RAPS THE BOARD

Sheriff Criticizes Supervisors For Not Providing Padded Cell.

Sheriff Tennant sharply criticizes the board of supervisors for failing to provide a padded cell for the use of the insane prisoners. Wednesday morning Adolph Repine, brought to the county jail from Niles Monday evening, nearly killed himself in his cell. The man is insane and this morning his raving became violent.
In a moment of wild passion he rushed frantically at the bars of his cell and again and again charged into the iron bars head downward. Before other prisoners could get to him and restrain him from doing further damage his head was a mass of ugly cuts.
Repine's ravings were fearful and the officers were obliged to tie him to his bunk.

"A padded cell is one of the most urgent needs," said Sheriff Tennant.
Several times I have requested the board of supervisors to install one in the jail but they have always ignored my suggestion. Hardly a week passes but what we get an insane patient in.
Many are violent and we are obliged to tie them hand and foot to keep them from beating their brains out against the iron bars. We usually take violent patients to the asylum on emergency orders, but often we are compelled to keep them over night, and then a guard usually has to stay in the cell. It seems as if our supervisors cannot awaken to the fact that in saving an insane patient's life they are doing an act that humanity would commend."

Outlines Plans as Regards Proposed Building of Line to Buchanan

J. MacM. Smith, the interurban railway company's general manager, states that it is the intention to push the Buchanan extension from Niles right along; that the contract for grading and bridge building will be let very soon, and that he intends going to Niles to ascertain whether the city cares to build a joint bridge or whether they, the railroad company, are to go ahead and build their own bridge, which they would erect in such a way that the city could build an addition to at any future time.

Mr. Smith says that, aside from the Main street bridge, it will be necessary to erect a bridge over the Michigan Central tracks, but that the railroad commissioner, realizing that it is practically impossible to get over the Big Four track at the approach to the Main street bridge, except by a grade crossing, has manifested a disposition to allow a grade crossing at this point.

The bridge question is one that must be submitted to a vote of the people, and despite the fact that the city is banded pretty well up to the limit at present, City Attorney VanRiper gives it as his opinion that the necessary funds could be raised without any trouble, in case the people voted in favor of building a new bridge.

SENATOR SMITH, IF YOU PLEASE

Was Sworn in at Noon on Monday.

It is no Senator Smith, the junior senator from Michigan. The title of "Senator" will take the place of "William Alden," which has always been used in the house to distinguish him from a few other Smiths. There being no other Smith in the senate, the use of his entire name will not be required.

Representative William Alden was on the floor of the senate when that honorable body was called together at noon on Monday. After prayer and the reading of a portion of the journal, Senator Burrows sent to the clerk the certificate of appointment by Governor Warner, which was read, and then Senator Burrows escorted Representative Smith to the vice-president's desk, where he took the oath of office.

Vice President Fairbanks congratulated him and he signed the senate's book on the clerk's desk. He then was escorted to his seat on the Democratic side by Senator Burrows, where he was surrounded by senators and congratulated. The whole proceeding occupied only about three minutes of the senate's time.

SHIP CANAL TO DETROIT

Proposed at Banquet That Waterway be Dug From St. Joseph to Detroit

A ship canal from Detroit to St. Joseph, connecting the Detroit river with Lake Michigan, was one of the suggestions made by Hal H. Smith for developing Detroit as a great commercial center, at a banquet tendered representatives of the Detroit wholesale and jobbing interests by the trade extension committee of the board of commerce, in the Detroit club, Friday night. Mr. Smith called attention to Chicago's plan to dig a canal from the western shore of Lake Michigan to the Mississippi at a cost of $12,000,000, and pointed out that the Detroit-St. Joseph canal would only be one-fourth as long and only one-fourth as expensive. Nothing should be too stupendous for Detroit to undertake, he declared.

The older residents of St. Joseph and Benton Harbor recall that a survey for a canal connecting Lake Michigan with Lake Erie was made a quarter of a century ago, and the work was under the supervision of the government. The map made by the engineers was filed at the war department in Washington, and is probably still to be found. The route from St. Joseph to Toledo is about 50 miles shorter than from St.
Joseph to Detroit.

IN MEMORIAM

VALENTINE SCHRAM

Valentine Schram was born the 8th of April 1815 near St. Catherine's Ontario, Canada, and died Tuesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, February 12, 1907.

Mr. Schram was married to Miss Lydia M. Ryckman, March 16, 1839. Mr. and Mrs. Schram enjoyed their young married life on a farm near St. Catherine, Canada, only fifteen miles from the great Niagara Falls.

They moved to Buchanan in 1858 which place they have held as their residence with the exception of seven years in which they resided in Saginaw Valley.

Mr. Schram became a christian early in life. He and his wife joined the Methodist Episcopal church Feb. 20, 1852. He held firmly to the faith of his fathers. He was a man of strong principles and firm religious convictions.

He was ever happy in the knowledge of sins forgiven, and his request was that he might go to his saviour and be at rest.

Grandpa Schram was the father of five children, the grandfather of nine children, the great grandfather of eight children and the great great grandfather of two children. He lived to see seven generations.

A large number of relatives and friends live to mourn his loss. His beloved and aged wife mourns the loss of a kind and loving husband. Three children live to mourn his loss, Wm. V. Schram, of Lakeland, Saginaw Co. Mich.; Mrs. L. A. Wheeler, of San Diego, Cal.; Mrs. Alice J. Pogan, of Washington.

He leaves two brothers in Canada William and Peter respectively.

There are nine grand children to mourn his loss. Three have watched very attentively at their grandfather's bedside, Miss Losbaugh, Mrs. Hazel Morgan and Ava Schram.

Mr. Valentine Wheeler, a grandchild living in Elkhart, with his wife and daughter was here to attend the funeral.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. F. C. Waters Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the house. Interment at the Bakertown cemetery.

BETSY ANN WHITE

Betsy Ann White was born in Portage County, Ohio, May 4, 1837, and died at Buchanan, Michigan, February 13, 1907, aged 69 years, 9 months and 9 days. In 1846 she removed to Noble County, Indiana, a few years afterwards removing to LaGrange

AROUND THE CIRCLE

KEEP THE DOLLARS MOVING IN YOUR OWN COMMUNITY.

IT MAKES WEALTH FOR ALL

Buy of the Man Who Will Buy of You and Your Dollar Will Come Back Again.

(Copyright by Alfred C. Clark.)

As on the western prairies in pioneer days, the trapper's camp fire, kindled to prepare his frugal meal or to warm him from the biting wind, fanned into renewed vigor, spread, first on the tiny blade of grass to neighboring blades, and thence to the tangled masses all around until the broad plains were one vast sea of seething flame destroying all before it, so the mail order business, started in the eastern cities on a small scale, fanned by the breeze of judicious advertising, has spread until it now covers the length and breadth of our land and threatens disaster to the smaller dealers everywhere. The note of warning has been sounded, the light is visible in the sky, and yet, apparently oblivious to it all, the ones whose safety is being endangered, heed not the alarm nor the signal of disaster. The country merchant and the farmer, whose combined efforts can stem the tide of destruction that threatens to engulf them, are alone unconscious of the approaching devastation, that, like a great sea of consuming flame, is threatening to engulf them.

The country merchant and the farmer—the simple, honest dwellers in the rural districts, are the victims this gigantic peril is reaching out for to fill its rapacious maw. Each year its grasp becomes firmer, its power greater. Only a few short years ago the catalogue house was a thing unheard of, to-day it stands as one of America's greatest institutions. And with great fortune comes great power, so now the mail order business may well be classed among the powers of the nation. Its efforts are already being felt at the national capital, selves in this connection. With the rapid growth of the mail order business are being established. These large firms are daily reaching out for new sections of trade. What will be the result along this line? With the growth of the catalogue house comes the death of the rural mercantile trade. Let them once destroy the country merchant and the markets of the world will be in the hands of a few wealthy capitalists. Their branch houses will appear in all the country towns and the farmer will no longer be independent. His friend, the country dealer, who through competition was forced to pay the value of the butter, eggs, etc., will be a thing of the past, and in his place will appear the fat, gloating face of the capitalist, in whose benumbed conscience there is no thought of pity, whose breast contains instead of a heart a great lump of cold stony gold, whose one ambition is to build up a greater fortune than the world has ever seen, and who cares naught for the tears or trials, woes or weeping of his victims so long as he can squeeze a little more of the coveted glittering treasure from him.

Again, the dollar spent with the local dealer stays in the community where it blesses the spender over and over again. The merchant pays it to the butcher for meat, the butcher gets his bread of the baker and therefore drops the dollar into the baker's till, the baker pays it to the miller for flour, and the latter buys his grain from the farmer, so the dollar once more jingles merrily in the farmer's trousers pocket. But spend it with the mail order house and it is gone never to return. It goes to build up the great commercial interests of New York or Chicago. Does it pay the farmer to send his money to help beautify and build up these great cities? Has he not more interest in beautifying and building up his own section of the country? If not, he should. If a place is good enough for a man to live in and to make his money in, it is good enough for him to spend his money in. Who helps build the churches, school houses, streets, bridges, etc.? Does the mail order house help? Will they give a dollar to educate the farmer's children, or donate anything to support the farmer's widow or orphans? Do they help to pay the taxes, or add anything to where our laws are made, and unless a check is administered the passage of the parcels post bill will mark one of its greatest triumphs.

But let us look at a few of the simple reasons why the farmer should patronize the home dealer. In the first place their interests are centered in each other. Every season of plenty on the farm means a prosperous year to the country merchant. So in the prosperity of the farmer does the country merchant expect to gain. The farmer finds, therefore, in the country dealer, a staunch and loyal friend and a defender of his rights. They pay taxes together, live side by side, their children play and go to school together. When the crops are poor or misfortune comes, to whom does the farmer look? Not to the mail order magnate, but to his neighbor, the country merchant. How often does the mail order concern take any interest in the political questions or legal measures beneficial to the farmer? Yet with their bright-hued catalogue of pictured "bargains" they reach out an open hand for the farmer's hard earned dollar. And does he get value received? Not often. The first order he may, but that is only a bait. The business is not founded on principles, it is not built on honorable methods, its mighty walls are erected on graft. The goods are shop-worn or shoddy, or perhaps many kinds of goods have defects so cunningly concealed that the naked eye can scarcely see a difference between these articles and those of a much higher grade. You are expected to send cash with the order or have it ready when the goods arrive with the big C. O. D. mark on the package. Your crop failure, or shortage of money doesn't interest the mail order house, your credit with them is good only so long as your pocket book is filled. Your order is made out and you pay for goods you never saw, put up and selected by men you do not know. If these goods do not prove to be worth the money, if the shoes do not wear well, or the suit is shoddy goods, will the mail order firm make them good? Not often. Yet the local dealer will do this. He knows his honesty is his best drawing card. So much for the advantage of dealing with honest men and not with grafters.

About 30 Woodmen and Royal Neighbors of Dayton Camp, were pleasantly entertained at a Valentine party given at the home of Mrs. A. C. Weaver on Lake street, by Mrs. A. C. Weaver and Miss Emma Richter. Games and music were indulged in. The oyster supper with other good things was greatly enjoyed by all. The home was prettily decorated with cupids and hearts, each guest being presented with a valentine at the table. Fortunes were told and a merry good time was had by all.

Mrs. Byron Brant entertained sixteen of her lady friends Monday afternoon, in honor of her guest Mrs. C. H. Ormsby, of Benton Harbor. The afternoon was spent in playing progressive pedro, the prize being awarded Mrs. Clara Richards. A delicious two course luncheon was served, after which the guests departed having spent a pleasant afternoon.

The members of the U B church and friends enjoyed a valentine party at the home of Mrs. Sarah Scott, on Oak street, Thursday evening. The house was profusely decorated with valentine favors and a great deal of pleasure was caused by the large heart shaped cake containing a ring. The evening was also very pleasantly spent in games and music.

The Foreign Missionary Society of the Christian church will hold a rally at South Bend, Monday Feb. 18th. Pres. A. McLean and David Rich of the mission in India will be in charge of the meeting. This society collected last year nearly $300,000 for preaching the gospel in stations in India, China, Japan, Africa, and in other heathen and foreign countries. This is not a large sum for the Christian church with a membership of a million and a quarter to contribute, but there are greater things to come in this work. The sum mentioned does not include large amounts permanently invested in college buildings, hospitals, orphanages, etc., now established in connection with mission stations in foreign countries.

COMFORTING WORDS

Many a Buchanan Household Will Find Them So

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying; dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Buchanan readers:

Mrs. E. Skibbe, living at 812 Broad St., St. Joseph, Mo. says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are the best remedy I have ever used. I suffered greatly with kidney trouble. The secretions from my kidneys were very frequent and annoying during the night. They were dark in color, of an offensive odor, and contained a heavy sediment if left standing. My back was very weak and my housework was performed only with great misery. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and was surprised at the quick cure they effected. (From statement given No. 1, 1901.)"

Cured to stay Cured. On Oct. 31, 1906, Mrs. Skibbe was interviewed and said: "I am glad to confirm what I said in 1901 recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. The cure they effected at that time has proven to be a permanent one. I am very glad to again recommend them."

Susa Armstrong's Mission

OR

One Night in the Enemy's Lines

By J. I. York

"But says General Hill, this looks rather suspicious, if your friend was taken prisoner as you say and saved from a criminal's death and you through the President of the U. S. have received a pardon, that was all that was necessary to save him from future punishment, and for you to carry it through the Union lines into the Confederate lines, is preposterous; it has no foundation of truth, for no General or President nor any other officer would send you on such a mission. Beside if you did gain Richmond you would not be allowed to see any prisoners, unless you yourself was a prisoner of war and sent there for confinement. You cannot stuff such nonsense down a Confederate General and I order you to submit at once to the search of your clothing." Before Miss Armstrong could make any reply General Hill had withdrawn and she was left no other alternative but to obey or die. She was just ready to burst into tears as she reached her tent, when a negro boy edged his way through and handed her some kind of clothing. Susa thanked him and passed into the tent. Soon another officer's wife and a negro woman came in; the woman spoke more lady-like to her and said the General's order must be obeyed and that, at once; so please be kind enough to remove your clothing and don't waste any time, for the General is in a hurry; he is waiting for them. Susa glanced at the clothes the young darky had given her, and saw that they were men's apparel; an old white slouched hat, a pair of butternut colored pants, a hickory shirt, with the sleeves partly torn off, an old vest so dirty and stiff that it would barely stand alone, an old blouse that had been a Union Soldier's, without buttons. Our heroine said not a word, but speedily removed all of her clothing to the very last garment. They searched her person minutely, even compelling her to open her mouth that they might look under her tongue, as if they expected to find some hidden message. They were so afraid the Yankee girl was playing them some trick. But when fully satisfied she had no message concealed on her person, they threw her the garments just described and sent her clothes, watch and chain; everything she had to the General's tent. The officer's wife and the old colored woman remaining with her, while two guards paced up and down one before and one in the rear of the tent, so there was no chance of escape if she had wanted to do so, but she did not. Her clothing was searched but revealed no hidden message, neither did anything look suspicious except the pass and the construction that General Hill had placed upon it; but even that would not condemn her act of coming into the Confederate lines, as she had asked at once, to be taken to General Lee's headquarters.

CHAPTER X

After Susa had donned the man's apparel, she sat down on a cracker-box and looking herself over broke out in a merry laugh. The officer's wife tried hard to look stern, but at last as she glanced up at the pretty Yankee girl in this ludicrous position, could not restrain herself and joined in the merriment and said, "If you dun had some black on your face and hands we us could get a thousand dollars for yer down in the Carolines." Just at this moment the guard called the officer's wife outside and that was the last Miss Armstrong saw of her or any article of her clothing. She sat there until a late hour, when the guard threw her a blanket and she lay down and soon fell asleep, and did not awaken until called by the guard the next morning; he brought her some breakfast which she ate with a relish, though it was not the most elaborate menu. At nine o'clock she was summoned to appear at General Hill's headquarters. When the guard notified her she demanded her clothing, but the guard only laughed at her and said, "Dun know Miss Yankee, specks that am the last you will see of them fine clothes, 'cause I saw an officer's wife have them on this mornin. I specks you'll never see 'em any more; maybe she dun gone, but you must come along." "Oh, I never can go to the General with these clothes on," and Susa gave way to a flood of tears, but it was of no use, for two guards had just entered the tent, and by half dragging and half carrying her, brought her to Hill's headquarters. General Hill and several officers came in to see a handsome Yankee girl that the General said had almost stolen his heart and gone into ecstasies over her tight-fitting suit of grey. He said she had the finest suit that he had seen since the war began, and had described the Yankee girl so minutely that he had the curiosity of the officers aroused. General Hill did not know anything of the change that had so transformed his heroine, but was expecting to see by daylight that lovely creature of the night before. He had sent her clothes back to her with a note that he thought everything would be properly adjusted in the morning, but the note with her clothing had been intercepted on their way back to her tent and were now several miles from headquarters. The reader can imagine the General's surprise and chagrin as the guards came dragging Miss Armstrong into his presence, and also that of his staff officers. Then the truth dawned upon him, as the Sergeant says, "General Hill, dis am your young lady in her night-gown."

The officer's boke forth in one tremendous roar of laughter, which nearly made Susa faint with shame. The General could not suppress a smile, yet he was indignant at the one that had dared to play such a trick on him, and that helpless young girl. As soon as he could be heard, he sternly demanded why the young lady had been brought into his presence and that of his officer's in such apparel. "Dun give it up," says the Sergeant of the Guard. The General then inquired of her why she had put on those clothes. She answered him very kindly, "It was not a matter of choice, but there were no others provided for me as much as I loathed them. They were better than none at all." The General says, "One of the officer's wives promised me to loan you a gown of hers while your garments were being searched. But why did you not put on your own apparel this morning?" "Simply because they were not brought back to me. The Sergeant says that he saw some lady with my suit on and my horse leave camp this morning." Then the General knew that his wife had played the trick on him and the young lady, for his having had so much to say concerning Susa's splendid appearance; consequently he made no further inquiries about it, but said that she would half to remain at head quarters, as a prisoner of war; he would not restrain her or cause her to be kept under guard, at the same time handing her her pass and pardon papers. But while he had been talking with Susa an old, lame, grey-haired, bow-legged darky had come up. He had a gunny-sack thrown over his shoulders with some sow-belly and hard-tack, sugar, rice and a large plug of O. d Navy tobacco, all mixed up together. As he stood leaning on his staff, we will undertake to describe his apparel. On his head he wore a Union soldier's cap with Co. F. V. on the front piece; an old, long black, swallow-tailed coat, covered with grease and dirt, a Confederate pair of pants, one government shoe and one boot, that had belonged to some cavalry man. As he stood there resting on his staff one could see that he was very aged and feeble. He seemed to be waiting for General Hill to get through examining the Yankee girl and did not appear to notice anyone in particular.

The Sergeant was instructed to take no further care of the Yankee girl and she was ordered to report at the Cook's department and there remain until otherwise ordered to leave.

This is Worth Saying

The following simple home-made mixture is said to relieve any form of Rheumatism or backache, also cleanse and strengthen the Kidneys and Bladder, overcomes all urinary disorders, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime.

A well known authority states that these ingredients are mainly of vegetable extraction, and harmless to use, and can be obtained at small cost from any good prescription pharmacy. Those who think they have kidney trouble or suffer with lame back or weak bladder or Rheumatism should give this prescription a trial, as no harm can possibly follow its use, and it is said to do wonders for some people.

Grand Opera House.

At the Grand Opera House, Chicago, beginning a limited engagement on Sunday evening next, February 17, the farce success of a decade, "Mr. Hopkinson," written by R. C. Carton, a well known playwright, author of "Lord and Lady Algy," and "Liberty Hall" etc. will have its first production in that city.

"Mr. Hopkinson" comes with the success of two continents stamped upon it: From England, where it was originally produced at Wyndham's Theatre, London, and where it enjoyed a run of over 200 nights, from New York City where it was given for the greater part of last season first at the Savoy and then later at the Hackett Theatre, where for 210 nights it pleased metropolitan playgoers.

The story of the play told in a nut-shell describes its hero as coming from Tooting and arriving at Mayfair. He was a grocer's assistant and has come into fabulous wealth. He is sent for by an impoverished Duke and Duchess with a view to a marriage with their niece. Ultimately the niece elopes rather than marry Mr. Hopkinson, who is fortunate and unfortunate enough to have found an old acquaintance in her maid, whom he finally marries. Out of this story Mr. Carton has made a clever farce and one which, as already stated, has had both New York and London playgoers holding their sides in unrestrained laughter for many months.

With the production of "Mr. Hopkinson" will come the original English company including Dallas Welford who will be seen in the title role. This comedian has been voted by far the most amusing that England has sent to this country in many a day, and the success he made when "Mr. Hopkinson" was produced in New York first last year would bear out the truth of the statement.
