to dry, says Farm and Home. Hang in an open smokehouse and make a smoke of hickory or maple once or twice a day for a week, and after that once a day for 10 days. March is the best month to cure hams with smoke. If the smokehouse has some open cracks and the wind can draw through and dry them out your hams will keep in a cool, dark, dry place for one year or longer if desired. I have made them 30 years in this way with the best results.

In making sausage use nicely fattened pork, one-third fat and two-thirds lean meat. Cut in small bits, lay on a table and weigh when all cut. For every 10 pounds meat add one-quarter pound fine salt and 1 ounce of black pepper (strictly pure; better buy and grind it yourself). Then sprinkle on your meat and thoroughly mix it, then grind and mix again. Pack in tin pans and put one-quarter in lard over the meat. If preferred it may be put in cases or narrow muslin bags and smoked a little, when it will keep a long time. I have kept it packed in pans and stored in a box in our kitchen till April 1 in fine condition. Hard freezing does no harm and the longer kept so the better.

Why Heat Reddens the Face.

The effect of radiated heat on the nerves which control the small blood vessels of the skin makes the face flush. These tiny vessels, which are normally in a state of moderate contraction, under exposure to the heat relax and become distended with blood. In regard to exposure to direct heat the reddening of the skin, together with the uncomfortably warm feeling accompanying it, may be looked upon as one of the useful little "danger signals" by which we are surrounded. When from any cause a person has lost this susceptibility, as in some forms of paralysis, he may expose a limb to heat until serious injury results. The face flushes when near the fire because it is directly exposed to the rays of heat, while most of the body is protected by the clothing. Besides, the nerves of the face are particularly sensitive and the skin there is most abundantly supplied with blood vessels.—N. Y. Herald.
