A Smooth Book Agent.

Gets Five Dollars For Books that Can be Bought For Much Less.

A smooth book agent is headed this way and it would be well to keep a lookout for him. He is selling a magazine worth probably a dollar a year and six books for six dollars. The six books for which he receives five dollars can be bought in any first class book store for forty-five cents each, or a total $3.70. It will be seen, therefore, that persons patronizing him are simply handing $2.30 clear profit on every purchase.

The agent has operated in LaPorte and other Northern Indiana towns, and has done a good business at each place visited. It seems that his numerous customers do not wake up to the fact that the books can be secured from home dealers so much cheaper until it is too late. When they do "take a tumble the man simply goes to some other town and cleans up another bunch of money" and so on.

Display will attract attention, but merit must sell the goods.

Romances of Riches in the Mesaba Range

In a recent issue of the Chicago Record-Herald, appeared the following interesting article connected with the story of the Riches of Riches in the Mesaba Range.

The story of the Chapin mine on the Menominee Range is even more romantic. Mr. Chapin, a merchant at Niles, Mich., was induced by a friend to invest a small sum of money in a tract of wild timber land in northern Wisconsin at $1.25 an acre. He got his deeds and put them away and felt rather foolish about the investment. Some years later he failed in business and gave up everything he owned for the benefit of his creditors. He told them about this land and showed them the deeds, but admitted that he didn't know anything about its value and couldn't even tell them where it was located. Rather than go to the expense of getting this information his creditors said they would count that out, and Mr. Chapin put the papers back in his desk again.

Some years later, when he was in the insurance business, a stranger came into his office at Niles and enquired if he was the owner of a tract of timber land in northern Wisconsin. Mr. Chapin confessed that he was, but said he didn't know anything about it. After some further conversation the stranger offered him $10,000 cash for the property. Mr. Chapin could scarcely conceal his amazement, but played for time and further information, until the stranger finally raised his offer to $20,000 cash. Mr. Chapin concluded that he'd better find out something about his property before he sold it and told the visitor so. A few days later he borrowed enough money to pay his railroad fare and went up to look at the land. It was a fortunate journey, and before he returned home he had signed lease with the Menominee Iron Company to operate it on a royalty of 30 cents a ton for thirty years. The lease has since been sold to the firm of which Mark Hanna was the principal member, and Mr. Chapin's children, who live in Chicago, will enjoy a perpetual income of about $60,000 a year from the accidental investment of their father.

SCHAEFER IS GIVEN PAROLE

St. Joseph, Oct. 5.—Edward Schaefer, sentenced to Jackson over four years ago to spend twelve years there at hard labor for the shooting of Johnny Wells returned to his home in this city today, practically a free man.

Schaefer has been paroled by the board of pardons, the prayers of his petitioners granted, and so long as he keeps within the bounds of his parole he is free once more.

The board passed upon the request for a pardon favorably and the first intimation received here of their action was given when Schaefer left the interurban car at Jones street and walked to his home. His many friends here will be glad to welcome him and congratulate him upon his good fortune.

Birthday Surprise

At the home of Mrs. Milton Fuller, Friday evening, there was a gentle rap at the door and in response Mrs. Fuller found some friends with bundles and lunch coming to give her a birthday supper. It was a genuine surprise. Each guest was attired in the latest style of the season. A dainty luncheon was served and the guests remembered Mrs. Fuller with many presents that reminded her of her 49th birthday. A jolly evening was spent. The guests may plan some brilliant surprise when Mrs. Fuller's birthday comes again Oct. 4th, 1908.

In - - - Dormitory 10.

By TEMPLE BAILEY.

Copyright, 1927, by P. C. Eastment.

Betty Belle, coming in that morning from "English two," found on the table in her room in the dormitory a coconut cake, a plate of chicken sandwiches and a card. The card read: "Compliments of Prudence Conway."

Prudence was the colored maid on the third floor of dormitory 10 of the summer school. To be chosen as a pet by Prudence meant many privileges. To the girl she liked she brought unlimited towels, while some less favored maiden might languish with two a week, and now in providing Betty Belle with materials for a mid-night spread Prudence showed evidence of high regard.

Betty Belle was from the south, hence her name. There had been two suits beloved by her mother, and the little girl had been called after them always. Betty Belle wondered why the northern girls thought it funny.

"Well, we don't string ours together that way, as a rule," Drusilla Davis told her. "And I don't believe we place such value on names. But you are a dear, Betty Belle, only you are different."

"How different?" Betty Belle questioned, and Drusilla laughed: "Oh, you are so old fashioned and pretty and serious."

Betty Belle blushed. "You are pretty, too, Drusilla."

Drusilla shook her head. "Not in the fascinating way that you are, Betty Belle."

The scholars of the summer school ate at an adjoining boarding house, and at the lunch table that day Betty Belle told about the chicken sandwiches and the coconut cake.

There were four men at the table scribed the deliciousness the men groaned enviously.

"And we don't come in for any of that?" asked Dick Chase, who had flunked in his studies the winter before and was making up during the summer term. His father was worth a million, and it was hard for Dick to understand why he needed to grind over books.

"I THINK WE COULD BE GOOD FRIENDS IF YOU WOULD PULL UP."

"No," Betty Belle told him; "no men are allowed above the first floor of our dormitory."

"Well, we will serenade you while you are eating it," Dick said.

"Please don't," Betty begged.

"Why not?" Dick asked in surprise. His attentions had always been sought rather than refused, and he had meant that Betty Belle should appreciate the high honor he was conferring.

"It's against the rules," Betty Belle said.

"I shouldn't think you would mind a little thing like that."

"I don't," said Betty Belle, "but you can't afford to lose any standing."

He flushed. "You needn't hit a fellow when he's down. I don't care whether I get through next year or not."

"Well, I do," said little Betty Belle. "You told me about your mother, and I don't think you ought to disappoint her."

Dick's eyes dropped before the clear ones of the little southern girl.

"I shouldn't like to disappoint her," he murmured.

But that night as six girls in all the comfort of dainty kimonos and dressing sacks ate coconut cake and chicken sandwiches with ginger ale accompaniment there floated up through the air the strains of "Dixie."

"There," said Drusilla Davis; "that is in your honor, Betty Belle."

Betty, pink and white and charming in her rosy kimono, tapped a small foot impatiently.

"Well, I wish he wouldn't," she said. Margaret Mills looked at her with raised eyebrows. "Why, Betty Belle Fairfax," she exclaimed, "he is worth a million! Any girl would be glad to have him pay her attention."

"I don't care if he is worth ten millions," Betty Belle returned quickly; "he isn't a gentleman."

The girls looked at her, startled.

"Why, Betty Belle," one gasped, "what makes you say such a thing?"

"He isn't," affirmed Betty Belle, with her head held high. "The gentlemen at my home have consideration for the wishes of ladies, and I told him not to sing. And he has an invalid mother who is just praying for his success, and he is wasting his time. It isn't right; it isn't right!" And Betty Belle clapped both hands over her ears to shut out the strains of "Dixie."

"Some one will tell Dick Chase what you said about him," Drusilla told the small maiden after the other girls had gone to their rooms.

"I don't care," said Betty Belle hotly, but when Drusilla went away she got down at the window and looked out for a long time upon the moon lighted campus.

Then she rose and took the one piece of coconut cake that was left and wrapped it up in a dainty parcel and tied it with ribbon, and in the morning she sent it by Prudence to Dick Chase, with a little note.

"I said things about you last night," was the confession he read in her clear cut writing. "I said you were not a gentleman. Some one may tell you, and I shouldn't like to have you hear it that way. But I didn't think you were courteous to disregard my wishes, and I worried about your mother. I know you won't forgive me, but I had to explain."

At noon on the campus Dick Chase came up to Betty Belle.

"It was right—what you said," he told her soberly. "I've been a fearful cad, and I needed a good jolt."

Betty Belle sat down on a seat under the elms. "You see, I have lots of brothers," she confided, "and I know how mothers feel about their boys—and, then, I couldn't bear to see you going to the bad."

There was a little tremble in her voice, and Dick looked up quickly. "Do you care?" he asked eagerly.

"Yes," Betty Belle told him without coquetry. "I think we could be good friends if you would pull up."

Dick flung himself down on the bench beside her. "I would have to be more than friends, Betty Belle," he said. "I—have grown to think a lot of you; you are so—different."

"That's what Drusilla says," Betty Belle remarked, "and I don't just see what you all mean."

"Well, you are so good and true, little Betty Belle. You make a fellow feel that life is worth while."

That night in dormitory 10 Betty Belle made a confession.

"I am sorry that I said such things about Dick Chase." They were sitting in the dark, and the other girls could not see her blushes. "I was in a-bit of a temper, you know."

"Southern blood?" commented Margaret Mills.

"Maybe," said Betty Belle.

Across the campus they could see the lights in the men's dormitory. In one room a crowd of boys had gathered around a piano, and their voices floated out in a rollicking college song. In another room a lamp with a green shade made a halo around a man's bent head.

"Why, I believe Dick Chase is studying," said Drusilla Davis. "What is going to happen?"

"He is going to turn over a new leaf," said Betty Belle demurely.

Something in her voice made the girls ask in a chorus, "How do you know?"

"Because I am engaged to him," said Betty Belle.

A Madman's Wit.

A Washington educator told a good story about a young medical friend of his who is interested in insanity symptoms and is a sort of amateur alienist. The other day the student got a chance to visit one of the wards in the Asylum For the Insane, and, having heard that there was a man confined there who labored under the hallucination that he was God, the student asked that he be allowed to see this patient first, as he appeared the most promising for investigation. He was taken to the ward where the lunatic was confined, and the following conversation ensued:

Student—Are you the Deity?
Lunatic—From everlasting unto everlasting I am he.

Student—Well, I've been looking for you for a long time. I have a question to ask you. How do you reconcile the doctrines of predestination and free will?

The lunatic drew himself up to his full height and, giving the medico a scornful glance, replied, "My dear sir, I never talk shop."—Washington Star.

What "Constable" Has Meant.

"Constabulary" and "constable" are curious instances of verbal ups and downs in dignity. Literally "constable" ("comes stabuli") means only "stable attendant;" but, with "chamberlain," "steward" and many other names of servants, it became exceedingly dignified when the service was loyal. The constable of France and the lord high constable of England were very great men, and Scotland has still her hereditary lord high constable in the Earl of Erroll. Nowadays in ordinary speech "constable" has dropped again to mean only a policeman, "this lower constableness," as Blackstone quotes from Lambard, having been a derivative of the lord high constable's office "and, as it were, a very finger of that hand." One can never tell where a word will finally arrive "Policeman" and "polician" by origin both mean a man who looks after the affairs of the community.—London Chronicle

New Changes Assures Perpetuity of N. P. L.

Many people are greatly exercised over reports being made concerning the National Protective Legion and the action taken in its last biennial convention.

It is currently stated that the cash dividend of the organization payable each five years, will be materially reduced.

An authoritative statement concerning this society so well known in our place, is to the effect that the cash dividend in future will be declared upon a purely mathematical basis and that the amount to be paid each year will not be known until an actuary shall have made computations to determine it.

In future the dividends will vary each and every year, and the amount paid on each full rate certificate, will be changed to such sum as is the actual increment upon the certificates issued during the year, five years previous, thereto.

This action was in accordance with demands made by the Insurance Department of nearly every state in the union where the Legion does business and it was largely a compulsory change. However the change seems an admirable one, inasmuch as it assures the perpetuity of the society and removes all obstacles exercised by the various Insurance Departments and other officials in authority.

Furthermore, it removes all criticism so freely passed by old line companies.

From its national officers we gather information that they earnestly approved the measure and of its assurance of equity and justice to all the membership. To the public we will also state that 925 representatives were in attendance at the meeting and voted unanimously to adopt the change that was made. From the standpoint of one who carefully reviews the conditions as presented, good judgment indicates that correct action was taken.
