A Trip Through Western Oregon by Rev. Douglass

Our friend is living on a new place, only a few acres cleared. They are completely surrounded by forest. His farm of 120 acres cost him a little over $600. It is fertile soil. Located near a railroad would be worth five times that price. There were other pieces of land in the vicinity that could be purchased nearly as low. But they are 15 miles from a railroad and it means much hard work to clear the land.

Saturday we helped to raise a barn 30x24. The frame was made of fir poles— the bark peeled off, but unheaved, except two plates. In the woods in that vicinity many fir poles 6 or 8 inches in diameter at the butt, 50, 60 or even more feet long, 3 and 4 in diameter at the top and straight as an arrow, could be found. In our journey we saw many barns and some houses built of poles and split boards, with shingles (split shingles) for the roof. They were truly home-made. It would be very interesting to many of our Michigan friends to see these.

Early Monday morning we resumed our journey. Elmira was the first town passed, there we turned west to begin our climb over the mountains. We had proceeded but a short distance when we struck corduroy road. Then for about 30 miles it was either corduroy or rock, crooked and hilly through a wild, mountainous country over the roughest roads I ever traveled, at least any distance.

Our table for dinner that day was a woven wire spring bed, one end resting on a wagon tongue, the other on a bag of oats, but dinner tasted good. Even a dyspeptic could work up an appetite on such a journey. The only trouble was to get the stuff to eat.

A little before stopping to camp that evening one of the party saw a cougar cross the road in front of us.

We camped in a school ground that evening. Two young ladies of the neighborhood visited us and told how a cougar had been heard back of the school house a year or so before. You may imagine how the women listened

CONSTRUCT NEW CARRIAGE HALL

West Michigan State Fair Erects Fine Structure.

LONG FELT WANT IS NOW MET

Machinery and Dairy Products Will Also Be Given Space in New Building Which Compares Favorably with Any in Country.

On the opening day of the West Michigan State Fair, September 9th, their new Carriage Hall which has just been completed will be dedicated and thrown open to visitors for the first time. The erection of this handsome new structure, which is up-to-date in all its appointments and the equal of any fair association in the country for its size, will fill a long felt want among the exhibitors.

It has been the policy of the directors of the fair ever since its organization to put every dollar of the profits each year into improvements to the buildings and grounds, as the fair is not run as a money making proposition for private individuals, but for the public good. The manner of the expenditure of the profits of last season will certainly please, both exhibitors and fair visitors as well. While the new building will be known as "Carriage Hall," it will not be devoted exclusively to this industry. Exhibits or dairy products and dairy machinery will also be housed there.

Exposition Style Architecture.

The new building is 130 by 220 feet in size and of the exposition style of architecture. It presents an imposing appearance and makes a decided addition to these beautiful fair grounds. It is topped by a total of 26 flag poles each of which will float some kind of a banner or pennant and set off the new structure in fine shape.

The work on the building has been pushed during the summer by a large force of workmen and the inconvenience of putting on the finishing touches after exhibitors have arrived, so common in exposition buildings, will be avoided. The directors of the fair inspected many of the carriage halls of the biggest expositions in the country, and by correspondence and securing the advice of the best architects have built a very creditable structure, embodying all the best features of the up-to-date buildings in other places.

Dairying, a Growing Industry.

Dairying is one of the most important industries of Michigan and one which is having a phenomenal growth in the state. Recognizing this fact the West Michigan State Fair is pleased to give it a just recognition. A portion of the new building will be set aside for the dairy department of the fair and some of the finest specimens of the business from the most enterprising dairymen of the state will be shown at Grand Rapids this year.

The Superintendent of the Dairy Department, Mr. T. F. Marston, of Bay City, has requested the Business Committee of the Fair to construct a "cold room" for his department in which butter, cheese, etc., may be kept cold and hard and seen by the public through the glass sides of the room. This will probably be done and finished before the Fair starts, September 9th.

That a fine exhibit of carriages will be forthcoming is indicated by the fact that as early as August 12 five manufacturers had reserved space in the new building, not yet finished.

Boy Has a Bad Habit.

Gaylord, Mich., Aug. 13.—Gordon Ashman, aged 16, of Boyne Falls, was bound over to the circuit court on a charge of putting nearly 100 spikes on the rails of the G. R. & I. railroad. A serious accident would have occurred if they had not been discovered by track men.

EAT DOGS

And Cut Off the Heads of their Foes—The Igorrotes, a Half-Naked People from the Philippines.

Among the many attractions which are to be presented at the State Fair this fall will be a typical Igorrote Village. The Igorrotes come from the almost inaccessible mountain regions of the island of Luzon, Philippine Islands, over 12,000 miles away, and are counted among the most interesting primitive people in the world.

Their customs are unique and startling.

The eating of dog is one of their principal tribal customs, and is closely associated with their religious superstitions. The flesh of the dog is a delicacy with them the same as chicken is with us, but it is also supposed to have a quality which nerves the warrior for his warlike expeditions. The killing of the dog is always accompanied by the beating of gongs and mysterious songs and dances.

The fighting instinct which is so inherent in man assumes a ghastly form among the Igorrotes. As soon as a warrior kills his foe he immediately cuts off the head with his battle axe and returns to his village. In commemoration of his prowess he then has the right to acquire the headhunter's emblem. A number of days are set aside in happy celebration of the event. Songs are sung in his honor and prayers of thanksgiving are offered to the spirits. Henceforth, the hero is counted among the bravest of the brave.

WHY SO WEAK?

Kidney Troubles May Be Sapping Your Life Away. Buchanan People Have Learned This Fact.

When a healthy man or woman begins to run down without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well.

Alfred Pohlmyre, 296 Front street, Niles, Michigan, says: "My back ached severely and I was unable to lift even the slightest weight without severe pain. My work calls for a great deal of heavy lifting and, of course, as a result, I was greatly handicapped. My back ached across my loins and I was weak throughout my whole body. I applied plasters, used liniments and several remedies. I was about discouraged with the results when a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box and the relief I felt from the first was so great that I continued the treatment and it was only a short time before a cure was effected. I know of other cases of severe kidney trouble, which were cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Market Reports

A SUPERB EXAMPLE

No Liquor Selling at West Michigan Fair This Year.

Now comes the West Michigan State Fair officials, with commendable courage and of their own volition, with an initiative which is splendidly worth the while and which places our annual agricultural and live stock exhibition head and shoulders above any similar enterprise in Michigan.

Well in advance of the opening of the September exhibition and without being egged on by any faction or interest, the officials of the West Michigan State Fair, by formal resolution unanimously adopted, have notified the public that they will not during the Fair permit the sale of intoxicating liquors upon the Fair grounds.

This means a weak of rational, intelligent and companionable pleasure, absolutely free from the maudlin indecencies which can not be avoided at public exhibitions where liquors are on sale. It means that the law-abiding and confident attitude of our Fair officials will appeal to the better class of citizens everywhere, so that our exhibits will be large and of a better variety in every department than ever before. It means that the wide-open policy of the State Agricultural Society at Detroit is putting competition with the temperate, wholesome and law-abiding policy of the Fair at Grand Rapids; that we will have the upright, law-abiding, cleanly citizens of the State as our guests, confident in the guarantee already given that they will not be compelled to suffer indignities of all kinds at the hands of a drunken, licentious, indiscriminate gang of toughs of both sexes.

All hail the glorious initiative of the Directors of the West Michigan State Fair—Michigan Tradesman.

If some one suggests that we can own and operate a gaslight system in Buchanan, don't look wise and say it can't be done. It can. If some good citizens say the park grounds ought to be beautified, agree with them heartily. They are right about it. If someone with civic pride thinks we ought to have a few more street lights, don't sneer and say we can't afford to pay for those we have. We can. If some enthusiast who picks up the ball team and says the games are a good drawing card and advertisement for the town, do not scorn the idea. They are. If you are not progressive and do not stand for public enterprise, do not reek back and declare that you are not a knocker. You are.

Attack Aged Man

Three River, Mich., Aug. 22.—Angered by a discussion during the meal, two boarders, Frank and Chas. Winkler, father and son, assaulted their landlord, Jesse Van Gilder, after arising from the dinner table.

Van Gilder is 79 years of age. He was terribly bruised by a curtain pole in the hands of one them, while the other held him, but will recover. The men were arrested and fined $1640, on a charge of simple assault and battery. They paid and immediately left town to avoid more serious trouble at the hands of Van Gilder's neighbors.

Niles Fireman is Dead

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining condition of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Red Mill

To quote one of the Chicago papers

"The Red Mill has stampeded Chicago."

This magnificent musical production which received its premier at the Grand Opera House, Chicago, a week ago, has undoubtedly recorded the greatest success that has been made by any play of its type in recent years.

Hundreds were turned away at the opening performance and a long line of ticket buyers has been in evidence in front of the box office every day since. Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert have given to the American stage several most delightful offerings but they have never contributed a more exquisite, graceful

Obituary

OSON S. CHAPMAN was born May 6, 1833, in Knox township, Albany county, New York, and died at his home in Buchanan, Mich.,
August 15, 1907 at the age of 74 years,
3 months and 9 days. He was married to Miss Sara O'Hara in Scipio,
New York.

Before coming to Buchanan he was engaged in business at Flemming and Rochester, New York, and Albion and Benton Harbor, Mich., but for the past four or five years has lived a retired life in Buchanan, where he wondered many friends.

The funeral was held from his late home Sunday, August 18, the services being conducted by Rev. F. C. Watters pastor of the M. E. church and the remains were taken to Albion,

STRIKE OF THE TELEGRAPHERS

Government Ownership One of the Weapons Strikers May Use.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—The strike of telegraphers has passed apparently to the phase of a test of endurance, and is being strictly fought by both sides to the controversy. Government ownership of the telegraph lines has been raised as the slogan of the strikers.
President Small issued a circular letter to all the chapters of the Commercial Telegraphers' union and to the Federations of Labor all over the United States, declaring that half of the $20,000,000 fund which labor has undertaken to roll up for the winning of this strike would be reserved for national agitation in favor of the government ownership of the telegraph lines.

Small also sent out another circular pledging the executive board to do all in its power to secure a congressional investigation of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, and requesting all the branches of the union to compile sworn affidavits covering the failure of the companies to handle the public business. These affidavits will include evidence of telegrams paid for in advance by the public and forwarded by the companies by mail.

Both telegraph companies made additions to their forces working the instruments on the floor of the Board of Trade, and the managers said they were in touch with all the principal grain and stock points of the country.
Four men were added to the Western Union staff on the exchange floor, making a total force, with managers, of fourteen, while the Postal opened two more circuits, which made its total force twelve, making a force of twenty-six men in all, where under ordinary conditions 100 operators are employed.

Although it was announced by the union's officers on Saturday that they would issue a call for the cable operators to strike, so far such a call has not been sent out. All union business was suspended by the telegraphers while officers and the rank and file were the guests of Charles Comiskey at the White Sox ball park, where the Sox played the Washington club.

Moreover, she was paralyzed by a feeling that was quite new to her—a horrid feeling that something had gone from her. She had lost her strongest, her single arm—her beauty. This seemed to have fallen from her. It seemed to count for nothing at this time. There is a time that comes as surely as death will come in the life of every beautiful woman—a time when she suddenly realizes how trivial a thing her beauty is; how limited, how useless, how ineffective!

Millicent Chyne made a little appealing movement toward Meredith, who reluctantly stepped back. It was the magic of the love that filled his heart for Oscar. Had she wronged any man in the world but Guy Oscar, that little movement, full of love and tenderness and sweet contrition, might have saved her. But it was Oscar's heart that she had broken; for broken they both knew it to be, and Jack Meredith stepped back from her touch as from pollution. His superficial, imagined love for her had been killed at a single blow. Her beauty was no more to him at that moment than the beauty of a picture.

"Oh, Jack!" she gasped; and had there been another woman in the room that woman would have known that Millicent loved him with the love that comes once only. But men are not very acute in such matters; they either read wrong or not at all.

"It is all a mistake," she said breathlessly, looking from one to the other.

"A most awkward mistake," suggested Meredith, with a cruel smile that made her wince.

"Mr. Oscar must have mistaken me altogether," the girl went on, volubly addressing herself to Meredith; she wanted nothing from Oscar. "I may have been silly, perhaps, or merely ignorant and blind. How was I to know that he meant what he said?"

"How, indeed?" agreed Meredith, with a grave bow.

"Besides, he has no business to come here bringing false accusations against me. He has no right—it is cruel and ungentlemanly. He cannot prove anything; he cannot say that I ever distinctly gave him to understand—ever anything—that I ever promised to be engaged or anything like that."

She turned upon Oscar, whose demeanor was stolid, almost dense. He looked very large and somewhat difficult to move.

"He has not attempted to do so yet," suggested Jack suavely, looking at his friend.

"I do not see that it is quite a question of proofs," said Oscar quietly in a voice that did not sound like his at all. "We are not in a court of justice, where ladies like to settle these questions now. If we were I could challenge you to produce my letters. There is no doubt of my meaning in them."

"There are also my poor contributions to your collection," chimed in Jack Meredith. "A comparison must have been interesting to you, by the same mail presumably, under the same postmark."

"I made no comparison," the girl cried defiantly; "there was no question of comparison."

"She said it shamelessly, and it hurt Meredith more than it hurt Guy Oscar, for whom the sting was intended.

"Comparison or no comparison," said Jack Meredith quickly, with the keenness of a good fencer who has been touched, "there can be no doubt of the fact that you were engaged to us both at the same time. You told us both to go out and make a fortune wherever to buy your affections. One can only presume that the highest bidder—the owner of the largest fortune—was to be the happy man. Unfortunately, we became partners, and such was the power of your fascination—we made the fortune, but we share and share alike in that. We are equal, so far as the price is concerned. The situation is interesting and rather moving. It is your turn to move. We await your further instructions in considerable suspense."

She stared at him with bloodless lips. She did not seem to understand what he was saying. At last she spoke, ignoring Guy Oscar's presence altogether.

"Considering that we are to be married tomorrow, I do not think that you should speak to me like that," she said with a strange, concentrated eagerness.

"Pardon me, we are not going to be married tomorrow."

Her brilliant teeth closed on her lower lip with a snap, and she stood looking at him, breathing so hard that the sound was almost a sob.

"What do you mean?" she whispered breathlessly.

He raised his shoulders in polite surprise at her dullness of comprehension.

"In the unfortunate circumstances in which you are placed," he explained, "it seems to me that the least one can do is to offer every assistance in one's power. Please consider me honest and courageous. In a word, I scratch."

She gasped like a swimmer swimming to shore. She was fighting for that which was dearer than family, her love. For it is not the good women who love, though they understand a host and see the truth. "There were words for me!" she cried. "All that you have told me—and her eyes flashed triumphantly across Oscar—"all that you have promised and vowed was utterly false if you turn against me at the first word of a man who was carried away by his own vanity into thinking things that he had no business to think."

If Guy Oscar was no great adept at wordy warfare, he was at all events strong in his reception of punishment. He stood upright and quiescent, betraying by neither sign nor movement that her words could hurt him.

"I beg to suggest again," said Jack composedly, "that Oscar has not yet brought any accusations against you. You have brought them all yourself." "You are both cruel and cowardly," she exclaimed, suddenly descending to vituperation. "Two to one. Two men—gentlemen—against one defenseless girl. Of course I am not able to argue with you. Of course you can get the best of me. It is so easy to be sarcastic."

"I do not imagine," retorted Jack, "that anything that we can say or do will have much permanent power of hurting you. For the last two years you have been engaged in an intrigue such as a thin skinned or sensitive person would hardly of her own free will undertake. You may be able to explain it to yourself—no doubt you are—but to our more limited comprehensions it must remain inexplicable. We can only judge from appearances."

"And, of course, appearances go against me. They always do against a woman," she cried rather brokenly.

"You would have been wise to have taken that peculiarity into consideration sooner," replied Jack Meredith coldly. "I admit that I am puzzled. I cannot quite get at your motive. Presumably it is one of those sweet feminine inconsistencies which are so charming in books."

There was a little pause. Jack Meredith waited politely to hear if she had anything further to say. His clean cut face was quite pallid. The suppressed anger in his eyes was perhaps more difficult to meet than open fury. The man who never forgets himself before a woman is likely to be an absolute master of women.

"I think," he added, "that there is nothing more to be said."

There was a dead silence. Millicent Chyne glanced toward Guy Oscar. He could have saved her yet by a simple lie. Had he been an impossibly magnanimous man, such as one meets in books only, he could have explained that the mistake was all his, that she was quite right, that his own vanity had blinded him into a great and unwarranted presumption. But, unfortunately, he was only a human being, a man who was ready to give as full measure as he exacted. The unfortunate mistake to which he clung was that the same sense of justice, the same code of honor, must serve for men and women alike. So Millicent Chyne looked in vain for that indulgence which is so inconsistently offered to women, merely because they are women, the indulgence which is sometimes given and sometimes withheld, according to the softness of the masculine heart and the beauty of the suppliant feminine form. Guy Oscar was quite sure of his own impressions. This girl had allowed him to begin loving her, had encouraged him to go on, had led him to believe that his love was returned. And in his simple ignorance of the world he did not see why these matters should be locked up in his own breast from a mistaken sense of chivalry to be accorded where no chivalry was due.

"No," he answered. "There is nothing more to be said."

Without looking toward her, Jack Meredith made a few steps toward the door—quietly, self-composedly, with that perfect savoir faire of the social expert that made him different from other men. Millicent Chyne felt a sudden plebeian desire to scream. It was all so heartlessly well bred. He turned on his heel with a little half cynical bow.

"I leave my name with you," he said. "It is probable that you will be put to some inconvenience. I can only regret that this—dénouement did not come in fact. You need not go away; I will do that."

She listened with compressed lips and heaving shoulders, and the bitterest drop in her cup was the knowledge that he despised her. During the last few minutes he had said and done nothing that lowered him in her estimation—that touched in any way her love for him. He had not lowered himself in any way, but he had suavely trodden her under foot. His last words—the inexorable intention of going away—sapped her last lingering hope. She could never regain even a tithe of his affection.

"I think," he went on, "that you will agree with me in thinking that Guy Oscar's name must be kept out of this entirely. I give you carte blanche except that."

With a slight inclination of the head he walked to the door. It was characteristic of him that although he walked slowly he never turned his head nor paused.

Oscar followed him with the patient apathy of the large and mystified.

And so they left her—amid the disorder of the half unpacked wedding presents—amid the ruin of her own life. Perhaps, after all, she was not wholly bad. Few people are; they are only bad enough to be wholly unsatisfactory and quite incomprehensible. She must have known the risk she was running, and yet she could not stay her hand. She must have known long before that she really loved Jack Meredith, and that she was playing fast and loose with the happiness of her whole life. She knew that hundreds of girls around her were doing the same, and, with all shame be it mentioned, not a few married women. But they seemed to be able to carry

Two Ugly Crimes at Petoskey.

Petoskey, Mich., Aug. 13.—This town is greatly excited over two assaults that have been committed here within a few hours. The decapitated body of an unknown colored woman was found on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railway tracks and there were evidences that the woman had been raped. A man with a revolver entered the home of Fred Mittenberg during the night, chloroformed Mrs. Mittenberg and raped her. There is no clue to the fiends.

Another Disregard of Orders.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—Fifteen persons were injured, one of them fatally, when two cars on the Rapid railway—an electric suburban line running to Port Huron, collided three miles from Algonac. According to Conductor Hasleton, of the north-bound car, the other car did not obey orders as to their meeting point.

HE IS AN AGED EXPLORER

Just Returned, from a Fifth Trip Around the World—Guest of an Indian Prince.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 13.—Dr. J. M. Peebles, a veteran tourist, has just returned from his fifth trip around the world, during which he was the guest of an Indian prince, explored the Fiji Islands to remote interiors, where white men had never before trod, and came back laden with gifts and curios from savage chiefs. Dr. Peebles is 80 years old, but he expects to once more travel the earth's circumference.

The physician left Battle Creek a year ago and went directly to India, where he accepted the invitation of his highness the maharajah of Lagore to be his guest and study the Indian's belief in occult science, of which Dr. Peebles is a student. While there he was co-guest with the ameer Afghanistan. The physician made a study of the peculiar customs of the court of Lagore. After leaving India Dr. Peebles went to Australia and later joined an English exploring party which dared the dangers from savage natives and explored the depths of the Fiji Islands.
