THE LATE SENATOR ALGER

GEN. ALGER'S LIFE ENDS

Distinguished Citizen of Michigan Dies Suddenly at Washington

The news of the death of United States Senator Russell A. Alger was received in Niles Thursday afternoon.

The death occurred suddenly at Washington from valvular heart disease at 8:45 a. m. a few moments after he had been conversing with his wife. The senator had not been in good health for several years and his sudden death was not entirely unexpected.

Russell Alexander Alger was born in LaFayette township, Medina county, Ohio, February 27, 1836 and lacked a month and a few days of being 71 years old.

At the age of 11 years his parents died. For seven years he labored on a farm, attending the Richfield academy in Summit county, Ohio, during the winters and subsequently taught public school. He later studied law with Wolcott and Upson at Akron, Ohio; was admitted to the bar by the supreme court of that state in March, 1859 and in May, 1895 the degrees of L. L. D. was conferred upon him by Hillsdale college.

In December, 1859 he moved to Michigan, locating at Grand Rapids. In 1886 he engaged extensively in the lumber business and continued in that line successfully up to the time of his death.

JOHN E. BARNES NOW RETIRED

B. H. Spencer Succeeds Him as Head of the Spencer Barnes Furniture Co.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Spencer & Barnes furniture company held Thursday afternoon, B. H. Spencer was chosen president; Irving Spencer, vice president; Miss Minnie Spencer, secretary and treasurer, John E. Barnes, one of the founders of the company, and for many years its president, was not re-elected and was not given a place on the board of directors.

Years ago when young men John E. Barnes and B. H. Spencer started a furniture factory with a small amount of capital at Buchanan. They were rich in determination and ability and they began to develop into a thriving business. In the early 90s when the old improvement association started to boom Benton Harbor, the Spencer & Barnes company was induced to move its plant to Benton Harbor, and were given a bonus of something like $20,000 all told. The industry prospered and while other factories suffered during the panic that followed the Spencer & Barnes company kept their machines going and their men employed.

It was during the years of the panic that the company decided to change its line of goods. Heretofore the cheaper classes of furniture were made but a change was made to the best goods that could be made. Bedroom suits was a specialty of the company, and a few years ago the company was fortunate in securing an order from President McKinley to furnish his sleeping rooms in the family home at Canton.

The Spencer & Barnes company has grown to become one of the best known factories making high grade stuff in the country. Every year at the Chicago and New York exhibitions the Benton Harbor company has had a very creditable display.

The capital stock of the company is $80,000, and up to two or three years ago the stock was owned half and half by Mr. Spencer and Mr. Barnes. Then it was decided that each partner should sell a few shares of their stock to F. T. Plimpton, one of the leading salesmen of the company. It was thought by having a little interest in the business that the services of the sales agent would be made more secure.

Shortly after Plimpton secured the shares he sold a few shares to Mr. Spencer, enough to give Mr. Spencer a control of the company. And ever since that day the two old partners, the two old-time friends, the two men who started out in business together, have been growing apart and there gradually arose friction in the management of the business.

When it was seen that the relations between the two old friends could not longer be pleasant a change in the management became necessary. Mr. Barnes a few days ago submitted to Mr. Spencer a written offer to sell his holdings of stock in the company for 95 cents on the dollar or to pay Mr. Spencer $1.05 for his holdings.

It is related that Mr. Spencer did not want to quit the business and that he did not feel like buying the nearly $40,000 stock of Mr. Barnes and as the two men talked over the friction that had crept in between them, Mr. Barnes cried like a child. The two had struggled against odds in their early battles for success and they had won together and the parting was a sad scene. But better the parting than working together not in harmony with each other. And so Mr. Barnes did not vote his stock at the meeting of the company Thursday. He could by the cumulative power of voting, have kept himself on the board of directors, for he owns nearly one-half the stock, but he showed confidence in the management of his old partner by retiring from the business and to allow his property to be managed by Mr. Spencer without any let or hindrance.

After the result of the election was announced Mr. Barnes went through the factory and said good bye to his men and there was much regret at the parting.

"Stand by the guns, boys," was the advice that Mr. Barnes gave his former employees one by one.

President Spencer has been with the company since its formation and he knows all the details of making and selling furniture. It is predicted that he will continue the large plant in a prosperous manner and in his efforts he will have the good wishes of the people of Benton Harbor, as the Spencer & Barnes company have always enjoyed.

Mr. Barnes has not announced what he will engage in. That he will remain in Benton Harbor is certain for he likes the city.

PASS PROBLEM IS UP TO BIRD

Must Decide if Legislature Can Compel Railroads to Give Free Rides

Lansing, Mich., January 24—It is up to Atty. Gen. Bird to give the legislature an official opinion as to whether it lies within the power of that body to compel the railroads of the state to furnish free transportation to the members during their terms of office, as well as state officers and members of the supreme court.

A special meeting of the house railroad committee was held yesterday to discuss the Towner bill. Members of the committee expressed the opinion that it would be cheaper for the railroads to give free transportation to these officials. They have been riding on passes for years and turning in bills to the state, and if the matter was definitely fixed it would prevent demands being made in the future for members of their families.

After some little discussion it was decided to change the Towner bill so as to provide that all such officials must receive certificates from the secretary of state to entitle them to free rides, and adding a penalty clause for allowing any other person to use such official passes.

Senator Russell's bill amending the primary law so that the congressional nomination in the fifth district can be made by direct vote has been prepared in the attorney-general's office and was introduced today. A number of difficult corners had to be turned so as to make the measure satisfactory. In order to give the country voters an equal chance it was decided to hold the primary on the same day as the spring election, as this will insure a larger vote than would otherwise be obtained.

The main points in the Russell bill are as follows:

Primary to be held on election day first Monday in April.

Election to be called at some later date, not specified.

Names placed on primary ballot by petition of not less than two nor more than four per cent of the qualified enrolled voters of the party making the nomination of such party has decided on primary method of making nominations.

Those who may vote at primary are persons qualified to vote at the last general election if willing to swear they belong to the party in which they offer to vote, whether enrolled or not. Election inspectors are to be judges of voters qualifications.

Why Not Get Out?

Occasionally one will hear the remark, "I wish I was out of this town," and then one feels like saying "I wish you were," for a man who stands on the street corners chewing and spitting, telling obscene stories, cursing in town, finding fault with his grandmother because she was a woman, claiming that the merchants are a lot of thieves, that the lawyers and newspaper men would skin a man to a finish, and a whole lot more is a nuisance and an abomination. Any town pestered with one or more such worthies would be justified in exercising cowhide authority on the bosom of their pants. No one is obliged to live where he is not suited. If one hasn't an encouraging word for the business enterprise and institutions of his town, he should shut up and "go way back and sit down." If things don't suit you, move to where they will. A growler and sorehead in a town is an enterpriser killer every time. It would pay a town to donate him five dollars and tell him to move.

IN MEMORIAM

JEMIMA BATTEN

Jemima Batten Fender was born in Butler county, Ohio, Nov. 30, 1823, and passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Buckles, in Larned, Kansas, Wednesday, January 16, 1907, at 10:30 o'clock, at the age of 83 years, one month, sixteen days.

In 1840 she was united in marriage to John Fender, of Cedar Grove, Ind., where they lived for a number of years. From there they moved to Buchanan, where they lived until the time of Mr. Fender's death in 1899. Unto the union was born seven children of whom only two survive, her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Buckles, with whom she made her home for several years; and a son, Chas. Fender, of Chicago; together with seven grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

She accepted Christ when very young, and was an earnest and faithful Christian all through life; and was cheerful and patient during all her long illness of nine months duration, from paralysis. She was before coming to Larned, a member of the Eastern Star lodge in good standing.

Brief funeral services were held at the residence of her daughter Friday, January 18th, at 2 p. m., Rev. Barton of the M. E. church of Larned officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in the Larned cemetery.

Dear mother, thou hast left us;
We will weep and mourn for thee,
But you will sleep now with Jesus
Where you have longed so oft to be.
The pearly gates stood open;
A welcome voice said "come,"
And with words of love behind her,
She calmly entered home.

or

One Night in the Enemy's Lines

By J. I. York

The bodies of the hung were left suspended where they had met their death until the court-martial had been called. As William took his seat his attention was riveted to this terrible fate of his comrades.

The general spoke to the prisoner as follows: "This is the result of your unfaithfulness. What defence have you to make, or what do you think will be the result of your court-martial?" But the person addressed neither spoke or seemed to see anything; all hope had fled when he awoke and found his gun was gone and he had heard and seen the result of that one hour's sleep at his post. He knew that he would never sleep again until he slept the "sleep of death."

CHAPTER V.

The court-martial was called, but the prisoner refused to answer a question, nor did he make any plea, but his friend, Captain Armstrong pleaded for him, he stated to the jury how faithful the prisoner had been as a soldier; how bravely he had participated in all of the thirteen battles; and dwelt long on the recent march over the terrible roadstead when reaching camp, had to stand a vidette post and how he should have been relieved at twelve o'clock and had been faithful until the fourth watch, and that he considered it a burden more than human nature could stand. He further stated that William had told him, when he had sent for him, the desperate effort he had made to keep awake, but finally had fallen asleep. The lieutenant of Company H, also plead with great fervor for the prisoner, as did others, but when the verdict was given it was, that William Townsend must meet death on the following morning at sunrise; that he was to be shot by musketry until dead.

The prisoner had been removed to the Guard house and did not know his sentence, he only knew there was no hope for him, so he called for writing material and penned a farewell letter to his people, keeping nothing back; he also wrote a fond good bye to his sweetheart, Susa Armstrong. So touching was this last epistle that the writer will not even try to produce it, only the few last lines, which are as follows:

"I have failed in my duty to my country; through my carelessness have suffered the enemy to approach our lines and slay twenty five of my comrades. I have not received my sentence yet, but know that only a verdict of death can be reached. Oh, if I could only have died on the field of battle, or any way except an unfaithful guard; one that had failed to do his whole duty. Full well I know I must die as a dog, shot to death. I cannot write any more, but may we meet in Heaven.

Good bye, my dear one,
William."

While the Potomac army had gone into winter quarters, Lee's army had not, but was on the watch to harass our army and drive them back to Washington, so they could take the Capitol, if possible.

While our army was resting at Brandy Station with a strong cavalry force between Lee's army and two lines of infantry, pickets felt pretty safe to take a good sleep, but Lee had laid pontoon bridge further up the river from the bridge at Rappahannock Station, and out a large force of cavalry and two corps of infantry across the river. The night that our narrative opened, Lee had made a flank movement on General Mead and had almost got between his army and Washington, and was now moving straight on Brandy Station, in the rear of our army, or nearly so. They would reach our army by daylight on the following morning. As our front was not molested or appraised of the movement, our army was resting as they supposed in perfect safety. Four guards had been placed around the tent of William Townsend; a ball and chain had been fastened on his ankle and one guard was stationed inside the tent. So grave was the charge against him that every precaution was taken to make sure he would not escape. The prisoner made no such attempt, but prayed and sang hymns all through the night, (as did the Apostles) for he was a praying man; one that was a soldier of the cross, as well as of the army. He had often called the company together for prayer.

James Armstrong got permission to stay with his friend through the night and as they sang and prayed many soldiers were moved to tears and some to a better life. When the officer of the day looked in at midnight, he saw a picture that he never forgot, for there on their knees were the prisoner and James Armstrong, also the Inner Guard in the attitude of prayer. He let fall the curtain of the tent and so will we, and pass hurriedly along until the morning.

At five o'clock the bugle sounded; soon roll call and breakfast was over. One brigade of the fifth army corps was called to arms and marched just outside the camp, and formed a hollow square with one end open. At the open end a grave had been dug and everything now was in readiness for the execution of William Townsend, as brave a soldier as ever shouldered a musket, or faced an enemy, but was now to pay the penalty of the law; yes and without mercy or reason. But we thank God for the Christ that was, "the end of the law for righteousness sake to all that believe on His name."

Home-Made Catarrh Cure.

Any one can mix right at home the best remedy of its kind known. The name "Cyclone" is given to the following prescription, it is supposed, because of its promptness in driving from the blood and system every vestige of catarrhal poison, relieving this foul and dread disease, no matter where located. To prepare the mixture: Get from any good pharmacy one half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Syrup Kargon and three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake well and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This is a harmless, inexpensive mixture, which has a peculiar action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, assisting them to filter and strain from the blood and system all catarrhal poisons, which, if not eradicated, are absorbed by the mucous membrane, and an open sore or catarrh is the result.

Prepare some and try it, as it is the prescription of an eminent catarrh specialist of national reputation.

he attended as a youth but has spent much time and been to considerable expense in pursuing such studies as would equip him for the highest positions in his profession. As a result he has been a successful teacher in all the schools where he has been employed and those who know him are most earnest in his support for the proposed nomination and election.

They feel that he has earned the promotion but, what is more to the purpose, they feel that he will prove a boon to the schools of the county. They know that the oversight of the schools by a man of his caliber must be beneficial and that the courage and enthusiasm his visits would bring to weary and desponding teachers would be of incalculable value.

From Oronoko, where he has been employed for nearly four years, comes the information that he can, if he will, name the delegates to the convention, from Lincoln word is received that he will meet no opposition from people of any party or local clique. They know him as a scholar, an organizer, as a gentleman. They have observed his tact in dealing with his teachers and his pupils, and they have no question of his fitness for the office.

As merit is now becoming a qualification for official position rather than "pull," or caucus activity, such support as comes so freely to Mr. Otwell is the very best reason that can be urged for his selection by the convention.

president of the Northern Indiana Railway company, J. McM. Smith vice-president and general manager, W. L. Taylor, of Indianapolis, and W. L. Mr. Smith, who has so efficiently acted as resident manager of the lines of the Northern Indiana Railway company, will devote his time, talents and energy to developing the Southern Michigan Railway company, will keep the company's headquarters in this city and will continue a resident of South Bend. This company will build an extension from its main line to Buchanan, Mich., and hopes to have the line in operation by July 1st. Just what other extensions may be made the company is not at present prepared to state, but it will do everything possible to develop the territory which legitimately belongs to it and to accommodate the people of that territory, with a view to making these lines among the best in the country.

Mr. Leeder Lumley returned to Buchanan, Sunday from Rolling Prairie with his head all done up as the result of an accident. He is employed on the new interurban road being built between South Bend and Michigan City, and drives a team of horses, taking care of 11 head besides. In some unknown manner, one of the horses kicked the young man in the face, breaking his jaw on the left side and splintering the right side, besides leaving to deep incisions in his face, from the horse's hoof. Dr. Moore, of Rolling Prairie dressed the injured member keeping the jaw in place, by a silver wire being interwoven around his teeth. The patient is doing nicely, although suffering great pain.

On New Years Eve Miss Gertrude McAdam became the bride of Mr. I. M. Long. The wedding was a very quite affair, the Rev. J. T. Shurtliff performed the ceremony which took place in Christ Church in the presence of only the relatives of the bride. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Long drove to their home on the corner of 11th and G Streets which Mr. Long had prepared. The bride needs no introduction as she is an Eureka girl and has for some time been teaching in the city schools with great success. Mr. Long is also very well known in our city, where he is in the real estate business.—Eureka Hombolt Daily Standard, Eureka, California.

When a man is dead and buried, the general public soon forgets that he ever lived.

Ezra Kendall

It has been said of Ezra Kendall, who came to the Grand Opera House, Chicago, last Sunday night, under the management of the Harry Askin Company, that he has been the creator of more laughs than any humorist on the stage today. This statement seems to be born out by his record as a monologist and at the head of companies. Provided this year with a new comedy of a rich Kendall type. Mr. Kendall in "Swell Elegant Jones" has added new success to his laugh making career, for there has been woven into the piece the essence of humor at which he is best.

As a monologist Mr. Kendall scattered humor from coast to coast and he has combined in his present role the humor which won him the leadership in other fields. The lines are of the crisp, terse, meaty sort that enabled him to stand alone, before an audience and keep the people laughing and Kendall, the monologist, is seen in his happiest vein as Kendall, the humorist.

"Swell Elegant Jones" has much of that vital humor running throughout that springs from the village and cross roads, and while the providing a fitting vehicle for Mr. Kendall has been the prime object, there has been preserved a coherent and interesting story with a lot of human interest running through it. The scenes are laid in a small Indiana village and this allows for the introduction of many quaint characters who have been given a liberal share of the best comedy effects. The rural detective who has been waiting for forty years to marry a village spinster, and who incidentally complicates the plot wherever he has a hand, is an especially well drawn bit. Throughout there has been an aim at wholesome humor, the only sort with which Mr. Kendall has ever been identified.

Things to Forget

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,

A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,

And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud

Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed

It's a pretty good plan to forget.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away

In a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day

In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display

Would cause grief and sorrow and lifelong dismay,

It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy

Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy

That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy

A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,

It's a pretty good plan to forget it.
