

Battle Creek's Method of Fighting the M. O. Houses

This Progressive City Does Not Follow Boycotting Methods, But Advertises and Promotes Good Roads—The Practical Plan.

LOCAL INTEREST SHOULD BE AROUSED, FARMERS CO-OPERATION ENLISTED AND JUDICIOUS ADVERTISING ARE IMPORTANT METHODS TO ADOPT HERE.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 5.—For the last year the fiercest kind of a battle has raged in the city between the retail merchants and the big catalogue houses. It has been a much fiercer exchange of hostilities than the sanguinary encounter between rival hordes of redskins, the tradition of which gives the city its name. And the merchants seem to be winning the fight.

Furthermore, the fight is being won without any attack on jobbers in Chicago or elsewhere. The Battle Creek merchants do not believe in boycott methods as advised by Alfred C. Clark, promoter of the Home Trade League of America. They believe in going after the business, and keeping it by enterprising methods. In a small way they are doing what the Chicago Association of Commerce is doing to enlist outside buyers in the home market.

The catalogue houses are fighting hard. This rich farming community with its broad fields of yellow grain—converted eventually into breakfast foods—had been a gold mine for them until an organized campaign by the Business Men's association began to contest the rich field with them.

Then the catalogue houses sent an army of canvassers into the field to supplement the carload of catalogues.

Practical Methods Win Trade

But the business men were equally determined to drive out the invaders. They met cut prices with cut prices. Personal work among the farmers was the next step of the home dealers. They were brought to town, special meetings for their education were conducted and they were treated as honored guests at the headquarters of the Battle Creek Business Men's association.

Finally to bring the people into town the association undertook the making of good roads, seeing in improved highways great possibilities of more frequent visits by prospective purchasers.

The merchants and their highly organized machine never for an instant failed to preach the doctrine of loyalty to home institutions. The local press, largely aided in the crusade; public speakers upon all important occasions never forget to place the issue before the people in a forcible manner, and now the merchants of Battle Creek are reaping the reward of their efforts.

"The catalogue houses have not entirely despaired of doing business in this community," said Secretary John I. Gibson, of the Business Men's association today, "but they have ceased to be a menace. The merchants here can hold their own. They are in a position to compete now."

Gives History of Fight

Mr. Gibson, modest though he is, has had considerable to do with quelling the invasion of foreign merchants who do their business by the long distance system.

He is a young virile man from the north of Ireland, a man of red-dish hair and Vandyke beard, exceedingly energetic. While relating the history of the fight at his office in the association rooms he was interrupted every two or three minutes by telephone messages. While he tried to answer telephone calls, and look over his mail, and tell the story of the year's fight, half a dozen business men came in to consult Mr. Gibson regarding various phases of the work being conducted by the association. The rooms of the Business Men's association in themselves are a revelation of a progressive element of the policy that has been used in the fight.

The rooms, covering an entire floor of the Post building, are arranged for committee meetings, large gatherings and a variety of other purposes, and in the main resemble those of any well appointed club. The reception room is colonial in type and the tapstry upholstered couches that run around the walls form an effective background for the white enamel of the woodwork. Off the main reception rooms are a number of smaller apartments conveniently furnished for the various committees. There is an auditorium with a seating capacity of 500 and back of this is the kitchen. The offices of the president and secretary are commodious and furnished in Flemish oak. A well selected library of the kind that would recommend itself to active business men is another feature.

Value of Farmers' Trade

When the fight began against the catalogue houses a year ago in this city of 26,000 people it was ascertained from the government reports the amount a farmer's family spends a year for things that he cannot raise upon his own acres. The government reports place the amount at $460, but in Calhoun county it was found the amount was larger. It is a prosperous farming community. The people own their own farms. Their estates are well cultivated and well kept. A network of electric lines run through the country. It was estimated that the average farmer's family in this county spent between $700 and $800 for things outside those he could raise on his own land.

And by far the larger part of this annual sum went to the catalogue house of the middle west. For a radius of twenty miles the Business Men's association of Battle Creek made systematic attempts either to secure this business or preserve it to the local merchants of the village. This community, according to the best figures obtainable, spent around $800,000 a year with the catalogue houses.

Obtain Names of Offenders

Agents of the Business Men's association watched the express offices and the freight depots and every package that came from a catalogue house was spotted. In this way there was secured a list of over a thousand who were sending their money out of town for goods that they bought exclusively by catalogue. Strange to say, among the patrons of the catalogue houses were some of the home merchants, who by every law should have been the first to recognize the effect upon the community as a whole. The secretary of the Business Men's association, feeling particularly exercised one day, went to all the local newspaper offices and tried to get one of the papers to publish the list secured with so much care, but the newspapers feared they would lose subscribers if they took so drastic an action. So the list remains among the archives of the association.

The newspapers were willing to print leading articles upon the catalogue "octopus" whose "tentacles" were wrapping about and "slowly crushing the life of the community," and these were continued for several weeks supplemented by lectures. In a short time it became apparent to the spotters at the freight offices and the express office that the people of Battle Creek were buying less furniture, and dress goods, and lawn mowers, and the hundred and one other articles that came into Calhoun county through the medium of the catalogue houses.

Monthly Sales for Farmers

After this the personal work began. It was recognized at the outset that the farmers were the best customers of the catalogue houses. The familiar saying that the Bible and a "catalogue" were on the parlor table of every farmer was literally true about Battle Creek, except that in many cases there was no Bible. Pianos, farming implements, tools, clothing, groceries and everything else that the farmer needed were found to have been purchased by catalogue when Secretary Gibson began to drive about the county.

Without saying too much in favor of Battle Creek or its merchants, Secretary Gibson planned the first of a series of monthly sales for farmers. These, so far as is known, are an institution peculiar to Battle Creek.

Farmers often have stock, vehicles, farming implements and in some cases household goods for sale. Ordinarily these sales are conducted on the farm and a high priced auctioneer is engaged. The farmers' sales conducted by the Business Men's association are held at the west end farmers' sheds, on State street, and the services of an auctioneer are furnished free of charge. These sales are held the first Wednesday of every month except during the harvest period, when the farmer's are too busy to attend them.

After each sale the farmers are invited to the rooms of the Business Men's association and treated to a lunch. After being fed they usually are given a lecture upon some subject of special interest to them—say for example, on the San Jose scale. The lecturer often is furnished by the state board of agriculture, and after this lecture Mr. Gibson usually brings up in an adroit manner the subject of catalogue houses.

Facts to Convince Farmers

Mr. Gibson realized at the outset that all the talk in the world would have little or no effect unless he was able to convince the agriculturists that they could do better with their money in Battle Creek than anywhere else. He took especial pains to do this. At one of the late farmers' meetings, for example, he proved that a club of twenty women that had been buying groceries from a Cincinnati catalogue house, in lots aggregating $80 or $90, could buy them 19 per cent cheaper from Tom Whalen, a local grocer. He had the figures to prove this statement, and the "club" has disbanded. There were some articles on the list cheaper than Whalen could sell them—sugar, for example—but in the aggregate there was no getting around the fact that the club was paying more for Cincinnati groceries than they could be bought for right here in Battle Creek.

Begin Building Good Roads

Several months ago the association became convinced that good roads would bring the farmers into closer communication with the city by enabling them to make more frequent trips. There are thirteen main roads leading into Battle Creek, all of them in poor condition. Two were improved last year by coatings of gravel and this year the association is building a modern and scientific highway to Beadle lake, which will open up a rich farming country to the markets of Battle Creek.

This road is being built under state supervision and the association will claim the state award of $500 a mile, being the first in Calhoun county to be constructed. This will reduce the cost of the association to $4,500. It is the intention to build every year another road until all the thirteen highways are perfect.

RAISULI'S COMPLAINT

Says the Sultan's Treachery Was the Cause of Sir Harry MacLean's Capture.

DECLARES HIM ENTIRELY SAFE

Not Taken Prisoner for Money, but Only for Justice.

Hopes to Get John Bull on the Job of Settling the Trouble—French Troops Moving.

Tangier, Aug. 6.—In a long statement to the correspondent of an English newspaper Raisuli, the Moroccan bandit who is holding Capt. Sir Henry MacLean a prisoner, blames the treachery of the sultan's government for his capture of Sir Harry. Raisuli says that in the course of his negotiations with the man who is now his prisoner, previous to his capture, he explained his grievances, and Sir Harry promised him a safe conduct if he would go to Fez and lay his troubles before the sultan, who would remedy them. He accepted this offer, but while he was block, is one of the most active members of the association.

"There has been a great deal of stuff bought from the catalogue houses in the last year or two," said Mr. Blood, "but I believe we now are educating the people they had better patronize the home market. People around here are a little timid about saying they bought anything from a catalogue house, for the reason they are not popular under the awakened public sentiment.

Objects to False Claims

"Personally, I don't look at the matter from the viewpoint of sentiment, but from a purely business point of view. If a customer can't buy a thing as cheap in my store as he can in my competitor's a little further down the street, why, let him go to my competitor—there's no harm done. But what I object to is the statement made in the catalogue placing the home merchant in a false light—creating the impression he's a robber and the catalogue house is selling the same goods at a much lower rate, which is not the truth."

Charles H. Ashley, a grocer, said catalogue houses from Columbus and Cincinnati still had canvassers in the field trying to sell groceries, but the people were not so easy as they formerly were.

"In the long run," said he, "although people can get some grades of groceries cheaper, they will lose out. They load up on a lot of stuff they don't want and often it is bought of inferior grade. I know of one arranging for the journey government troops, instigated by the sultan's bad advisers, Sidi Mohammed Gabbas, the Moroccan minister of war, and General Bagdani, chief of the sultan's army, plundered and devastated his property at Zinat and captured some of his relatives.

WANTS JOHN BULL TO BUTT IN

That Is Why He Captured MacLean—More Trouble Feared.

In the mean time Sir Harry MacLean had shown him a letter from the sultan promising him safe conduct, but he had also secured a copy of another letter written by the sultan to his minister of war, instructing him to attack Raisuli vigorously unless he went to Fez. This, continues Raisuli, convinced him of the treachery of the sultan, and he therefore made a prisoner of the English caid. Sir Harry, Raisuli declares, is perfectly safe in his hands. He did not capture him for money, but for justice, and this he hopes to secure by calling the attention of the British government to his grievances.

Paris, Aug. 6.—A dispatch received here from Tangier says that Mohammed El Torres, the representative of the sultan in his foreign relations, has sent note to each legation requesting the ministers to take steps to induce their respective countrymen to leave Rabat, as the news received leads El Torres to fear that there will be a massacre there.

The government expects that infantry which embarked yesterday for Morocco will be landed at Casablanca tomorrow and that the artillery and cavalry will be disembarked Friday and Saturday. Germany has assured France of her entire approval of the Moroccan programme. To all diplomatic visitors Foreign Minister Blchon emphasizes the fact that France and Spain will not exceed the terms of the Algeiras convention.

Tangier, Aug. 6.—The Italian minister has been instructed from Rome to present to Mohammed el Torres a formal demand for reparation for the murders of the Italians and the payment of suitable indemnities to their families.

Spanish-American War Vet. Drowned

Arklow, Ireland, Aug. 6.—Thomas Myler, who claimed that he hoisted the stars and stripes over Santiago de Cuba during the Spanish-American war, was drowned off Courtown while practicing for an attempt to swim St. George's channel.

Secretary Wilson Has a Cold

Portland, Ore., Aug. 6.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, who has arrived here, is ill at his hotel and declines to see any one. Jasper Wilson, the secretary's son, said that his father contracted a severe cold on his trip from Puget sound to Portland and that he had passed a restless night.

Ex-Secretary Long Ill

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 6.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy Long, who is slightly ill at a local hotel, is resting comfortably and his physician states that he will be able to resume his journey to Buckfield, his native town, in a day or two.

ROOST BUCHANAN

woman who bought five gallons of molasses and then went to a local grocer and tried to get him to take four gallons off her hands.

"She must have been some relation to the woman who bought a suit of clothes for her little boy from a catalogue house and asked a local clothier to give her a belt for it because she had been a good customer of his."

REPAIR SOMERLEYTON BRIDGE

Benton Harbor merchants have come to the aid of the farmers who reside in the vicinity of Carl and Somerleyton, with donations to assist in the rebuilding of the Somerleyton bridge. The structure which crosses the river at that point has long been condemned and is now in such bad condition that it is positively dangerous. The farmers living in that section have raised one hundred dollars with which to repair it and Benton Harbor merchants, who get the trade of the rural residents that cross the bridge, are adding liberally to the amount.

"Everybody Should Know"

ARKANSAS ORDERED TO HALT

Its Attempt to Oust the Rock Island Road Is Enjoined by a United States Court.

St. Paul, Aug. 6.—Judge Vandeventer, in the United States circuit court, issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the secretary of state of Arkansas from forfeiting the right of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad from doing business in that state. The last Arkansas legislature passed an act providing that any corporation which should commence a suit in the United States court against any citizen of Arkansas or which should remove any suit pending in a state court into the United States courts should forfeit all rights to do business in the state.

Recently a citizen of Arkansas brought a suit in the state courts against the Rock Island road, and the railroad thereupon had it removed to the federal court. The secretary of state thereupon began forfeiture proceedings and they were stopped by the injunction issued here. The injunction will hold matters in abeyance until the authority of the secretary of state can be determined.

OFFICERS GIVE UP ALL HOPE

Benton Harbor, Aug. 5.—The officers have almost given up all hopes of ever being able to apprehend the slayer of little Louise Olsky who was shot at her home at Fairplain a week ago. Since that time, every clue has been run to earth, with nothing more satisfactory than the arrest of Willie Brown, who later proved an alibi.

Anderson, Ind., A Strenuous Town

Anderson is making strenuous efforts to gain new factories and add to the population of the city. The town is being boomed with an earnestness that should bring success.

But it seems that the boosters are having their troubles; that they are meeting the same obstacles that confront all civic projects.

The merchants have been liberal in subscribing to the factory fund and the small property owners have been quick to see the benefits that would come with a greater Anderson.

But the owners of downtown property, secure in the knowledge that they have something that can't be taken from them and satisfied with their earnings, refuse to contribute to the building of the city.

The progressive citizens of Anderson started out to raise a factory fund of $200,000. All went well until the owners of downtown property were approached. Then the campaign for a factory fund received a chill.

The progressive citizens of Anderson are considering different suggestions whereby the property owners may be brought to their senses.

Dowagiac's Way

"Decatur Drunks" is a familiar expression in Dowagiac. If a stranger is seen on the street in a state of intoxication whether his home state is Texas or Vermont, he is immediately pronounced by all who see him, "A Decatur Drunk." They call the evening accomodation the "drunk special" and it is said that the Railway Company puts on extra brakemen for the run from Dowagiac to Decatur.

If some of Decatur's citizens are intoxicated on the streets of Dowagiac, whose fault is it and is it possible that the standard of morals in Dowagiac is so high that not one of its citizens would stagger on the street if left to do as he liked?

The way it looks at this distance is that Dowagiac encourages the liquor trade from Decatur and tries to conceal the fact by ridiculing the customers after their money is in the saloon keepers' till and the saloon keepers' merchandise is in their stomachs.

A Decaturite is seldom molested by the Dowagiac officials, no matter how objectionable is his condition. Dowagiac wants his money and he will come again with more but the average Dowagiac citizen justifies its city by ridiculing Decatur.

If advertising had never been known there could have been no catalogue houses. In some towns there is enough money sent to mail order houses to support one large general store.

Think this over. To keep trade at home you must advertise.

Niles may lose the National Printing and Engraving industry, one of the factories which it has petted and coddled for so long. Didn't Shakespeare write something like this? "Sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child."

Now that the Chapin company has seven million, one hundred thousand dollars to spend, it is to be hoped that it will not become reckless and dissipate.

A CURE FOR HOT AIR

I have found that there is more or less hot air in Buchanan, which sometimes causes a scandal. I here with publish a good cure for it, if the brothers will only follow directions.

Take of Good Nature one ounce; of the herb "Mind Your Own Business" one ounce. Mix this with a little charity for others and two or three sprigs of "Keep Your Tongue Between Your Teeth." Simmer them in a vessel called "Circumspection" for a short time, and it will be fit for use.

Symptoms of Disease.—A violent itching in the tongue and roof of the month, which invariably takes place when you are in company with a species of animals called Gossips.

Application—when you feel a fit of the disorder coming on take, a tea spoonful of the mixture and hold it in your mouth (which you will keep tightly closed), till you get home, when you will find a complete cure has been effected. Should you apprehend a relapse, keep a small bottle about you and on the slightest symptom repeat the dose. A CITIZEN.

Obituary

Mrs. Minnie Moss deceased, born Sept. 2, 1879, Cass Co., Mich., died at Buchanan, Mich., Aug. 5 at 6:30 a.m.

A husband and two children survive her. Also a father, mother, six brothers, three sisters and many friends mourn her loss. She was 27 years old 11 months and 1 day.

Those that saw her in her last days are glad to say that we think she is in a better world than this for she shouted, sang and said she was prepared, willing and ready to die.

Funeral services were conducted from her late home Monday, Aug. 5, at two p. m., Elder Chas. A. Shook officiating.

The Limit of Life

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limitation of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical, that determines its duration, seems to be between 50 and 60; the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to longevity. Young Man Fatally Shot and His Girl Companion Raped and Murdered.

DONA GILMAN CASE RECALLED

This Latest Tragedy Occurs Near the Scene of Her Murder.

Brothers and Younger Sister of the Murdered Girl Held on Suspicion—Other Diabolical Wickedness.

Dayton, O., Aug. 6.—Anna Markowitz, 24 years of age, a pretty Jewish girl, lies dead at the county morgue, her throat bearing the mute evidences of the strangler's death clutch. Her body, bruised and cut, bears evidences of brutal rape. At the hospital with a mortal wound in his abdomen and his head a mass of bruises lies Abraham Gordon, a young traveling man from Indianapolis. Held on suspicion by the authorities at Dayton are James, Jacob and Bertha Markowitz, brothers and sister of the dead girl. This is the situation in a very complex murder case, and one which in brutality and cruelty rivals the fate of pretty Dona Gilman, whose pitiful end was reached but a very short distance from where this latest crime occurred.

Bertha Tells of the Assault.

Anna Markowitz, like Dona Gilman, was raped. But in this latest case there is not that complete absence of clues which has made the Gilman case one of the deepest mysteries of this section. On Sunday Abraham Gordon, sometimes known as Cohan, went out walking along a lonely road near the National Soldiers' home. He was accompanied by Anna Markowitz and her younger sister Bertha. They had walked to a lonely spot when the crime was committed. Two stories, widely different, are told. The story of Bertha when she rushed breathless and terror-stricken to the Soldiers' home was that while her sister, young Gordon and herself were strolling along a secluded path a highwayman slipped unheard behind Gordon and struck him with a blackjack. Gordon, she said, turned about, and as he did so the highwayman shot him in the stomach.

Condition of the Two Victims.

As Gordon fell she says the man made a dash for either herself or her sister. She ran screaming from the scene in terror, leaving her older sister to her fate. Bertha said she did not stop until she got to the Soldiers' home, where she gave the alarm. The sheriff was notified and a posse formed. When they reached the spot of the crime, they found Gordon almost dead. A trail showed where Anna had been dragged. They followed the beaten down path and came upon the body of the girl lying in the weeds. The clothing had been nearly torn from the body. The arms were crowded down over the eyes as if to shut out a horrible picture. There were evidences of a fearful struggle and rape. The girl was dead from strangulation.

Admissions of the Brothers.

The Markowitz brothers and Bertha later called at police headquarters to see what had been learned about the crime. Questioned the brothers are said to have admitted that their mother objected to further attentions being paid by Gordon to Anna. The brothers would not deny that they had followed their sisters Anna and Bertha into the woods when they went in with Gordon.

BRUTE UPPERMOST AT GOTHAM

Eight More Devilish Crimes or Attempted Crimes Reported.

New York, One of the most brutal of recent crimes against women and children has been charged against Luca Fontza, who is locked up at New Brighton, Staten island, accused of raping Antoinette Taluci, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale Taluci, of New Brighton. Fontza and Taluci are both laborers employed at the King plaster mills in New Brighton, and Fontza boarded with the Talucis. Fontza was left with the little child while Mrs. Taluci went shopping. The mother had not gone far from the house when the child's screams brought her back.

When he saw Mrs. Taluci Fontza rushed from the house, Mrs. Taluci following him. Her cries brought out the neighbors and soon a mob was following the fleeing Italian down the street. The pursuers soon overtook the man, and he was knocked to the ground, where he was severely beaten and kicked by men and women until a policeman appeared and with club and revolver fought off the crowd. The child, on the orders of a magistrate, was examined by a physician, who reported that the child was seriously injured. Fontza was held in $5,000 bail on a charge of rape.

Angoline Condanti, a 6-year-old child, was found terribly bruised in a thicket near the village of Linoleumville, Staten Island. She had been raped by an unknown man. John Ambatiro, an Italian laborer, was arrested in Brooklyn on a charge of attempted rape on two little girls, of 3 and 9 years. Daniel Lalor and Frank P. Body were arraigned on similar charges made by two other girls of 10 and 9 years.

Thomas Anderson, a laborer aged 20 years, was arrested in Brooklyn charged with attempt to rape 5-year-old Julia Steischer.

May Mace, a girl of 16, says that while she was standing in the doorway of her home in Seventh avenue Giuseppe Triste, an Italian, approached her and asked her to go with him. She refused. Shortly after he returned and, it is alleged, threw his arms around her. Her screams attracted attention and soon a crowd of 500 men and women were chasing the Italian. He was overtaken and beaten unmercifully until half a dozen policemen rescued him.

Israel Israelson met little Freda Berkowitz, aged 7, in the street and according to her story offered her a nickel to go with him. Her playmates told her parents and a crowd soon gathered about the man. The crowd became threatening by the time an officer appeared and arrested Israelson.

WILL VISIT IN ST. JOE SUNDAY

Kalamazoo, Aug. 1—All plans have been completed by the Trades and Labor Council for its annual excursion which will take place Sunday, August 11. The excursion will be run over the Fruit Belt line to South Haven and from South Haven the trip will be made to St. Joseph by boat. The return will be the same way, giving excursionist a ride by train and steamer.

The excursion is one of the most novel ever given out of this city and without question will be one of the largest. The complete trip includes over 125 miles and the round trip fare is only $1.

Every union in the city is taking an active part in boosting off the excursion.

"Don't let me go to sleep," he repeated. "Don't! Don't!"
"All right," said Oscar soothingly—"all right. We'll look after you."
He fell back on the bed. In the flickering light his eyeballs gleamed.
Then, quite suddenly, he rose to a sitting position again with a wild effort.

"I've got it! I've got it!" he cried.
"Got what?"
"The sleeping sickness!"
The two listeners knew of this strange disease. Oscar had seen a whole village devastated by it, the inhabitants lying about their own doors, stricken down by a deadly sleep from which they never awoke. It is known on the west coast of Africa, and the cure for it is unknown.

"Hold me!" cried Durnovo. "Don't let me sleep!"
His head fell forward even as he spoke, and the staring, wide open eyes that could not sleep made a horror of him.

Oscar took him by the arms and held him in a sitting position. Durnovo's fingers were clutching at his sleeve.

"Shake me! God! Shake me!"
Then Oscar took him in his strong arms and set him on his feet. He shook him gently at first, but as the dread somnolence crept on he shook harder, until the mutilated inhuman head rolled upon his shoulders.

"It's a sin to let that man live," exclaimed Joseph, turning away in horror.
"It's a sin to let any man die," replied Oscar, and with his great strength he shook Durnovo like a garment.

And so Victor Durnovo died. His stained soul left his body in Guy Oscar's hands, and the big Englishman shook the corpse, trying to awake it from that sleep which knows no earthly waking.

So, after all, heaven stepped in and laid its softening hand on the judgment of men. But there was a strange irony in the mode of death. It was strange that this man, who never could have closed his eyes again, should have been stricken down by the sleeping sickness.

They laid the body on the floor and covered the face, which was less gruesome in death, for the pity of the eyes had given place to peace.

The morning light, bursting suddenly through the trees as it does in equatorial Africa, showed the room set in order and Guy Oscar sleeping in his camp chair. Behind him, on the floor, lay the form of Victor Durnovo. Joseph, less iron nerved than the great big game hunter, was awake and astir with the dawn. He, too, was calmer now. He had seen death face to face too often to be appalled by it in broad daylight.

So they buried Victor Durnovo between the two giant palms at Msala, with his feet turned toward the river which he had made his, as if ready to arise when the call comes and undertake one of those marvelous journeys of his which are yet a household word on the west coast.

The cloth fluttered as they lowered him into his narrow resting place, and the face they covered had a strange mystic grin, as if he saw something that they could not perceive. Perhaps he did. Perhaps he saw the simiacine plateau, and knew that, after all, he had won the last throw, for up there, far above the table lands of central Africa, there lay beneath high heaven a charnel house. Hounded down the slope by his tormentors, he had left a message behind him surer than their sharpest steel. He had left the sleeping sickness behind him.

sharpest steel. He had left the sleeping sickness behind him.

His last journey had been worthy of his reputation. In twenty days he had covered the distance between the plateau and Msala, stumbling on alone, blinded, wounded, sore stricken, through a thousand daily valleys of death. With wonderful endurance he had paddled night and day down the sleek river without rest, with the dread microbe of the sleeping sickness slowly creeping through his veins.

He had lived in dread of this disease, as men do of a sickness which clutches them at last; but when it came he did not recognize it. He was so racked by pain that he never recognized the symptoms. He was so panic stricken, so paralyzed by the nameless fear that lay behind him, that he could only think of pressing forward. In the night hours he would suddenly rise from his precarious bed under the shadow of a fallen tree and stagger on, haunted by a picture of his ruthless foes pressing through the jungle in pursuit. Thus he accomplished his wonderful journey alone through trackless forests. Thus he fended off the sickness which gripped him the moment that he laid him down to rest.

He had left it, a grim legacy, to his torturers, and before he reached the river all was still on the simiacine plateau.

And so we leave Victor Durnovo. His sins are buried with him, and beneath the giant palms at Msala lies Maurice Gordon's secret.

And so we leave Msala, the accursed camp. Far up the Ogowe river, on the left bank, the giant palms still stand sentry, and beneath their shade the crumbling walls of a cursed house are slowly disappearing beneath luxuriant growths of grass and brushwood.

CHAPTER XXII.

IN a dimly lighted room in the bungalow at Loango two women had been astir all night. Now, as dawn approached, one of them, worn out with watching, wearied with that blessed fatigue of anxiety which dulls the senses, had lain down on the curtain covered bed to sleep.

While Marie slept Jocelyn Gordon walked softly backward and forward with Nestorius in her arms. Nestorius was probably dying. He lay in the Englishwoman's gentle arms, a little brown bundle of flexible limbs and cotton nightshirt. It was terribly hot. All day the rain had been pending. All night it had held off until the whole earth seemed to pulsate with the desire for relief. Jocelyn kept moving so that the changing air wafted over the little bare limbs might allay the fever. She was in evening dress, having, indeed, been called from the drawing room by Marie, and the child's woolly black head was pressed against her breast as if to seek relief from the inward pressure on the awakening brain.

A missionary possessing some small knowledge of medicine had been with them until midnight, and, having done his best, had gone away leaving the child to the two women. Maurice had been in twice, clumsily, on tiptoe, to look with ill-concealed awe at the child and to whisper hopes to Marie, which displayed a ludicrous, if lamentable, ignorance of what he was talking about.

"Little chap's better," he said; "I'm sure of it. See, Marie, his eyes are brighter. Devilish hot, though, isn't he? Poor little soul."
Then he stood about, awkwardly sympathetic.

"Anything I can do for you, Jocelyn?" he asked, and then departed, only too pleased to get away from the impending calamity.

Marie was not emotional. She seemed to have left all emotion behind, in some other phase of her life which was shut off from the present by a thick curtain. She was patient, and calm, but she was not so clever with the child as was Jocelyn. Perhaps her greater experience acted as a handicap in her execution of those small offices to the sick which may be rendered useless at any moment. Perhaps she knew that Nestorius was wanted elsewhere. Or it may only have been that Jocelyn was able to soothe him sooner, because there is an unwritten law that those who love us best are not always the best nurses for us.

When at last sleep came to the child it was in Jocelyn's arms that he lay with that utter abandonment of pose which makes a sleeping infant and a sleeping kitten more graceful than any living thing. Marie leaned over Nestorius until her dusky cheek almost touched Jocelyn's fair English one.

"He is asleep," she whispered.
And her great dark eyes probed Jocelyn's face as if wondering whether her arms, bearing that burden, told her that this was the last sleep.

Jocelyn nodded gravely, and continued the gentle swaying motion affected by women under such circumstances.

Nestorius continued to sleep, and at last Marie, overcome by sleep herself, lay down on her bed.

Thus it came about that the dawn found Jocelyn moving softly in the room, with Nestorius asleep in her arms. A pink light came creeping through the trees, presently turning to a golden yellow, and, behold, it was light! It was a little cooler, for the sea breeze had set in. The cool air from the surface of the water was rushing inland to supply the place of the heated atmosphere rising toward the sun. With the breeze came the increased murmur of the distant surf. The dull continuous sound seemed to live amid the summits of the trees far above the low built house. It rose and fell with a long drawn rhythmic swing. Already the sounds of life were mingling with it—the low of a cow, the crowing of the cocks, the hum of the netter as daylight lit the life.

Jocelyn moved to the window, and her heart suddenly leaped to her throat.

On the brown turf in front of the house were two men stretched side by side as if other hands had laid them there dead. One man was much bigger than the other. He was of exceptional stature. Jocelyn recognized them almost immediately—Guy Oscar and Joseph. They had arrived during the night and, not wishing to disturb the sleeping household, had lain them down in the front garden to sleep with a quiet conscience beneath the stars. The action was so startlingly characteristic, so suggestive of the primeval, simple man whom Oscar represented as one born out of time, that Jocelyn laughed suddenly.

While she was still at the window Marie rose and came to her side. Nestorius was still sleeping. Following the direction of her mistress' eyes, Marie saw the two men. Joseph was sleeping on his face, after the manner of Thomas Atkins all the world over. Guy Oscar lay on his side, with his head on his arm.

"That is so like Guy Oscar," said Marie, with her patient smile; "so like, so like. It could be no other man—to do a thing like that."

Jocelyn gave Nestorius back to his mother, and the two women stood for a moment looking out at the sleepers, little knowing what the advent of these two men brought with it for one of them. Then the Englishwoman went to change her dress, awaking her brother as she passed his room.

It was not long before Maurice Gordon had hospitably awakened the travelers and brought them in to change their torn and ragged clothes for something more presentable. It would appear that Nestorius was not particular. He did not mind dying on the kitchen table if need were. His mother deposited him on this table on a pillow, while she prepared the breakfast with that patient resignation which seemed to emanate from having tasted of the worst that the world has to give.

Joseph was ready the first, and he promptly repaired to the kitchen, where he set to work to help Marie with his customary energy.

It was Marie who first perceived a [TO BE CONTINUED.]

BRUTE CONFESSES HIS CRIME

That Criminal Wave Is Not Confined to New York, Evidently.

Milwaukee, Aug. 6.—Rudolph Fullweiler, under arrest at Wausau on the charge of murdering 16-year-old Jennie Rehle, has confessed. Fullweiler appeared before Judge Marchetti at Wausau and waived preliminary examination, admitting his guilt and refusing to have witnesses testify. The Wausau authorities will endeavor to have him sentenced as soon as possible, as public feeling against the man has been high.

The crime was one of the most brutal ever committed in Marathon county. Jennie Rehle lived on a farm four miles from Stratford, near Wausau. On June 30 she went to church in Wausau. It was on the way back that she was attacked by Fullweiler who had made previous advances to her. In his signed statement Fullweiler admits committing rape and murder.

"Regular as the Sun" is an expression as old as the race. No doubt the rising and setting of the sun is the most regular performance in the universe, unless it is the action of the liver and bowels when regulated with Dr. King's New Life Pills. Guaranteed by W. N. Brodric, druggist. 25c.
