SOUTH BEND CANOE CLUB

Floating Down River. Stop Here Over Night.

The canoe club of the South Bend Y. M. C. A. left that city Monday morning for a trip down the St. Joseph river to Lake Michigan. The party consisted of 26 people with 11 boats. F. A. Messler, secretary of the association, has charge of the party. The club left at 7 o'clock yesterday morning from the foot of Lafayette street. Niles was reached at noon and dinner was taken at that place. They arrived at Buchanan last night and after making the portage at the dam here, they took supper at the Cottage Hotel. They report the "Old St. Joe," the only stream on the map. Among the party are the following: Mr. F. A. Messler, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of South Bend, with Messrs E. J. Harrison, A. B. Turner, Wm. Warner, Frank Stover, Eugene Warner, Don Clark, Miller Guy, Herbert Barnard, Chas. Meader, Earl McCarty, R. W. Harris, Chas. Zanley with several high school boys.

Saved by Scrub Woman, South Bend, Ind., July 24—While the Owl gambling rooms were filled with players Saturday, a desperate attempt was made to blow up the place with dynamite.

Two sticks of the explosive, each a foot long, were placed on the stairs near the entrance door to the third floor rooms and the fuses lighted. They were discovered by a scrub woman a few minutes after the fuse had been ignited.

To her heroism every occupant of the place owes his life. Stamping out the smoking fuses, she picked up the dynamite and carried it out into the street. The authorities were immediately notified, and they took possession of the dynamite. An examination showed that each of the fuses had burned to the caps, which were defective.

The excitement among the gamblers was added to a few minutes after the finding of the two sticks of dynamite when a dangerous-looking dynamite cartridge was found in one of the rooms in which over a dozen men were assembled.

After working on the case several hours the police stated that they had no clues on which to make arrests. The theory was advanced that some one who had lost heavily in the night's play had carried the deadly explosive into the building.

Men were passing in and out of the building all morning and the police are unable to understand how the sticks could be laid on the steps without the plotter being seen.

Bather at St Joseph Drowns in Lake.

Lake Michigan claimed its first victim at St. Joseph port Sunday afternoon, when Peter Dugan, single, aged 27, lost his life while in bathing. The deceased had been in the city but about an hour, and had come from Chicago with the excursion of the North American Union, arriving at 2 o'clock.

With a party of friends Dugan donned his bathing suit at Silver Beach. In diving from a spring board into the lake his head struck bottom and his neck was broken. Death was instantaneous.

The accident occurred in the presence of 1,500 people, who were horrified at the man's sudden death. The spring board is located only a few yards from shore over four feet of water. Dugan's home is in Traverse City, where his parents reside. For the past five years he has been in Chicago, employed as a constable's clerk. The remains will be taken to Traverse City.

An Experienced Social

The Ladies of the M. E. church will give an experienced social Saturday evening, July 29, on the lawn at Mrs. D. L. Mudder's resident. Ice cream and cake will be served. Bill 10 cents. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present and hear the experiences and give an experience.

Buchanan's Popular Resort

Clear Lake is enjoying its full quota of guests this season, and the past week both resorts at the lake have been crowded.

Coney Beach has become one of the most popular resorts in this part of Michigan and every train brings guests from the city to partake of "Uncle" Pete's hospitality.

Clear Lake Farm has been the scene of considerable gaiety lately, with quiet dances among the guests, a hayrack party to town to hear the band concert, the daily swim in Clear Lake (which is certainly one of the most delightful bathing places imaginable), and impromptu games, such as suggest themselves to parties of congenial people.

The sun spot, which the weather man blames for the warm weather, has been watched with considerable interest by resorters, but at Clear Lake farm, high and dry as it is, the evening breeze which always springs up at sunset has made the nights comfortable.

Everybody who visits this popular resort admires the beautiful moonlight scene over the lake. On dark nights the excellent system of lighting at Clear Lake farm lends an air of witchery to the place, viewed from the lake or any point a little distance from the house.

The light on the great porch of the house sheds its rays through the magnificent maples that shade the place, and make a truly fairylike scene.

Among the guests at Clear Lake farm the past week from Chicago were Mrs. E. A. Valentine and son, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Boulden, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Johnson, Sr., C. A. Johnson, Jr., Mildred and Alvin Johnson, O. P. Ford, Misses Mary McNarney, Olive Gahan, Edith Neill, G. Weinrich, N. O. Neill, D. M. Drager, Nellie Bennett, Rhoda Perkins, Selma and B. Fulde, Chas. Anderson, Mrs. Chas. D. Bull, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Blair, A. J. and E. Short, D. N. Holcomb and Fred Holcomb, Ray Banbury and Ray Hollis, Harry W. Morris, Frank A. Nader, H. G. Scott, G. A. Hummel, Miss Hummel, Miss Anna Hummel, Anna Hanson, R. Archibald, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Keith and daughter Grace, Mr. and Mrs. Bremer, children and nurse, Dr. and Mrs. Detlefsen and children, Lilla A. Newton, Marie Connors; from Savanna, Mrs. E. Dupuis, Misses Ada, Marie, Marion, Jeanette and Margaret Dupuis and Edward Zimmerman Jr., from Springfield.

ALL ALONE ON FARM

Daughter of Bank President's Burned Beyond Recognition.

South Haven, Mich., July 22—Miss Lucy Monroe, daughter of C. J. Monroe, president of the First State bank here and Kalamazoo Savings bank of Kalamazoo, was found burned to death at her home yesterday afternoon, although no one was on the farm when the accident occurred. Indications point that the girl had started to burn a heap of brush, having taken an oil can along to start the fire with. After pouring the oil she had lighted a match, which not only ignited the rubbish, but also caught in her clothing.

Being frightened she fainted and burned to death. When found the features could not be recognized, the clothing being entirely burned off and the skin parched to a crisp. The community is shocked as Miss Monroe was a talented girl with brightest prospects. She had recently returned from Europe, where it is rumored she became engaged to an English lord.

FORCED TO STARVE.

B. F. Leek, of Concord, Ky., says: "For 20 years I suffered agonies, with a sore on my upper lip, so painful, sometimes, that I could not eat. After vainly trying everything else, I cured it, with Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's great for burns, cuts and wounds. At every drug store; Only 25c.

IN MEMORIAM

MARGARET RECKARD FAWCETT

Mrs. Margaret Reckard Fawcett, widow of the late Nathan Fawcett, died, this morning, at 5 o'clock, at the residence of her brother, Joseph Reckard of Front street. For the past year the deceased had grown very feeble, and although she had been under the care of a physician some time, her death was not altogether expected. She died very suddenly and the end came as the result of nervous prostration with complications.

Mrs. Fawcett had been at the Reckard home only a short time, having gone there for a brief visit while her daughter, Mrs. Esther Hovey, moved from her present residence. She had resided with her daughter at Marietta and with her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Devin, of Buchanan, Mich., having divided her time between the two places.

Mrs. Margaret Fawcett, daughter of the late Joseph Reckard, was born at Marietta, February 11th, 1829. April 12th, 1849, she was united in marriage to Nathan Fawcett, who died at St. Elmo, Col., Nov. 15th, 1896.

For a number of years the deceased had been a member of the Methodist church and was very devout in that belief. For years past she had devoted the greater part of her time to painting and fancy work, and in both of the arts she was very proficient, having been highly accomplished in oil, china and water color painting of all kinds. She gave away a great many of the articles she painted and made, and followed this so closely only because it was a great pleasure to her. She was well known and was universally liked among her acquaintances. Her death comes as a shock to her relatives as well as her many friends, and the sad event will be deeply mourned by all. She was survived by two daughters, Mrs. Esther Hovey, of Marietta, and Mrs. Fannie Devin, of Buchanan, Mich. She also leaves a brother, Joseph Reckard, of Marietta, a sister, Mrs. Harriet Amlin, of Kansas City, and a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.—Marietta Register, July 21

PIERCE GOES TO KALAMAZOO.

In Company With John DeTemple, Former Niles Man, Goes to Asylum.

Harry Pierce was brought to Niles Saturday afternoon from St. Joseph by Deputy Sheriff John DeTemple, en route to Kalamazoo, where Pierce will be placed in the asylum. Pierce looks somewhat better than he did when he was taken away, though he still has the wild look in his eyes. Conversation with him leaves no doubt that he is insane. He has been told that he is going to West Baden, and so far has come peacefully.—Niles Sun.

Popular Cartoons

The art of newspaper illustration in its present form is a development of recent years. Newspaper cartoons have become a most popular feature of up-to-date metropolitan daily papers. The unique and catchy drawing now appearing daily on the front page of The Chicago Record-Herald is one of the many special features of the great paper. The Record Herald has been fortunate in securing one of the best young artists in the country to carry out its popular policy of presenting each day a humorous and good natured cartoon.

Mr. Ralph Wilder is one of the coming men in newspaper work. His success has been as pronounced as it has been rapid. He shows all of the good natured humor and the brighter side of everyday common life which has carried his work to a very popular success. His drawings are on all of the various subjects of popular interest, political and otherwise. Current events are vividly portrayed in a way that pleases, yet often giving just criticism in a way that does not offend. Through his excellent work on eastern magazines Mr. Wilder first attracted universal attention.

SUPERIOR SERVICE

D. & B. Line Steamers Represent the Latest and Best in Marine Construction

Detailed description of the steamers Eastern States and Western States would be tedious. Possibly it may be abbreviated by saying that these new boats are not only the largest and latest but the best on any fresh water in the world. The finest hotel is not better in respect to furnishings. The rooms, sleeping comforts, ventilation and cuisine are altogether admirable on these truly palatial steamers.

The Safety Gaslight

H. S. Rough has just installed in his ice cream parlor, one of the Safety Gaslighting plants, and now has one of the best lighted places in town. The accompanying cut will give some idea of how the "safety" is regulated. The gas is formed by a single generator and conveyed in pipes to the various lamp. Skeet is very proud of his new lights and well he may be.

Because some of his fellow employed twitted him about a love affair with a girl, employed in the same factory, Simon Klyn, a young man employed by the Grand Rapids Alabastine company, attempted to commit suicide by jumping from a second story window to a pile of rocks twenty-five feet below, but a nail on the window frame caught in Klyn's trousers's leg and broke the fall. As it was he struck on his head, which was badly lacerated.

The first heavy frost that came to the upper peninsula in the month of July for the past thirty years damaged growing crops in all parts of Delta county last Thursday. In eighteen hours the temperature dropped 44 degrees. The lowest mark reached was 42 degrees at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Orson Brown, North Hickory street, Owosso, had her left foot removed at the ankle today as the result of a very rare disease known as vasomotorneuritis. Because of a contraction of the arteries and veins, the blood could not circulate in the foot, which consequently died, causing terrible pain. The foot was removed by a local surgeon.

Poftawattomie Indians to the number of 50 are earning from $3 to $4 per day picking huckleberries in a swamp south of Battle Creek. They live in wigwams and their mode of life while in camp is about as primitive as that of their ancestors. Many people visit the camp. Every Indian during the berry season carries a little bag of roots which he says is a sure cure for the bite of the massasauga.

The Truscott Boat company of St Joseph has received from the Shanghai Rowing club of Shanghai, China, the program of their spring regatta, held on June 6. The New Fire Proof Building of the Western Normal at Kalamazoo is nearly ready for occupancy and furniture is being placed for use in the fall term, which begins Tuesday, Sept. 26. The building, which cost $60,000.00, presents an imposing exterior and occupies a most commanding situation on Normal hill overlooking the entire city of Kalamazoo. The interior arrangement is a model of convenience. There are twelve recitation rooms, science laboratories, an assembly room and administrative offices. The rooms are large, well lighted and heated, and adequately ventilated.

The legislature which recently adjourned voted a special appropriation for a second $60,000.00 building. This structure will consist of a gymnasium, a large assembly room and a library and reading room. Plans are being prepared and it is the intention of the State Board of Education to have this second building ready for occupancy at the opening of the fall term in 1906.

The Professor and the Girl

By EDWIN L. SABIN

Copyright, 1905, by Edwin L. Sabin

WHAT a shout went up! Four thousand people, packing the long grand stand, swayed on tiptoe and yelled and shrieked. A great flood of old gold in ribbons and banners leaped and crinkled in the afternoon sun. In front of the grand stand ecstatically gambled, with extravagant gestures, a dozen youths clad in old gold sweaters and flaunting to the breeze old gold blankets. Above all the tumult swelled clear and triumphant the ringing cadence of a college cheer. Opposite, seventy-five yards away across the field, was another grand stand, also packed with people. But its prevailing color was a sober dark blue, and it was very, very quiet.

In the old gold amphitheater Professor Andrew Stearns Beach, M. S., had been deep in musings upon the probable progress of the new slime molds which he had carefully incubated only that noon. He hoped that no one about the laboratory had molested them, even to moving a cover the fraction of an inch. On a sudden he was disturbed by the throng around him rising en masse to its feet, by the persons immediately behind him stepping on his shoulders and knocking askew his accurately adjusted hat, by his neighbor on his left recklessly overrunning him with dusty shoes and by his neighbor on his right springing from her eminently proper position by his side to dance upon the plank seat and wave her yellow flag.

Engulfed amid this whirlpool of excitement, the professor, somewhat dazed, forced his way to the surface and inquired anxiously of his right hand neighbor:

"What has happened?"

"It's over! Yes, it's over!" she cried, but whether in answer to his query was difficult to say.

"Ah," he hazarded, "is the game over so soon? And did we beat?"

She paid not the slightest attention to him—nor did any one else—and vainly he tried to peer between the heads blocking his view of the operations going on somewhere below.

"One! Two! Three! Four! Five!" sonorously chanted the crowd in a giant's voice.

An instant of expectant silence punctured by another tremendous outbreak of applause.

"One! Two! Three! Four! Five! Six!" bellowed the old gold army, and, as if exhausted, its members sat down, carrying with them the still bewildered professor.

"Oh, wasn't that fine, though?" exclaimed the young lady whom he had ineffectually questioned, now settling herself beside him and turning to him a beaming face.

"I really am afraid that I lost track, a little," explained the professor. "My view was so obstructed by intervening bodies that—"

"Then you didn't see that splendid run?" asked the girl. "What a shame! Why, Burton got the ball in the middle of the field and just scooted with it right through the other team, and they didn't stop him till he had carried it over and made a touchdown! And Captain Thode kicked goal!"

"And this means a point for our side?" commented the professor indulgently. "I infer as much by the very evident delight which was expressed. Well, I am heartily glad, heartily glad." And he pursed together his lips and nodded in approval.

At this moment a murmur of "Oh's" and "Ah's," mingled with other signs of pity and sympathy, passed through the grand stand.

"They're helping him off the field!" ejaculated the girl. "He must be dreadfully hurt. Just look how his head wobbles. I knew he must have been hurt. That horrid man who tackled him threw him as hard as he could on purpose!"

Two striplings in old gold jerseys were assisting the valiant Burton, who had been lying where he had fallen, to a vantage place where he would not be trodden upon. They deposited him under blankets, before the amphitheater.

"Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah! Rah, rah, rah!" Burton pealed the old gold cohort—the tribute paid a hero.

"Do you think he's very badly injured?" implored the girl of the professor, while watching with fascination the trainer kneeling over his latest charge.

"No, indeed," assured the professor out of his vast knowledge. "Football players are inured to knocks and wrenches. It is truly marvelous the amount of roughness they can endure."

A huge bunch of yellow chrysanthemums was handed over the railing of the grand stand and borne to the recumbent fullback, who revived enough to wave the flowers feebly, showing that the spirit was willing although, for the time being, the flesh was weak.

"There!" said the girl, with a sigh of relief. Then in the center of the field a whistle sounded, and the game went on.

Now Professor Beach was free to resume that disconcerted train of thought regarding his slime molds. Naturally one would imagine that he would be thinking, if not of the easily absorbing struggling upon the gridiron, at least of his companion, for her name was Delphine Gray, and he was going to make it Delphine Beach. He had not yet told her of his design. That would be arrived at in due order. The professor was the living embodiment of method.

A little man physically was Professor Andrew Stearns Beach, M. S., assistant to the chair of botany at the university; a little man—unassuming, important and the pink of precision. When he had resolved upon matrimony and had selected Miss Delphine Gray, he had not lightly come to this decision. But it had seemed only fitting and proper that an instructor of young men and women should be married. With that in mind he had noted Delphine among those attending a series of lectures by him for graduates and advanced students. She was, so far as he could observe, perfectly neat; she appeared to have depth, putting to him questions which indicated in a flattering degree that she recognized and appreciated his remarkable erudition; she lived in the town, and her family was good, which would make his position upon the faculty more secure and by influence might likewise aid him some day to be the president. Finally he concluded that Delphine, with whatever post-nuptial conformity his standards might require, would fill the bill very nicely.

In a letter to his sister he announced his intentions. His sister, a New England spinster, who looked upon her brother as rather more than a god, read the announcement with a sense of awe at the immensity of the future in store for one unsuspecting girl. She wrote back immediately, beseeching her brother to be careful, and before committing himself to be sure that Miss Gray would be sensible of her high station.

The professor, having scrutinized Delphine under his microscope, discovering nothing to deter him, pursued a decorous campaign. He escorted her to the weekly meetings of the University Science club; at receptions he made a point of favoring her with a few polite little attentions, and at the dances which it was necessary that he grace he always solemnly whirled her twice around the room—himself being an execrable performer, having no idea of tune or time. He took her to an occasional athletic contest, although in his college days he had not "gone in" for athletics and indeed could not even now correctly differentiate tennis from football. And once a week he called at the Gray house to conduct a formal conversation, with Delphine alone or with the family in general—it mattered not.

The one thorn in the professor's flesh was Burton—the Burton at this moment lying on the side lines in front of the amphitheater and hugging a mass of yellow chrysanthemums while he watched his fellows strive to avenge his retirement by scoring another touchdown.

Burton was constantly interfering with the professor. Burton was so often about the Gray premises when the professor arrived for his regulation call. Burton lounged around in such an unconventional manner and threw into the exchanges of ideas unwarranted remarks which were wholly illogical and which interrupted the current of thought and produced distracting merriment. Burton it was who waited and twosteped with Miss Gray until she was fairly gasping and was fain to plead fatigue when the professor offered himself for the two precise circuits of the hall. Burton it was who daringly "stabbed" his way through the botany course and did it so cleverly that the professor vainly would corner him. And Burton it was who gained the distinction of a mention in one of the professor's letters to the spinster sister.

"I still am favorably impressed with Miss Gray," the professor wrote. "I note that a Mr. Burton, a senior in the College of Liberal Arts and popular as an athlete is disposed to show her some attention. I have no apprehensions; nevertheless, maybe I ought to assert myself soon and thus possibly save him disappointment and her embarrassment and pain."

"If it seems best, then do so by all means, my dear brother," answered the sister. "Has Miss Gray ever read your master's thesis? That would present you in your true light as a scholar and could not fail to arouse her respectful admiration. It would nip short any tendency to waver between brain and mere brawn."

Obedient to the suggestion the professor safeguarded Delphine against the "T" on the breast of Burton's old gold sweater with his master's degree thesis, entitled "A Few Physiological Problems Afforded by the Rhabdites of Leontodes Taraxacum." Delphine returned the document with so many avowals of pleasure in its perusal that the professor determined he could treat

Burton with pitying forbearance.

The football game ended six to nothing. At the close a turbulent tide of old gold swept down, across the field and out of the big gateway, and higher perched on its crest rode Fullback Burton.

Professor Beach, detaining his companion in the amphitheater until passage should be clear—he detested crowds—gazed on the scene with tolerant patronage.

The main injury to the fullback was heralded through university circles as a wrenched tendon of the leg, and, serious or not, it kept the doughty player out of classes. On the Monday after the game Professor Beach marked that Burton's chair in Section A, senior botany, was empty, and on Tuesday the vacancy still prevailed.

Possibly it was just as well to have out of the way temporarily a man about whom hangs the glamour of a sixty yards run for the only touchdown. However, Delphine, too, was absent from her section.

This complicated matters. The casual inquiries which he made of her acquaintances brought no definite information, and the professor experienced a vague worry. She must be ill. Doubtless her temperament was of that finely harmonized organism which cannot endure the knowledge of suffering, and the sight of Burton wrabbling to his blankets had acted disastrously upon her nerves—that wretched Burton!

Tuesday passing and no Delphine, at 8 in the evening Professor Beach sallied forth upon the benevolent mission of ascertaining why. The mail who answered his ring seated him in the parlor and left him there, among the bric-a-brac while she went to tell his presence. Thus abandoned to his own devices, the professor suddenly was aware of a faint, half familiar, yet indefinable odor—fume, essence, the barest trace—upon the air. He sniffed and knitted his brows in perplexity. Ah, he had it! Certainly! Very laudable in her too.

After a little delay Delphine entered, through the portieres, from the adjoining sitting room and greeted him with just a shade of confusion in her manner and just a tinge of heightened color on her cheek.

"I observed your absence from class," said the professor, plunging, as soon as the opening civilities had been consummated, into his subject. "I trust that the game had no unfortunate effect upon you."

"Not at all, thank you," replied Delphine. "I should say not—when we beat! But some matters came up—at home—which have kept me away from recitations."

"I perceive, though, that you have been doing laboratory work, notwithstanding," asserted the professor sagely sniffing. "Mounting slides, I presume? I am glad to find you taking such an interest in your work."

"Now, I want to know what on earth makes you think that?" challenged the girl in laughing astonishment.

"Well, candidly, I—I catch the odor," explained the professor.

"I'm afraid that stuff you noticed and thought came from mounting slides or something of that kind is only a rub I'm using on my leg," volunteered Burton. "I've been staying here at the Grays' since I was laid up, though I told Delphine the house would get full of the odor and smell like a laboratory."

"The similarity is remarkable—very remarkable," stammered the professor. "However, I—I now can perceive the difference. Ah, a distinct difference!"

Fumbling for his hat on the floor beside his chair, he hastily arose. "I will bid you both good evening. I—ah—merely dropped in on my way past, fearing that Miss Gray might be detained from her classes by illness. Good evening, good evening."

"And he didn't congratulate us!" laughed Delphine to her fiance as the footsteps of the late caller echoed down the front walk.

Warning the Meeting House.
Clarence King, the geologist, on a visit to Georgia during very cold weather attended a religious meeting of a colored congregation in a large and frigid meeting house without any heating facilities. Mr. King took an active part in the proceedings, writes Mr. Hague in "Clarence King Memoirs," and promised the shivering congregation the biggest stove he could find in Dahlonega.

He kept his word, and a large four foot stove, with ample lengths of circumflecting stovepipe, sufficient to carry warmth to every part of the room, was soon installed in the meeting house.

Two or three years later Mr. King again had occasion to visit the neighborhood. As he journeyed from the railway station he talked with the driver of the conveyance, a white man, concerning matters of local interest and inquired especially about the colored church and whether the stove he had sent was still doing well.

"Are you the man that sent that stove down here?" inquired the driver somewhat reproachfully. "Doing well!" he continued. "I should say so! There ain't a fence rail left in this neighborhood within two miles of that meetin' house!"

James "Billed" the Market.
A proud mother tells the following story of her hopeful young son of seven: "James has always had an eye to a bit of money making wherever possible. The other day I was called from home rather suddenly and, being obliged to leave the baby asleep in her cradle, told James that he must keep watch over little sister and promised him 10 cents for his trouble. When I reached my husband's office, where James knew I was to stop, I found a telephone message awaiting me. My young financier wanted me to call him up, which I did. He wanted to know whether I didn't think his job worth a quarter if the baby should wake up. I knew the baby pretty well and felt safe in agreeing to this demand, for she always slept the morning through. Before I hung up the receiver, however, what was my amazement to hear James screaming at the poor little darling:

"Wake up! Wake up, kid! Buddy's going to 'ruse you!"

Knew His Business.
A merchant whose daughter had married a man with whom it proved she could not get on very well was much surprised some weeks later to see the young lady return home again with all her belongings.

The old man listened very attentively to her story and then went to his desk and wrote a note to his son-in-law, which he gave to his daughter, assuring her that her husband would receive her kindly after this.

The pair on reading the letter found in it the following notice:

Dear Sir—Goods that have been selected of one's own free will at my establishment are not taken back again.

The young couple laughed heartily and were reconciled.
