ANOTHER JUNE WEDDING

Miss Flossie Metz is Wed to Walter Sherwood of New Carlisle.

A very pretty wedding took place, Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Metz, when their daughter, Miss Flossie was made the happy bride of Mr. Walter Sherwood of New Carlisle.

The parlor was artistically decorated with ferns, palms and flowers. The wedding ceremony took place under a pretty arch made of flowers and myrtle, from which was suspended a large wedding bell.

Miss Hilda Goodlet, of Chicago, was the bridesmaid, and Mr. Walter Metz, the only brother of the bride, acted as best man. At 8:30 the bridal party marched into the parlor to the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Nettie Scott. Rev. Barnhart of New Carlisle, Ind., performed the simple but impressive ceremony which made them one.

The guests were then invited into the dining room, which was prettily decorated in pink and white, and lighted with Japanese lanterns, where they were served with a wedding supper.

The bride wore a beautiful dress of light blue silk and carried white carnations. The bridesmaid's dress was of light organdie, and she also carried white carnations, while the groom and best man wore the customary black.

Many beautiful presents were received, including china, cut-glass and silver.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Moore and Mrs. Spooner and son of Dowagiac, Mr. and Mrs. L. Sherwood of New Carlisle and Miss Gena Simonson of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood left Monday for New Carlisle, where they will make their future home.

All their friends wish them a long and happy life.

Press Notice For July Designer.

The Designer for July is divided between midsummer fashions and patriotism. Catering to the first mentioned is a generous supply of up-to-date designs for warm-weather apparel and millinery, also two special articles on "Attractive Waists of Thin Material," and "Sunbonnets and Shadefats." Appropriate for the "Glorious Fourth" are "A Fire-Cracker Drill" for small boys, "A Little Feast for the Fourth," containing recipes of value to the house keeper, and two short stories, "The God in the Car," and "A Box of Fire-Works." All mothers will appreciate "An Outdoor Baby" with its charming illustrations, which advocates letting the wee folk get as close to nature as possible. "Bath-House Keeping" is given as a money-making occupation for women by Bertha Hasbrook, and "Our American Daughters" comes to a happy conclusion. In this number of The Designer are given the opening chapters of a droll continued story of country life, "The Village Improvement Society," by Della Lutz. Lessons in Dressmaking, Hat Making, Shadow and Coronation Embroidery and Drawnwork are made lucid by clear instruction and many illustrations. The department of Vacation Suggestions is continued, and is proving of great value to those contemplating short or lengthy holidays. Two pages of illustrations shows how the little folks of city slums contrive to get fun out of the heated term. "The Mother's Advisory Club," "Foriculture," "For Lovely Woman," "What Women Are Doing," "Helps Along the Way," and "Etiquette Chat" are filled with timely and valuable suggestions.

NO CIRCUS FOR INMATES

Convicts at State Penitentiary
Very Angry at the Warden

Jackson, June 9.—Hoots and yells from the convicts broke forth in such volume that they could be heard without the prison walls when the announcement was made that circuses no longer will be permitted to give performances for the entertainment of the inmates. Some of those in the cells rattled the bars, and the indignation manifested was the greatest known there for a long time. When Warden Armstrong heard of it he had the convicts brought into the chapel, where he admonished them.

"You are brought here," said he, "for instruction and discipline. Any amusement which you get will be given only because you have earned it. If there is another outcry such as has just occurred all your privileges will be taken away."

CHANGES HANDS

Climax Cigar Store Passes to Oppenheimer Cigar Co., With Chas. Broceus as Local Manager

The Climax cigar store, located at No. 3 East Main street, and conducted for several years past by William H. Routier, has been sold to the Oppenheimer Cigar Company, one of the largest cigar and tobacco firms in the state, with headquarters at Saginaw. Charles Broceus, who has been connected with the wholesale grocery house of Hallsday & Son, as their city salesman for over ten years, has resigned from that position and accepted the position as local manager for the Oppenheimer company. The present store will be entirely remodeled, interior as well as exterior. A handsome new plate glass front will be installed, while an expensive steel ceiling and other artistic decorations, will give the inside a decidedly handsome appearance. The barber shop which is located in the rear of the store will be removed to some other location, while the shoe shining parlor will be transferred to the basement under the store.

This store will be the headquarters for the supplying of their trade in this part of the state, by this large jobbing house.

The new manager Mr. Broceus, is one of the city's best known young businessmen and the fact that his services have been secured by the new firm bespeaks the fact that their local interests will be well looked after. The store opened this morning under its new management, but the work of remodeling and installing new furniture and fixtures will be commenced within a few days.

The store will henceforth be known as the Oppenheimer Cigar store. Mr. Routier, the former proprietor, will devote his entire time and attention to the conduct of his auction and commission business, with F. A. Allen—Battle Creek Daily Journal.

Come and Gone

The carnival has come and gone, and the citizens and merchants are as well pleased. On Saturday the closing day, our streets were thronged with a crowd of merry-makers, each anxious to enjoy the closing event.

The carnival company has met with hard luck since they started out, and to put the finishing touches on all, Frank Pilbeam, the manager, after collecting from various places in town, took his departure to unknown quarters, leaving numerous debts all over town. He also left the members of the company in debt, and almost stranded. Mr. Pilbeam has acted in a shameful manner, and has no sympathy from any of the Buchanan citizens.

The Band Boys, under whose auspices the carnival company came here, are not out anything, but netted a small amount.

FIGHT IS DETERMINED

Hamilton Statehood Bill is Being Warmly Contested

SENATOR FORAKER SAYS IT

Is a Political Trick and Denounces the Referendum Proposition.

Washington, June 9.—One of the most determined fights of this congress is now in progress between the administration forces and the insurgents of the senate over the Hamilton statehood bill.

This bill was reported a few days ago by the conferees to the two houses of congress on the basis of admitting Indian Territory and Oklahoma as one state and allowing Arizona and New Mexico to take a referendum on the question of whether they would jointly become a state at the same time that they voted on the election of state, county and legislative officers, the election to occur on Nov. 6 next.

The senate insurgents, led by Senator Foraker denounce this as a political trick to get all the candidates for office out for statehood on the day the general election is held, and they charge the senate conferees with being traitors to the senate in agreeing to any such compromise.

On the other hand the supporters of the president say the territorial officers will also be nominated and voted for at the same election, in order that the two territories may not be without officers in case joint statehood is defeated, and that therefore the time of the referendum is exactly right, as it will bring out the full vote of both territories, to pass upon the important question of statehood, something that would not be possible at a special election held for the sole purpose of passing upon the statehood referendum alone.

The issue is so important that the administration side of it has been taken out of Senator Beveridge's hands, as it was not felt that he could collect and hold the full administration strength, and turned over to Senator Aldrich. At the present time the two forces in the senate are engaged in lining up their men and in trying to make converts, a game in which the White House is taking as active a part as has been the case in anything that has been up in years.

The administration side claim to have a majority of two or three in the senate at this time and believe that if the question of agreeing to this conference report were to come to a vote in the senate at once they would win and the report be concurred in. They believe that the insurgents do not dare to come to a vote just now, but are holding back in the hope that when the senator from Kansas comes along they may be able to corral him and likewise Senator Gorman's successor may be appointed in time to help them out and vote to non-concur.

In this fight both Michigan senators are against the president. But the whole thing hinges on the action of the senate. If the senate votes to non-concur—the senate having under rules to vote first—the house will undoubtedly coincide, (although the administration would not concede this) and the battle be ended right there. If, on the contrary, the president wins and the senate concurs, the house can be counted upon to also coincide with that, this peculiar attitude of the house being due to the desire to make a state out of Oklahoma and Indian Territory at this session because of the effect it may have upon the congressional election in the states bordering upon the proposed new state.

VALUE OF A GOOD GARDEN

A Word of Advice as to Devoting Small Patch on Farm to Raising Vegetables.

Many people fail to realize the great value of a thrifty, well kept garden. Even an inferior one is much better than none. Vegetables are indispensable to a family, so far as health is concerned to say nothing of the money saved by not having to buy too much flour and so many groceries.

It would seem that every man should manage to obtain a piece of ground and see that it became well fertilized and enriched and then put under a thorough state of cultivation before trying to plant the seeds. It only costs a little to buy enough seeds for quite a good sized garden.

Radishes and early onions may be made to grow in such a way as to keep the table well supplied nearly the whole season, and, when taken fresh and crisp from the garden, they have proved to be a fine aid to digestion. Radishes soon grow too strong and pithy, and are not fit to use on the table. To be good they must be planted in rich and well prepared soil. My way of having a continual supply, explains a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer, is to get two packages of radish seed, one of the small turnip-shaped kind, the other of the long kind, that are not quite so early, both of the red variety. I then plant one third of each package. This amount is for a small family, but where there is a large family it will be necessary to plant more.

When the early, little round radishes are about gone, plant again about a third from each paper. By the time the third planting has been nearly used other vegetables have come on and are taking their places. The ground, however, should be cleared by removing all the waste ones. I have found that hogs relish these left-over radishes very much.

Less and Less.

Stylish Hats

There is no article of apparel which counts so much in a man's appearance as his hat, and it is remarkable to notice the number of men wearing stylish well fitting clothes and unbecoming hats. This is usually not the fault of the man, as he tries to get a hat that will look well on him, but rather because he can't find the shape or style he wants. Adlers hat section offers every popular shape in all proportions, in both stiff and soft hats. You might think it would hardly pay you to go from Buchanan to South Bend for a hat but when you know you can get just the shape and style you want in a hat which we absolutely guarantee as to wear, then it will certainly pay you.

FERTILIZERS FOR TOMATO.

Better Results Obtained Sometimes from Commercial Fertilizers.

Of all the crops grown by the market gardener none is more generally used than the tomato. It is a crop that may be quite generally grown on nearly all soils, the commercial production from soils varying all the way from light sand to heavy clay, although the loam is undoubtedly the best adapted. In the case of light, sandy soils, the irrigation must be practiced to a greater or less extent. The main feature of profitable culture of the tomato is the maintenance of a rapid steady growth. The crop is a large user of water, and if a heavy crop is to be obtained, this drinking habit of the plant must be liberally met. The plant is also a heavy feeder. Its yield is not infrequently upward of ten tons of fruit per acre.

Farmyard manure may be used on this crop when grown for canning purposes, but in a long-continued stretch of warm weather, especially in western states, there is danger of drying out of the soil on account of the large amount of vegetable matter incorporated with the soil. The better plan is to substitute for this nitrate of soda, accompanied by the necessary mineral foods, potash and phosphoric acid. As much as 200 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda can often be used at a profit upon this crop as soon as the plants are well rooted, the fertilizer being well worked into the soil. Previous to planting, the other ingredients may be used to the extent of 400 pounds of superphosphate and 150 pounds of sulphate of potash. Such a mixture has not only a favorable action in increasing the yield, but also adds to flavor and color of the fruit.

SHORT CUTS ACROSS LOTS

venient places a length of board fence which can be arranged as here shown. The device is inexpensive and constructed in very little time, yet may save a great many steps in the course of a season.

HOME-MADE COAL HOD.

How a Grocery Box May Be Made to Do as Good Service as a Store Hod.

The cut shows a grocery box fitted with a hoop handle, and two sloping inside partitions, which will give great satisfaction as a coal hod, since the sloping sides permit the coal to be shoveled up readily, as the shovel can always be run under the coal along the sloping boards.

She laid her face against her mother's breast and sobbed. "My poor child, what is it?" the elder lady asked. "Has Reginald been cruel to you?"

"No, mamma," the bride replied, "it is not that. It is all on account of a terrible discovery."

"Ah," the fond mother exclaimed, "then he did not tell you before it was too late! Oh, my poor child! Oh, the monster! There's a dark page in his life! Ah, how can a man be so base?"

"He found the photograph of me sitting in a basin," the stricken one interrupted, "that you had taken for a baby food advertisement!"

—THE— MAN ON THE BOX

The distance between the two horses began slowly to lessen, and Warburton understood, in a nebulous way, what the girl had meant when she said that Dick could outrun Pirate. If Pirate kept to the road, Dick would bring him down; but if Pirate took it into his head to vault a fence! Warburton shuddered. Faster, faster, over this roll of earth, clattering across this bridge, around this curve and that angle. Once the sight of a team drawing a huge grain-wagon sent a shiver to Warburton's heart. But they thundered past with a foot to spare. The old negro on the seat stared after them, his ebony face drawn with wonder and the whites of his eyes showing. Foot by foot, yard by yard, the space lessened, till Dick's nose was within three feet of Pirate's flowing tail. Warburton fairly lifted Dick along with his knees. I only wish I could describe the race as my jehu told it to me. The description held me by the throat. I could see the flashing by of trees and houses and fields; the scampering of picanninies across the road; the horses from the meadows dashing up to the fences and whinnying; the fine stone and dust which Pirate's rattling heels threw into my jehu's face and eyes; the old pain throbbing anew in his leg. And when he finally drew alongside the black brute and saw the white, set face of the girl he loved. I can imagine no greater moment but one in his life. There was no fear on her face, but there was appeal in her eyes as she half turned her head. He leaned across the intervening space and slid his arm around her waist. The two horses came together and twisted his leg cruelly. His jaws snapped.

"Let the stirrup go!" he cried. "Let go, quick!" She heard him. "Your knee from the horn! I can't keep them together any longer. Now!"

Brave and plucky and cool she was. She obeyed him instantly. There was a mighty heave, a terrible straining of the back and the knees, and Pirate was freed of his precious burden. The hardest part of it came now. Dick could not be made to slow down abruptly. He wanted to keep right on after his rival. So, between holding the girl with his right arm and pulling the horse with his left, Warburton saw that he could keep up this terrible effort but a very short time. Her arms were convulsively wound around his neck, and this added to the strain. Not a word did she say; her eyes were closed, as if she expected any moment to be dashed to the earth.

But Dick was only a mortal horse. The fierce run and the double burden began to tell, and shortly his head came up. Warburton stopped him. The girl slid to the ground, and in a moment he was at her side. And just in time. The reaction was too much for her. Dazedly she brushed her hair from her eyes, stared wildly at Warburton and fainted. He did not catch her with that graceful precision which on the stage is so familiar to us. No. He was lucky to snatch one of her arms, thus preventing her head from striking the road. He dragged her to the side of the highway and rested her head on his shaking knees. Things grew dark for a time. To tell the truth, he himself was very close to that feminine weakness which the old fellows, in their rough and ready plays, used to call "vapours." But he forced his heart to steady itself.

And what do you suppose the rascal did—with nobody but Dick to watch him? Why, he did what any healthy young man in love would have done; pressed his lips to the girl's hair, his eyes filling and half a sob in his parched throat. He dolefully pictured himself a modern Antiochus, dying of love and never confessing it. Then he kissed her hair again; only her hair, for somehow he felt that her lips were as yet inviolable to his touch.

Fainting is but transitory; by and by she opened her eyes and stared vaguely into the face above her. I do not know what she saw there; whatever it was caused her to struggle to her feet. There was color enough in her cheeks now; and there was a question, too, in her eyes. Of Warburton it asked. "What did you do when I lay there unconscious?" I'm afraid there was color in his face, too. Her gaze immediately roved up the road. There was no Pirate, only a haze of dust. Doubtless he was still going it, delighted over the trouble he had managed to bring about. Warburton knelt at the girl's side and brushed the dust from her skirt. She eyed him curiously. I shan't say that she smiled; I don't know, for I wasn't there.

Meanwhile she made several futile attempts to put up her hair, and as a finality she braided it and let it hang down her back. Suddenly and unaccountably she grew angry—angry at herself, at James, at the rascally horse that had brought her to this pass. Warburton saw something of this emotion in her eyes, and to avoid the storm he walked over to Dick, picked up the reins, and led him back.

"If you will mount Dick, Miss," he said, "I'll lead him home. It's about five miles, I should say."

The futility and absurdity of her anger aroused her sense of the ridiculous; and a smile, warm and merry, flashed over her stained face. It surprised her groom.

"Thank you, James. You were right. I ought not to have ridden Pirate. I am punished for my conceit. Five miles? It will be a long walk."

"I shan't mind it in the least," replied James, inordinately happy; and he helped her to the saddle and adjusted the left stirrup.

So the journey home began. Strangely enough, neither seemed to care particularly what had or might become of Pirate. He disappeared, mentally and physically. One thing dampened the journey for Warburton. His "game leg" ached cruelly, and after the second mile (which was traversed without speech from either of them), he fell into a slight limp. From her seat above and behind him, she saw this limp.

"You have hurt yourself?" she asked gently.

"Not to-day, Miss."—briefly.

"When he ran away with you?"

"No. It's an old trouble."

"While you were a soldier?"

"Yes."

"How?"

He turned in surprise. All these questions were rather unusual. Nevertheless he answered her, and truthfully.

"I was shot in the leg by a drunken Indian."

"While on duty?"

"Yes." Unconsciously he was forgetting to add "Miss", which was the patent of his servility. And I don't think that just then she noticed this subtraction from the respect due her.

It was eleven o'clock when they arrived at the gates. She dismounted alone. Warburton was visibly done up.

"Any orders for this afternoon, Miss?"

"I shall want the victoria at three. I have some shopping to do and a call to make. Send William after Pirate. I am very grateful for what you have done."

He made no reply, for he saw her father coming down the steps.

"Betty," said the colonel, pale and worried, "have you been riding Pirate? Where he is, and what in the world has happened?"—noting the dust on her habit and her tangled hair.

She explained. She told the story rather coolly Warburton thought, but she left out no detail.

"You have James to thank for my safety, father. He was very calm and clear-headed."

Calm and clear-headed! thought Warburton.

The girl then entered the house, humming. Most women would have got out the lavender salts and lain down the rest of the day, considering the routine of a fashionable dinner, which was the chief duty of the evening.

"I am grateful to you, James. My daughter is directly in your care when she rides, and I give you full authority. Never permit her to mount any horse but her own. She is all I have, and if anything should happen to her—"

"Yes, sir; I understand."

The colonel followed his daughter; and Warburton led Dick to the stables, gave orders to William, and flung himself down on his cot. He was dead tired. And the hour he had dreaded had come! He had to drive her through the shopping district. Well, so be it. If any one exposed him, very good. This groom business was decidedly like work. And there was that confounded dinner-party, and he would have to limp around a table and carry soup plates! And as likely as not he would run into the very last person he expected to see.

Which he did.

CHAPTER XIV. AN ORDEAL OR TWO.

Mr. Robert vows that he will never forgive me for the ten minutes' agony which I gratuitously added to his measure. It came about in this wise. I was on my way down Seventeenth street that afternoon, and it was in front of a fashionable apartment house that I met him. He was seated on his box, the whip at the proper angle and his eyes riveted on his pair's ears. It was the first time I had seen him since the day of the episode at the police-station. He was growing thin. He did not see me, and he did not even notice me till I stopped and the sounds of my heels on the walk ceased. Arms akimbo, I surveyed him.

"Well!" I began. I admit that the smile I offered him was a deal like that which a cat offers a cornered mouse.

He turned his head. I shall not repeat the word he muttered. It was very improper, though they often refer to it in the Sabbath-schools, always in a hushed breath, however, as though to full-voice it would only fan the flames still higher.

"What have you to say for yourself?" I went on.

"Nothing for myself, but for you, move on and let me alone, or when I get the opportunity, Chuck, I'll punch your head, glasses or no glasses."

"Brother-in-law or no brother-in-law."

"Chuck, will you go on?"—hoarsely, "I mean it."

I saw that he did. "You don't look very happy for a man who has cracked so tremendous a joke."

"Will you go along?"

"Not till I get good and ready, James. I've told too many lies on your account already not to make myself a present of this joyful reunion. Has Miss Annesley any idea of the imposture?"

He did not answer.

"How did you like waiting in Scott Circle the other night?"

Still no answer. I have half an idea that he was making ready to leap from his box. He ran his fingers up and down the lines. I could see that he was mad through and through; but I enjoyed the scene nevertheless. He deserved a little roasting on the gridiron.

"I am given to understand," I continued, "that you act as butler, besides, and pass soup around the table."

Silence. Then I heard a door close, and saw a look of despair grow on his face. I turned and saw Miss Annesley and Mrs. Chadwick coming down the steps.

"Why, how do you do, Mr. Henderson? Mrs. Chadwick."

"I have already had the pleasure of meeting this famous young orator," purred Mrs. Chadwick, giving me her hand. She was a fashionable, not to say brilliant, intrigante. I knew her to have been concerned indirectly with half a dozen big lobby schemes. She was rather wealthy. But she was seen everywhere, and everywhere was admired. She was as completely at home abroad as here in Washington. She was a widow, perhaps 38, handsome and fascinating, a delightful raconteur, and had the remarkable reputation of never indulging in scandal. She was the repository of more secrets than I should care to discover.

I recall one night at a state function when she sat between the French ambassador and that wily Chinaman, Li Hung Chang. She discoursed on wines in French with the ambassador and immediately turned to the Chinaman and recited Confucius in the original Chinese.

Not until recently did I learn that at one time Karloff had been very attentive to her.

"Where are you bound?" asked Miss Annesley.

"I am on the way to the war department."

"Plenty of room; jump in and we shall drop you there. James, drive to the war department."

Ordinarily I should have declined, as I generally prefer to walk; but in this instance it would be superfluous to say that I was delighted to accept the invitation. I secretly hugged myself as I thought of the driver.

"How is Miss Warburton?" asked Miss Annesley, as she settled back among the cushions.

"Beautiful as ever," I replied, smiling happily.

"You must meet Miss Warburton, Grace,"—speaking to Mrs. Chadwick, who looked at me with polite inquiry. "One of the most charming girls in the land, and as good as she is beautiful. Mr. Henderson is the most fortunate of young men."

"So I admit. She was greatly disappointed that you did not meet her younger brother." First shot at the groom.

"I did expect to meet him, but I understand that he has gone on a hunting expedition. Whom does he resemble?"

"Neither Nancy nor Jack," I said. "He's a good-looking beggar, though, only you can't depend upon him for five minutes at a time. Hadn't seen the family in more than two years. Spends one night at home, and is off again, no one knows where. Some persons like him, but I like a man with more stability. Not but that he has his good points; but he is a born vagabond. His brother expects to get him a berth at Vienna and is working rather successfully toward that end." I wondered how this bit of news affected the groom.

"A diplomat?" said Mrs. Chadwick. "That is the life for a young man with brains. Is he a good linguist?"

"Capital! Speaks French, German and Spanish, besides I don't know how many Indian sign-languages." Now I was patting the groom on the back. I sat facing the ladies, so it was impossible to see the expression on his face. I kept up this banter till we arrived at the department. I bade the ladies good day. I do not recollect when I have enjoyed ten minutes more thoroughly.

An hour in the shopping district, that is to say, up and down Pennsylvania avenue, where everybody who was anybody was similarly occupied, shopping, nearly took the spine out of our jehu. Everywhere he imagined he saw Nancy. And half a dozen times he saw persons whom he knew, persons he had dined with in New York, persons he had met abroad. But true to human nature, they were looking toward higher things than a groom in livery. When there was no more room for bundles, the women started for Mrs. Chadwick's apartments.

Said Mrs. Chadwick in French: "where, in the name of uncommon things, did you find such a handsome groom?"

"I was rather lucky," replied Miss Annesley in the same tongue. "Don't you see something familiar about him?"

Warburton shuddered.

"Familiar? What do you mean?"
