WILL BUILD A BIG DAM

Berrien Springs Power and Electric Company Gets Right to Construct
Great Dam at That Point

The board of supervisors granted the Berrien Springs Power and Electric company the right to erect a dam at the south end of Pardee island Thursday afternoon. Their action was as per program, for they were called together for the express purpose of dealing with this question and it was known that they were favorable towards the project.

The dam which the company is about to construct will make the river unnavigable beyond that point, but will contain a tollway for logs and a fish skate or ladder, as prescribed by law and which will be arranged by the state game commissioner.

The power house will be a building 200 feet in length and the dam and power house together will extend over 1,400 feet of ground. The dam is to stand 20 feet above the level of the river and will be constructed of steel, earth, timbers and concrete. It will be five feet wide at the top and will be thoroughly modern in every respect.

CALENDAR IS A LARGE ONE

Contains Twenty-six Criminal Cases and Large Number of Civil Ones

One of the largest calendars ever issued in Berrien county for any term of court is out for the September term. The list contains twenty-six criminal cases, some of them serious ones, which will occupy several days. Prominent among these are the cases of John R. Woundy, charged with assault with intent to commit murder; Alfred Sagert, charged with bigamy; William Walker, murder; William Russell, attempt to wreck railway train; thirteen for violation of the liquor laws, and the case of George Berry, charged with assault with intent to rape.

This comprises a partial list of some of the hardest cases and tells in a few words of the immense amount of work which the prosecutor has on his hands.

There is an extra large list of jury civil cases this year and these, with the chancery and non-jury civil cases will make the term of court a full one.

NOT GUILTY PLEADS BERRY

Colored Man Charged With Serious Offense

In the circuit court at St. Joseph today lawyers from all parts of the county were present, arranging the calendar, arguing motions and for the purpose of being present at the arraignment.

George Berry was the first man arraigned. He is charged with an assault with intent to rape. He plead not guilty. Judge Coolidge assigned Attorney Fremont Evans to defend the prisoner. Berry remarked that he had partially arranged to have a Chicago colored attorney to defend him and had paid him a small retainer. The trial was set for Sept. 24 or 25.

Thomas Payne, charged with the murder of Henry Walker, of Sodus township, entered a plea of not guilty. Judge Coolidge appointed Attorney Harry Plummer to defend the prisoner. The trial was set for September 24 or 25.

Payne, who is a negro, shot and fatally wounded Henry Walker, a colored berry picker, as the result of a quarrel over a card game. Walker later died in the county house.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

The Buchanan Modern Woodmen Went to Three Oaks,
Friday Night

About twenty Modern Woodmen from Buchanan went to Three Oaks last Friday night, where a class of twenty-one candidates were initiated into the secrets of this order.

They were met at the depot by the Three Oaks team, and escorted to the hotel, where they were served with supper, after which they gave a drill on the streets. Music was furnished by the Three Oaks band.

After the exhibition on the street, the boys wended their way to the hall to attend to the business part of the program. The initiatory work was exemplified by the Buchanan Forester team. After the business meeting was over, the Royal Neighbors served an elaborate banquet.

Our boys claim that they never enjoyed themselves better, and will be glad to accept all invitations forthcoming and extend their thanks to the Three Oaks members, for the royal manner, they were entertained.

SCHOOL MONEY SQUANDERED

Deputy Supt. Makes Statement
That Requires Proof

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 10—According to the belief of W. H. French, deputy superintendent of public instruction $1,000,000 of the $10,000,000 that is annually raised in the state for school purposes is spent illegally by school authorities. It is for the protection of the people of the school districts that the department has begun a campaign to remedy the abuses and the state superintendent has the whip hand, as the districts will not receive their $10 per capita apportionment until their irregularities have been corrected.

The law provides that no compensation, unless it is voted by special tax, shall be paid to any of the school officers, but it is known that in many districts orders are illegally drawn by one officer in favor of another for compensation of some sort. Primary money is used for any and all purposes, whereas the law provides it shall be used only for the payment of teachers' wages. Many cases are known where treasurers have never given bonds.

TEACHERS TAKING HOLD

Pupils Up to and Including the Eighth Grade With Their Teachers Will Be Admitted Free—Cass and VanBuren Counties Included

It is the purpose of the management of the Southern Michigan State fair, to be held in Benton Harbor October 2, 3, 4 and 5, to make the exhibition one of educational merit, and for this reason one day, Wednesday, the best day of the week, has been set aside as Children's day.

On Children's day all the school children in Berrien, in Cass and in VanBuren counties will be admitted free together with their teachers. Pupils up to and including the eighth grade are included. It is expected that 10,000 children will be on the grounds that day. From this large crowd of young people the fair will not derive a cent, but it is the policy of the management of the fair to do everything possible to stimulate an interest in the revival of the state fairs that were held with so much profit to the people years ago.

Teachers and school boards and school officers of the three counties are taking up the matter and with fine weather on October 3, Benton Harbor will welcome the largest gathering of children ever seen here.

THE LAST AND BEST

Baseball Game, Will Be Played on the Home Grounds
Next Friday

A game of ball will be played on the home plate next Friday afternoon which promises to be a more than exciting game and will satisfy even the critic's of baseball.

The game scheduled for Friday will be Buchanan Blues vs Doe-wah-jack. This team is the only one that has defeated the Buchanan Blues on the home grounds, and we are more than anxious that our boys win the victory for Friday and defeat the visiting team in the worst way.

The Buchanan Blues have played a good game of ball throughout the entire season, and we are more than proud of their numerous victories, and hope that they will carry off the honors of Friday. We feel confident of a complete victory that will place our boys as champions of Berrien County.

Don't forget the date, Friday, Sept. 14 and COME, COME, COME. Bring your wives, friends and sweethearts.

Exhildia Better, the 12 year old daughter of Joseph Better, of Spalding, was instantly killed Friday night. She was playing on a swing set in a hoisting derrick used in butchering when the apparatus collapsed. The child's neck was broken, causing instant death.

Elda Payne's meat market and J. P. Dillon's department store, at Williams, were destroyed by fire Friday night shortly before midnight, with all of their contents. The upper floors of both stores were occupied as dwellings. The members of Mr. Dillon's family, who lived over the store, had to be taken from the burning building by means of ladders, escape by the stairway having been cut off by the flames. Mr. Dillon carried no insurance, but the other losers are partly insured.

While walking along the edge of the pit Meilke, whose shoes were greasy, slipped and tumbled head foremost into the scalding water and before help could reach him his body was literally parboiled.

Mystery surrounds the finding of a skeleton Friday, under the floor of a partially burned hut in the woods near Trout Lake, Sault Ste Marie. The hut was occupied by a home-steader named James Jones until about a year ago, when he committed suicide. Nobody was ever reported missing, and it is not known who the man under the cabin was. It is believed by some of the settlers that he was murdered and buried under the floor, but whether by Jones is not known. A watch and an emblem of a secret society is said to have been found by the settlers. Jones was an old character and lived alone in the woods, four miles from Trout Lake. He is supposed to have seen better days, as he was well educated. At the time of his death it was said that he killed himself because he could not leave drink alone.

James Strong, of Grand Rapids, struck terror to pedestrians by his reckless driving of an automobile in the business district Friday. The big touring car lurched from one side of the street to the other, narrowly escaping collision with several rigs and electric light poles. Foot passengers sought refuge in stores. Patrolman Steed leaped aboard and arrested the man, just as the machine was headed for the sidewalk on Monroe street. Strong was fined $5

Concerning Fall Clothing

We have sold a lot of fall clothes already. That is proof that there are men who come to our store right at the start of every season because they know what we tell them about right styles, good materials and correct patterns, can be depended upon.

We were the first store in South Bend to talk clothing for the new season. We were so well cleaned up on all our summer stocks we had to begin talking about fall goods—our summer suits were all gone. Another proof that patrons like our clothing.

This coming season, the standard of quality in Spiro clothing will be moved up a peg—it will be as near perfection as all these years of experience and high ideals can bring it. One hundred per cent. wool, best of workmanship, best of style.

Creating a second Cuba would be easier than finding out how to keep its defeated candidates from taking to the hills.

One lock in the Panama canal will require over 90,000 car loads of cement. But the age of cement has arrived, and it is an article that stays put.

It has been discovered that poultry will thrive on mosquitoes. Instead of exterminating the mosquito the commission firms will proceed to adulterate him.

It may be regarded as certain that Uncle Sam will settle no more rows in Cuba on the former terms of doing the fighting, paying the bills and then evacuating.

Cuba's payment of $81,000,000 to a paper army has given rise to a real army devoted to revolution and more gift distributions of cash obtained by government loans.

The improvement of the Mississippi will inevitably lead to the improvement of its navigable tributaries. Any one who can not see this fact is afflicted with narrow vision.

A law should be enforced in this community prohibiting citizens from placing their water sprayers so near the sidewalk that it is impossible to get past without getting wet unless going out in the road. These things should be looked after, by the proper authorities, and see that those using the city water, know how to use it properly, and not to the discomfort of the passersby.

As the banquet begins at 6 o'clock, following a reception at 5 o'clock, the departure from Niles will have to be not later than the 3:30 interurban car to enable the Republicans to take in the whole show.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamb successfully chaperoned a boating party up to River Bluff last Sunday. Those participating in the happy occasion were: Misses Beatrice Mansfield, Vera Carter, Hazel Miles and Mrs. Hattie Pierce, and Messrs. Frank Sanders, Tony Kasnick, Lyle Prince and Gus Stearns. Everything went smoothly and a most enjoyable time is reported, with the exception of "Gloomy" missing his boat. We understand that he was so deeply interested in the scenes at this popular resort, that the hours seemed as minutes, and thus unfortunately missed his boat.

DAMASCUS THE UNTOUCHED
The Oriental City Called by Arabs a "Pearl Encircled by Emeralds."

Most travelers, I think, will award to Damascus in Syria the palm of being one of the most "untouched" of oriental cities, writes William G. Fitzgerald, in Four-Track News, a lovely ancient snow-white garden, surrounded by forests of pomegranates and other orchards such as caused the Arabs, a thousand years ago, to speak of it as a "pearl encircled by emeralds." Time has stood still in Damascus for a thousand years and life goes on in the country outside its walls precisely as it did when the ancient Bible historian spoke of the city in the Book of Genesis. For there, plowing is done with a crooked bough drawn by a ragged camel; or by the Arab farmer's wife in double harness with a donkey. There, too, and likewise within the walls, one sees the long lines of indolent eastern women drawing water from the well, just as Rachel did; or women sitting before the doors of their houses grinding corn in the old Bible way, with upper and nether stones.

THE ENGLISH POLICEMAN.
He Is Always Neat and Quiet and Deferential Towards the Public.

Of all departments of the city (Manchester, England) the one, next to the tramways, of which a stranger sees the most is the police. And in the conduct of the police department, writes Samuel Merwin, in Success Magazine, we find a striking comparison with our American notion of police work. In Manchester, as in London, the policeman is always the servant of the public. As in London, he carries neither club nor revolver. His duties are very nearly the same as those of a New York officer; it is in his method of doing his work that the striking difference lies. He is always quiet, always neat, always respectful, even deferential, in his treatment of the public. Such overbearing manners as we sometimes see in New York policemen would not be tolerated in Manchester—or in London, for that matter. Gruff in the police department is almost unheard of. The laws on this subject sprang out of a lively public spirit and are meant to be enforced.

COMMON CORN BILL BUGS.

Found in the Middle West and Destroys Plants by Feeding on the Stalks.

The corn bill bug is most commonly found in the corn growing states of the middle west. It attacks the plant by feeding on the stalk when very young. The adult beetle is a hard, oval insect with stout beak, by means of which it drills holes in the corn-stalk near the surface of the ground and feeds on the interior. As the corn continues growing and these leaves open out, many of them have a row of elongated holes across the blade, where the beetle has punctured it while it was rolled up. Beetles feed with the head downward. One species (S. parvulus) has been reported from Maryland and Nebraska as seriously injuring bluegrass. Another (S. robustus) has been known to breed in the roots of corn. Native food plants of this genus are the grasses, rushes and sedges.

Where land has recently been broken from swamp or marshes, the Prairie Farmer recommends that it is wise to plant at first some other crop than corn, such as flax or potatoes. Fall plowing of infested land will tend to drive the beetles to other fields.

COW PEAS.
Being Adapted to Northern Growth and Proving a Good Crop for Making Hay.

We would advise most of our readers to make a study of cow peas, for on many of our farms they will be found available. Cow peas are among the most interesting farm plants that we have. This was until quite recently considered a plant adapted to the United States south of the Ohio river, but within a few years cow peas have been raised as far north as Michigan and Wisconsin. They have ripened seed as far north as Madison. They make a good crop for plowing under when the soil is deficient in humus and needs some green manure. They have a large leafy top. A man must choose, however, the variety suited for his purpose. If he intends to plow them under he must use a non-running variety, as the long vines of the running varieties cannot be easily plowed under, for obvious reasons.

The cow pea makes a good hay, but must be cut early or the leaves will fall off. As a hay crop it is being displaced by the soy bean. South of central Illinois cow peas may be grown much more successfully than north of that point, where the frosts come early. To those wishing to go into the details of cow pea growing, the Farmers' Review suggests the sending to your state experiment station for their literature on the growing of cow peas in your state. Every state has its peculiar conditions and the use that can be made of the cow pea in one state is not the same as the use that can be made of it in another state.

A Battle Creek man followed the instructions given him by his doctor and nearly died. The doctor called one day and was astounded to see the man in so serious a condition. Asked why he hadn't followed instructions, the patient said: "I followed your prescription faithfully. You told me to confine my eating to such foods as would be taken by a three-year-old child. I ate apple cores, dog biscuits, scraps of potato peeling, burnt matches, corn cobs and everything I could pick up when no one was looking, and here I am almost dead."

An article, describing the "gaging" station on the St. Joseph river at Buchanan, was recently sent out by the Directors of the Government Geological Survey from Washington, the copy being typewritten. It evidently appears that the stenographer was a poor student of orthography, as in each place in the copy, where the word "gaging" appeared, it was spelled "gaging." The best joke of the whole incident, however, appears to be upon the editors in this vicinity, but true to the teachings of the old printer's adage, they "followed copy," and reproduced the article verbatim, thus informing their readers that there was still maintained at Buchanan a "gaging station." Will they please explain what is meant by a "gaging" station?

CHAPTER XXVI.
THE CASTLE OF ROMANCE.

How silent the forest was! The brook no longer murmured, the rustle of the leaves was without sound. A spar of sunshine, filtering through the ragged limbs of the trees, fell aslant her, and she stood in an aureole. As for my hero, a species of paralysis had stricken him motionless and dumb. It was all so unexpected, all so sudden, that he had the sensation of being whirled away from reality and bundled unceremoniously into the unreal. . . . She knew, and had known! A leaf brushed his face, but he was senseless to the touch of it. All he had the power to do was to stare at her. . . . She knew, and had known!

Dick stepped into the brook and began to paw the water, and the intermission of speech and action came to an end.

"You—and you knew?" What a strange sound his voice had in his own ears!

"Yes. From the very beginning I knew you to be a gentleman in masquerade; that is to say, when I saw you in the police-court. The absence of the beard confused me at first, but presently I recognized the gentleman whom I had noticed on board the ship." So she had noticed him!

"That night you believed me to be your sister Nancy. But I did not know this till lately. And the night I visited her she exhibited some photographs. Among them was a portrait of you without a beard."

Warburton started. And the thought that this might be the case had never trickled through his thick skull! How she must have laughed at him secretly!

She continued: "Even then I was not sure. But when Col. Raleigh declared that you resembled a former lieutenant of his, then I knew." She ceased. She turned to her horse as if to gather the courage to go on; but Jane had her nose hidden in the stream, and was oblivious of her mistress' need.

He waited dully for her to resume, for he supposed that she had not yet done.

"I have humiliated you in a hundred ways, and for this I want you to forgive me. I sent the butler away for the very purpose of making you serve in his stead. But you were so good about it all, with never a murmur of rebellion, that I grew ashamed of my part in the comedy. But now—" Her eyes closed and her body swayed; but she clenched her hands, and the faintness passed away. "But for you, my poor father would have been dishonored and I should have been forced into the arms of a man whom I despise. Whenever I have humiliated you, you have returned the gift of a kind deed. You will forgive me?"

"Forgive you! There is nothing for me to forgive on my side, much on yours. It is you who should forgive me. What you have done I have deserved." His tongue was thick and dry. How much did she know?

"No, not wholly deserved it." She fumbled with the buttons of her waist; her eyes were so full that she could not see. She produced an oblong slip of paper.

When he saw it a breath as of ice enveloped him. The thing she held out toward him was the canceled note. For a while he did me the honor to believe that I had betrayed him.

"I understand the kind and generous impulse which prompted this deed. Oh, I admire it, and I say to you, God-bless you! But don't you see how impossible it is? It can not be; no, no! My father and I are proud. What we owe we shall pay. Poverty, to be accepted without complaint, must be without debts of gratitude. But it was noble and great of you; and I knew that you intended to run away without ever letting any one know."

"Who told you?"

"No one. I guessed it."

And he might have denied all knowledge of it!

"Won't you—won't you let it be as it is? I have never done anything worth while before, and this has made me happy. Won't you let me do this? Only you need know. I am going away on Monday, and it will be years before I see Washington again. No one need ever know."

"It is impossible!"

"Why?"

She looked away. In her mind's eye she could see this man leading a troop through a snow-storm. How the wind roared! How the snow whirled and eddied about them, or suddenly blotted them from sight! But on and on, resolutely, courageously, hopefully he led them on to safety.

He was speaking, and the picture dissolved.

"Won't you let it remain just as it is?" he pleaded.

Her head moved negatively, and once more she extended the note. He took it and slowly tore it into shreds. With it he was tearing up the dream and tossing it down the winds.

"The money will be placed to your credit at the bank on Monday. We can not accept such a gift from any one. You would not, I know. But always shall I treasure the impulse. It will give me courage in the future—when I am fighting alone."

"What are you going to do?"

"I? I am going to appear before the public,—with assumed lightness; 'I and my violin.'"

He struck his hands together. "The stage?"—horried.

"I must live,"—calmly.

"But a servant to public caprice? It ought not to be! I realize that I can not force you to accept my gift, but this I shall do; I shall buy in the horses and give them back to you."

"You mustn't. I shall have no place to put them. Oh!"—With a gesture full of despair and unshed tears, "why have you done all this? Why this mean masquerade, this submitting to the humiliations I have contrived for you, this act of generosity? Why?"

Perhaps she knew the answers to her own questions, but, womanlike, wanted to be told.

And at that moment, though I am not sure, I believe Warburton's guarding angel gave him some secret advice.

"You ask me why I have played the fool in the motley?"—finding the strength of his voice. "Why I have submitted in silence to your just humiliations? Why I have acted what you term generously? Do you mean to tell me that you have not guessed that riddle?"

She turned her delicate head aside and switched the grasses with her riding-crop.

"Well"—flinging aside his cap which he had been holding in his hand "I will tell you. I wanted to be near you. I wanted to be, what you made me, your servant. It is the one great happiness that I have known. I have done all these things because—because, God help me, I love you! Yes, I love you, with every beat of my heart!"—lifting his head proudly. Upon his face love had put the hallowed seal. "Do not turn your head away, for my love is honest. I ask nothing, nothing; I expect nothing. I know that it is hopeless. What woman could love a man who has made himself ridiculous in her eyes, as I have made myself in yours?"—bitterly.

"No, not ridiculous; never that!" she interrupted, her face still averted.

He strode toward her hastily, and for a moment her heart almost ceased to beat. But all he did was to kneel at her feet and kiss the hem of her riding-skirt. He rose hurriedly.

"God bless you, and good-by!" He knew that if he remained he would lose all control, crush her madly in his arms, and hurt her lips with his despairing kisses. He had not gone a dozen paces, when he heard her call pathetically. He stopped.

"Mr. Warburton, surely you are not going to leave me here alone with the horses?"

"Pardon me, I did not think! I am confused!" he blundered.

Minute Milky Bath of Other Days Was Quite a Modest Social Affair.

Tubbing is almost as recent a custom as telegraphing. At least it is so in France, where, even at this time, bathrooms are objects of awe and wonder to the populace in general.

Something more than a century ago things were even worse, if one may depend on the veracity of a writer in the Cornhill Magazine. According to his unvarnished tale of a fashionable woman's habits, her maid with her chocolate roused her about 11, and she forthwith took a plunge into that society in which she worked, thought, played, ate, drank and died at last.

It is painful to add that she very seldom took a plunge into anything but society. The king's solutions consisted of dipping the royal fingers into rose water and drying them daintily on a napkin, and to go beyond one's monarch in a desire for cleanliness would have been a lapse of taste indeed.

Baths were certainly not unknown—milky baths, so that madame need not suffer the gloom and depression of solitude even then—but the idea of soap in connection with them is one which the closest student of eighteenth century mores and manners will rarely if ever come across. He will be familiar, on the other hand, by description and in old curiosity shops with the painfully minute ewer and basin in which fashion did homage to cleanliness.

There was no particular reason, then, why madame should not make her toilet in public, and she did.

ODD CHURCH MEMORIALS.

Garlands Hung Up in English Sanctuaries to Girls True to Their First Love.

There are seven "virgins' garlands" still in existence in Minsterley church, Salop, the first of them bearing the date 1554 and the last 1751, says the London Daily Graphic.

They consist of silk ribbon and paper, ball-shaped, and are covered with rosettes, the inside center of the case or wire frame supporting a pair of paper gloves. They represent a romantic custom of very ancient origin, and are sacred to the memory of girls who, while betrothed in their youth, lost their intended husbands by death, yet remained true to their first loves.

Each maiden designed her own garland, and at her death this simple emblem was borne before her by the village lassies, the white gloves being afterward added. After the obsequies these garlands were suspended in the village church on a rod bearing at its extremity a heart in the shape of an escutcheon, upon which the initials and date were inscribed. These were originally fixed above the maiden's pew.

Some of the earliest and forgotten garlands were composed of real flowers, but later the covered hoops described were substituted.

There is a passing allusion to this "simple memorial of the early dead" in "Hamlet." "Yet here she is allowed her virgin crants," "crants," signifying garlands."

DRESS OF ROYAL MISSES.

Many Daughters of Nobility Are Exceedingly Modest and Simple in Their Attire.

People sometimes wonder what sum is put aside for dress by the daughters of royal houses, says the London Tatler.

Before her marriage, I read the other day, the duchess of Fife was said to have a small dress allowance, and the sum of $1,500 a year was mentioned. Besides yachting and everyday dresses, and all the usual costumes required by a girl of the upper class, royal princesses have also to wear the costly and elaborate dresses which their rank demands at the weddings of their near relations.

On the whole, it may be asserted that a frugal princess may spend as little as $5,000 a year on her dress, while her more wealthy and extravagant sister may find her dress bills amount to ten times that sum.

The empress of Russia, who more than any other European lady is able to indulge her wildest fancies, dresses with the greatest simplicity—in the daytime mostly in tailor made coats and skirts, in the evening generally in the purest white.

Nobody knows what produces earthquakes, although it is often claimed that they do. The earth quakes somewhere every day. Nobody knows when the earth came or when it will go, where it came from, how it came or how it happened to be here. The fact is, when you get down to the truth, nobody knows anything about anything—past, present or to come—and about the only way to get along in this know-nothing world is not to try to know very much.—Eldorado Republican.

She—but what is the real difference between the chorus girl and the actress?

He—One is pealous of the other.

She—Yes, but which one?
