HIGH ADVENTIST IS REPUDIATED

Dr. Kellogg, Head of Sanitarium System, is Expelled From Advent Church

ADVENTISTS IN TROUBLE

Action Probable Marks the Beginning of a Split in the Great Church at Battle Creek—Dr. Kellogg Away—Others Discharged With Him.

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 14.—It was admitted that at a recent secret meeting of the Seventh Day Adventist church, Dr. John H. Kellogg, head of the world system of sanitariums, together with other leading Adventists were expelled from the church. The meeting was held behind locked doors and only such Adventists as were known to the door tenders were admitted.

The expulsion of Dr. Kellogg was based on an interview that Elders Amadon and Bordeau had been commissioned to secure. Their report was to the effect that he spoke of the denominational leaders, particularly Ellen G. White, in a critical spirit.

Members of the church declare that the expulsions are all due to a lack of interest, religiously and financially, displayed by the parties expelled. It is generally conceded, however, as the latest chapter in the split of the church, having Mrs. White on one side and Dr. Kellogg on the other.

This fight will extend to every place in the country where there is an Adventist colony. Mrs. White representing the spiritual development of the church and Dr. Kellogg the medical missionary development.

One possible result of the split will be the organization of a Seventh Day Baptist society, which will include those members of the faith, who accept all theories as to the Sabbath, but will not accept the semi-divinity of Mrs. Ellen G. White, on whose "testimonies" the larger part of the church is founded.

Possibly you can live on peanuts, but why should you when bread made from the Blended flour GERBELLE, made by the GOSHEN MILLING CO., is so much more healthful and tastes so much better? C. B. Treat & Co have it. 86c

A HARD DEBT TO PAY

"I owe a debt of gratitude that can never be paid off," writes G. S. Clark, of Westfield, Iowa, "for my rescue from death, by Dr. King's New Discovery." Both lungs were so seriously affected that death seemed imminent, when I commenced taking New Discovery. The ominous dry, hacking cough quit before the first bottle was used, and two more bottles made a complete cure." Nothing has ever equalled New Discovery for coughs, colds and throat and lung complaints. Guaranteed by W. N. Brodrick, druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Accidents will happen, but the best regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

MONDAY LITERARY CLUB

The Monday Literary Club met with Mrs. Stryker, a full attendance. The president conducted the opening exercises.

Mrs. Grotzer read an interesting article on the "Festival of Mardi Gras," followed by a reading on "Jamestown" by Mrs. J. East. A very general response to roll call, "Current Events" added greatly to the meeting's interest.

Mrs. May Roe led in a "November Day Talk," many pleasing ideas were given and other members presented fine thoughts. A beautiful poem was read which carried us back to childhood homes and reproduced many half forgotten pictures which had been stored in Memory's Art galleries.

The last paper for the day was "Trouble." Its cause was not given as Mrs. Friday was absent. "Its Effects," were given in a most familiar and telling manner by Mrs. Kent. "Its Remedy," by Mrs. Stryker consisted in pouring oil on the troubled effects produced by Mrs. Kent and explaining many things that were deep and dark. If all troubles could be as bright and amusing as Monday's experience, faces would be more smiling and hearts would be lighter.

Mrs. Worthington's Parliamentary drill was most instructive and practical.

Meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Butts November eighteenth.

30 CLUB

The 30 Club met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. W. C. Porter. It was "Discussion Day" and the papers given were all very interesting. Each one being under the question, "Are these a Menace to the Homes?" First, "Hotel and Apartment Life," Mrs. Robert Blake. Second, "Women in Business," Mrs. Ralph Allen.

A discussion led by Miss Artie Logan followed, each member responding with some idea as to "Men's Clubs and Women's Clubs," in regard to the influence each has on the home. This called forth some lively conversation and was very good. Miss Wilcox, who has recently been to a meeting of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs, had some good points to give and her talk helped all to a better understanding of the good influence they really have. Music for the afternoon was a piano solo by Mrs. Glenn Smith.

Roll call was responded to by "What I would do if I were young again" and some of the answers were very amusing. Club adjourned to meet Nov. 20, with Mrs. Chas. Pears.

State Incorporation Too Easy a Method

By Judge PETER S. GROSSCUP of the United States Circuit Court.

IN this country the corporation is a creature of the executive department of the several states and issues out of such department almost as a MATTER OF COURSE. Neither the object for which the corporation is formed nor the amount of its capitalization nor the character of the securities issued commands any preliminary attention other than such as is merely perfunctory.

PUT YOUR NICKEL IN THE SLOT AND TAKE OUT A CHARTER IS THE INVITATION THAT THE STATES EXTEND, AND IN LINE BEFORE THE SLOT MACHINE, ENTITLED, TOO, TO AN EQUAL PLACE IN THE LINE, ARE THE CORPORATE PROJECTS CONCEIVED TO DEFAUD AS WELL AS THOSE THAT HAVE AN HONEST PURPOSE.

For indifference such as that I would substitute at the very threshold of the corporation's application for existence AN HONEST, CAREFUL INQUIRY by some tribunal of government—a tribunal that will act only after it has heard—a hearing in which the public is represented by a district attorney on whom is thus devolved the duty not merely of pursuing the horse after it is stolen, but of seeing to it that the door is locked before the horse is stolen. And what HONEST PROJECT, I ask, can object to such an inquiry?

The corporation as at present organized by the states has license to issue ALL THE SECURITIES IT CHOOSES and all the kinds of securities it chooses, securities whose place in the corporate geologic stratification no ordinary mind can locate, and out of this have come the many instances of capitalizations that serve no purpose other than to EXPLOIT with one hand the consuming public while baiting with the other that portion of the public that with hard earned savings is looking for some opportunity to help itself along in the race of life. No honest project needs license like that. Let the INITIAL SECURITIES issued be related in a fair business way to the actual values put in.

Make the Philippines And Hawaii Neutral.

By Former United States Senator CHARLES A. TOWNE.

THERE can be no doubt that we should take a very active part in the commerce, SOON TO REACH HUGE PROPORTIONS, of the far east. American enterprise will naturally and inevitably seek to do so. The policy of the government must contemplate this. Under no circumstances should we make any disposition of the Philippine Islands that would leave us without a NAVAL AND COMMERCIAL BASE adequate to the protection and advancement of our material interests in the orient.

MY OWN OPINION IS THAT WE SHOULD IMMEDIATELY SOUND THE CHANCELLERIES OF THE GREAT POWERS ON THE SUBJECT OF AN INTERNATIONAL NEUTRALIZATION OF THE ISLANDS. THE ALTERNATIVE TO THE NEUTRALIZATION OF THE ISLANDS IS TO MAKE THEM PRACTICALLY IMPREGNABLE IN CASE OF ATTACK.

To put Subig bay in such a condition would require in the neighborhood of $60,000,000. The same amount would be necessary to put the city and harbor of Manila in a similar situation.

The two places would need to be garrisoned by an aggregate of not far from 75,000 men. I cannot but believe it A MATTER OF PRESSING CONCERN to the statesmanship of the United States that our diplomacy should undertake at once the question of so treating this GREAT SUBJECT as to place it beyond the sphere of a growing national menace.

The same is EQUALLY TRUE OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS. It is substantially true to say that under existing or in all probability proximate conditions no United States fleet could leave either our Pacific coast or the Hawaiian Islands and arrive on the China coast in condition to fight. A NEARER BASE for repairs and for supplies of coal and other necessities is an absolute prerequisite.

Marriage as a Business Proposition.

By EDWARD H. HARRIMAN, Railroad Financier.

MATRIMONY IS NOT ESSENTIALLY A BUSINESS PROPOSITION. IN FACT, IT NEVER SHOULD BE REGARDED AS SUCH. BUT NEVERTHELESS MARRIAGE OFTEN PLAYS AN IMPORTANT PART IN THE RACE FOR WHAT IS COMMONLY CALLED SUCCESS.

I shall tell you what success REALLY is. It is the accomplishment of any one task as well as or better than the same task can be accomplished by another. To the young man who would be a success in life I would give these hints:

Always be courteous, always be friendly, and do the best you can under the circumstances.

Are you married? No? Well, then, YOU SHOULD GET MARRIED SOON. Choose a good woman, a co-operative woman, one who will interest herself in whatever work it may be incumbent upon you to do.

"Forty-five Minutes From Broadway"

CHICAGO MCVICKER'S THEATRE

Geo. M. Cohan's most successful music play, "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" is playing a month's engagement at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, and is filling that spacious playhouse to its capacity. This attraction had the honor of celebrating the golden jubilee of the historic theatre, that notable event occurring Tuesday night, Nov. 5. Mr. J. H. McVicker opened McVicker's Theatre Thursday, Nov. 5, 1857, with a comedy by Tobin, "The Honeymoon" and an afterpiece "The Rough Diamond," and now fifty years after Geo. M. Cohan's fine play rounds out the half century. Emma Carus, one of the popular comedienne of the day, and a woman of delightful personality and deliciously rich contralto voice, is playing Mary Jenkins, the housemaid heroine of the piece, and Scott Welsh, a rising young singer and comedian, is the "Kid" Burns of the cast. Attention to detail, as in all of Klaw & Erlanger's productions, is one of the marked features of the performance.

For the accommodation of visitors from the out-of-town districts arrangements have been made to give three performances of the fascinating play Thanksgiving day. The first begin at 11 o'clock in the morning; the second at 2:30 p. m. and the final performance at 8:15 p. m. By this arrangement people coming to the city in the morning can see a play in the morning; another in the morning and a third at night, giving the sight-seer a feast of theatre-going. The engagement will close Saturday night Nov. 30.

"King John"

CHICAGO GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Everything is in readiness for Mr. Mantell's production at the Grand Opera House, Chicago, next week, beginning Nov. 17, of Shakespeare's "King John." This will be the tragedian's first appearance in this play which has been frequently acted of late, though he has long had the role in contemplation. Mr. W. A. Brady has provided a massive scenic setting for the incidents—in fact it is the most ambitious equipment known to present day Shakespearean performances. During the latter part of the week, which closes Mr. Mantell's notable engagement at the Grand, some of the more familiar plays of his repertory will be given.

This week "Hamlet" will be played Saturday afternoon, and "Macbeth" Saturday night.

FAIR EXCHANGE

A New Back for an Old One—How It Is Done in Buchanan

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so sore to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one.

Henry Finegan, living at 1421 Niles St., St. Joseph, Mich., says: "Some years ago, I caught a heavy cold which settled in my back and kidneys. My back was very weak and at times I would have to support myself with my hands. I was unable to rise from a chair without grasping something to support myself and was hardly able to put on my clothing without assistance. My wife used Doan's Kidney Pills with very good results and I decided to try them. They quickly cured me, and I have never suffered an attack since."

For Sale by all dealers. Price 50c Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WILL NOT STOP FIGHT

Dealers Who Handle Impure Sausage can Expect to be Prosecuted

SAYS STATE INSPECTOR

Announcement That Armour & Company Expect to Start Other Suits Against Dairy and Food Commissioner no Cause for Uneasiness

There is to be no let-up of the War Dairy and Food Commissioner Bird of this state has started on impure sausage. Asked if it was the intention of the department to prosecute the Chicago manufacturers of impure sausage Mr. Bird is quoted as having said:

"I do not know how we can reach these Chicago manufacturers, as they reside outside the state, but we shall prosecute any resident dealer in meats who handles sausage containing cereal or added water as an adulteration. We intend to follow up this work completely. The inspectors have been given strict instructions to look into sausage adulteration closely and if we find that adulterated goods are still being sold we will certainly prosecute."

The report that Armour & Company expect to start other suits against his department gives the dairy and food commission no cause for uneasiness, in fact it is believed he is hoping that they will start without further delay.

The Hoodoo Ring.

By INA WRIGHT HANSON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by Jessie Morgan.

"Pauline, I love you. Will you marry me or won't you?" I made my little speech desperately, with my eyes shut.

The silence was so long that I opened them to find Pauline with her own eyes shut and her lips moving rapidly, but noiselessly.

"What are you doing?" I inquired as calmly as I was able.

"I was saying the protection charm for lovers," she answered, smiling sweetly at me. "It's lucky for you that you asked me today. No more lucky days for me till the middle of next month."

"Oh, superstition, my name is Pauline!" I said fondly. No matter what absurd ideas she had, she was the sweetest girl in the world. "Tomorrow I will bring the diamond," I added after awhile.

"Oh, no, please," she answered promptly. "I should rather have a ruby. Rubies exert a special protection in matters of love."

Next day when I entered the only jewelry store the place afforded I was wishing that my Pauline were not so superstitious. Of course I wanted her to be pleased, but diamonds seemed to me the only gems for betrothals.

When I met her in her garden that night I fancied that she looked pale, and when I gave her the box I thought she seemed on the threshold of tears.

"Open it, heart's dearest," I allured, not without some trepidation.

But she put the box up her lace sleeve and began whispering to me of how she was ever prone to hold her pleasures a little while from her until she had tasted anticipation to the full, and she was so wonderfully entrancing that no mortal man could remember such mundane things as metal or brilliants in the soft symphonies of her feeling-swept voice.

But there was a change in my sweet-heart after that. I had sometimes chafed over the necessity, when we were starting for somewhere and had only a brief time to get there in and had forgotten something, of being compelled, when we returned for it, to sit down till we had counted fifty, but this Pauline always laughingly insisted on.

Now she treated all signs seriously. She no longer laughed when we spilled the salt. She looked at me with fear in her eyes as she threw a pinch of it into the fire. She sometimes cried when I left her, as though my absence were to be an indefinite thing instead of a time of hours, and when I came to her she often rejoiced, as though I were come from a far country, and through all these days she refused to wear my ring. One night I spoke sharply to her.

"Pauline, take my ring from your sleeve, or the corner of your handkerchief, or your pompadour, or wherever you have concealed it, and put it in its rightful place," I insisted.

"It's in the house," she faltered, looking at me with frightened eyes. "I'll get it."

Returning, she placed the red leather box on the arbor table, and with her face wreathed in tragedy she began to talk.

"I looked at the rings in that store before you went in to get it. There was only one ruby, as you know, and I thought it beautiful, beautiful! I had told the man when I went in that I wasn't going to buy, so he began to talk to me. He said he called the ruby his 'hoodoo ring.' He said a young man bought it first for his girl, but she jilted him before she ever saw the ring, so he brought it back, exchanging it for a diamond scarf-pin. Then a man bought it for his daughter's graduation gift, but she died the week before, and he sold it for money to buy the poor child's shroud. Wasn't it dreadful, Harry? Then a mysterious veiled lady said she was going to buy it, but she suddenly disappeared and was never heard of after."

"I went home in a dreadful state of mind. All day I was sending the mental suggestion to you not to buy that ring, but just before closing time I sneaked in to look, and the ruby was gone. I could not bring myself to tell you then that I didn't want it after you had been good enough to please me, for I knew you preferred a diamond, so I said I would forget its history. I compromised with evil and took it, but I have never opened the box."

"You haven't looked at the ring?" I exclaimed.

"No. But just having it in my possession has done such awful things! First my poor kitten ate the poisoned meat, then my best loved vase fell to the floor when no one was near it and broke itself to pieces, I tore my best dress the first time I wore it, and you had the automobile accident."

"But I didn't get hurt," I objected.

"Yes, but it's a warning!" she warned.

"I don't want the ring, and I don't want you to keep it, and it is a shame to make that poor man take it back. Let's bury it somewhere, and you needn't get me another. I will be satisfied without an engagement ring."

Then I laughed. I couldn't restrain myself any longer, and my poor girl's wet eyes looked at me reproachfully. I picked up the box and touched the spring. She gave one long, earnest look at the sparkler, then looked wildly at me.

"Why, it's a diamond!"

I nodded. I could do no more then.

"Is that the ring I have been carrying around or hiding away for two mortal weeks?"

I nodded again, helpless with laughter, and it was not long till Pauline laughed with me. Then she kissed the ring and slipped it on her finger. Next she went to the door of the arbor and looked deliberately at the moon over her left shoulder. Spying a ladder leaning against the wall, she walked under it. A rusty nail showed enticingly in the moonlight, but she did not turn it around. She came back to me, sat down and regarded me gravely.

"I still have an unholy curiosity to know who did buy that ring and what it did to them?" she said mournfully.

"Oh, heart of mine," I crooned, "can it be that you have lived for a whole summer in this place and have yet to learn that that jewelry man is known hereabout as Ananias Jones, although he was christened Henry? He just dotes on talking to pretty girls, and he has quite a genius for story telling. Figuratively speaking, my beloved, he sold you a gold brick."

Pauline sighed and removed her shoes. She placed the high heeled, absurd little articles on the table, regarding them seriously. Then she put them on again, being careful to dress the left foot first.

"There! That's the very worst one of them all," she said in the tone the great man must have used when he had conquered his last world and there were no more of them.

"There's a worse one!" I cried in so mighty a voice that Pauline jumped. "Today week is Friday, the 13th. You wouldn't dare let it be our wedding day?"

I knew it was an unfair advantage, and I was about to take it all back when my blessed girl snuggled herself into my delighted arms.

"I might dare, Harry," she whispered, "but wouldn't you as lief it would be a day sooner?"

Wedding

Stryker-Rice

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Stryker on River street. Tuesday evening, occurred the wedding of their daughter, Ethel, to Mr. R. H. Rice of Niles. It was a very quiet affair, only the immediate relatives of both parties and the G. T. O. B. club being present.

Rev. C. E. Marvin, former pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place, now of Niles, performed the short but impressive ceremony, the ring service being used, after which Mr. and Mrs. Rice received the hearty congratulations of their friends. A dainty three course luncheon was served the guests being seated at small tables in the rooms which were tastefully decorated in smilax and chrysanthemums.

This was supposed to be a regular meeting of the club, of which the bride is one of the most popular members. The girls on entering the house were greatly surprised to find that they were to witness the marriage of their friend. The club sincerely regret to lose Ethel from their number, for as a talented musician she has assisted in the entertainment of their guests at meetings.

Among the relatives present were Mrs. A. O. Stryker, of Niles, grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Irwin, grandmother of the groom, the latter celebrating her 70th birthday anniversary.

Those present from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rice, Miss Ethel Rice, Mr. Carl Schmidt of Niles, Mr. Clarence Stryker, of Detroit, Miss Winnifred Morley, of Elkhart and Miss Carrie Spencer, of Lawrence.

"Suffered day and night the torment of itching piles. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Ointment. It cured me permanently."—Hon. John R. Garrett, Mayor, Girard, Ala.

What Shall We Do With Our Surplus?

By ELLIS H. ROBERTS, Former Treasurer of the United States.

ALL data justify the estimate that the surplus in the United States treasury for the fiscal year to end with next June will be MORE RATHER THAN LESS than $100,000,000. What shall be done about it?

Surely, a surplus is better than a DEFICIT, but the ideal in government finances is a MODEST CREDIT BALANCE. Note that this excess, whether in its own vaults or the banks, brings nothing to the government. It pays no interest. It is as arid and idle as the sand of the Sahara. In the hands of the citizen it would be ACTIVE all the while, would add impetus to enterprise, promote education, be the seed of new riches, lift the level of our civilization.

The defense of free institutions has no clearer axiom than that the people shall keep a CLOSE GRIP ON THE NATIONAL PURSE and provide each year for the want of that year only.

No other way can be devised to correct the evils of excessive revenues than to QUIT DOWN THE COLLECTIONS. Theorists may quarrel over methods for performing this task. Practical economists, patriots who seek the best results will strive to reach the goal by the most direct path. Only one, if any, method can be carried in the coming session of congress, and that is a flat reduction.

A METHOD OF RELIEF SIMPLE AND PROMPT IS TO CUT DOWN THE COLLECTIONS IN THE RATIO THAT THESE EXCEED THE OUTGO. A FLAT REDUCTION OF ALL COLLECTIONS IS A PLAIN, DIRECT PROJECT. THE PRODUCER WOULD GAIN AS WELL AS THE CONSUMER. BENEFIT WOULD ACCRUE AT ONCE ALL ALONG THE LINE. THE INCONVENIENCE WOULD BE OFFSET AT ONCE. WHY NOT LET THE CITIZEN HAVE AND HOLD HIS OWN? HE KNOWS BEST WHAT TO DO WITH IT. AT ALL EVENTS, IT BELONGS TO HIM, TO PLANT, TO BUILD, TO EXPLOIT AS HE PLEASES.

A HARD DEBT TO PAY

"I owe a debt of gratitude that can never be paid off," writes G. S. Clark, of Westfield, Iowa, "for my rescue from death, by Dr. King's New Discovery. Both lungs were so seriously affected that death seemed imminent, when I commenced taking New Discovery. The ominous dry, hacking cough quit before the first bottle was used, and two more bottles made a complete cure." Nothing has ever equaled New Discovery for coughs, colds and throat and lung complaints. Guaranteed by W. N. Brodick, drug-gist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Death is a note made at birth, and no man can escape meeting it in full when it comes up.

It is not so much the being exempt from faults as the having overcome them, that is the advantage to us.

Tired Eyes.

People speak about their eyes being tired, meaning that the retina or seeing portion of the eye is fatigued, but such is not the case, as the retina hardly ever gets tired. The fatigue is in the inner and outer muscles attached to the eyeball and the muscle of accommodation, which surrounds the lens of the eye. When a near object is to be looked at this muscle relaxes and allows the lens to thicken, increasing its refractive power. The inner and outer muscles are used in covering the eye on the object to be looked at, the inner one being especially used when a near object is looked at. It is in the three muscles mentioned that the fatigue is felt, and relief is secured temporarily by closing the eyes or gazing at far distant objects. The usual indication of strain is a redness of the rim of the eyelid, betokening a congested state of the inner surface, accompanied by some pain. Sometimes this weariness indicates the need of glasses rightly adapted to the person, and in other cases the true remedy is to massage the eye and its surroundings, as far as may be, with the hand wet in cold water.

Inventive genius seldom achieves success at the first attempt. A half grown boy in Pennsylvania, who had devoted his leisure hours for many months to the making of a milking machine of his own devising, at last completed it to his satisfaction and resolved to make a trial of it. Without saying a word to any one he carried his machine down from the attic, where he had wrought patiently day after day to bring it to perfection, and took it out to the barnyard, where old Cherry, the family cow, stood placidly chewing her cud, with her big, lusty calf playing round her.

A few minutes later his mother saw him trying to re-enter the house unseen. He was covered with dirt from head to foot and in a state of demoralization generally. In his hand he was carrying something that looked like the wreck of a toy battleship. "For mercy's sake, Jud," she exclaimed, "what have you been doing?" "I've been trying my milking machine on the cow," he said. "Your milking machine? Good land! Did the cow do all that to you?" "No," answered Jud. "Old Cherry would have stood for it all right. It was the calf that—er—kind o' seemed to object to the machine."—Youth's Companion.

The Discovery of Bret Harte.

A copy of the Overland Monthly had fallen into my hands, and I was exceedingly interested in a sketch, "The Luck of Roaring Camp," by an author whose name I had never before heard. I asked Mr. Fields to read it, and he cared more for it even than I, being much older and wiser, and he very soon dictated a letter to Mr. Harte, begging him to send something to the Atlantic. The reply, which came in due time, I think, not only expressed a willingness to become a contributor, but spoke of the writer's probable departure from California. I cannot say how long it was before the Harte family reached Boston and became the guests of Mr. Howells in Cambridge. I only know that it was the time when every man was quoting from "The Heathen Chinee" and generally carrying the verses in his pocketbook. There was, I thought, a good deal of curiosity felt about the office as to the sort of man the suddenly popular author would prove to be. He was found good looking and exceedingly well dressed, extremely self possessed, with a gracefully friendly and even affectionate manner to the new business and literary acquaintances of his own age in the establishment, with whom he speedily became intimate.—Atlantic.

The Poor Service.

Mrs. Ray-Sherashay had just returned from a visit to the foreign cruiser that lay at anchor in the harbor of the great American city.

"We had a fine time," she said. "They showed us all over the ship and paid us every attention. We didn't know they had arranged an elegant luncheon for us, and we were agreeably surprised, of course, when the captain invited us into the dining saloon and seated us at a long table spread with everything that could tempt the appetite. I tell you, Mrs. Upsome, we enjoyed that luncheon. We didn't have to hurry through it either, and we were waited on with the utmost politeness and cordiality."

"The service was first class, was it?" interrupted Mrs. Upsome. "The service?" said Mrs. Ray-Sherashay, lowering her voice. "No; that was nearly all imitation. I give you my word there was hardly a thing worth carrying away as a souvenir. All I grabbed was this little pickle fork, and I do believe it's nothing but plated ware!"—Chicago Tribune.

Changed Faces.

The nose lasts longest unchanged of all the features. The brow becomes wrinkled, and crow's feet gather round the eyes, which themselves gradually grow dim as time rolls on. Cheeks lose the bloom which cosmetics cannot replace and lips their fullness and color. The chin, dimpled in youth, develops angularities or globularities, as the case may be, and the eyebrows become heavy with the crop of many years' growth. The nose shows no mark comparable to these familiar facial indications of the approach of old age and practically enjoys immunity from the ravages which time makes on the other features of the face. Next to the nose, probably the ears, as a rule, show the fewest and least obvious signs of old age.

Fate and the Lemon Pie.

By EMILIE LOVETT.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

All his life, long Dick Hadley had looked forward to the time when, all alone and unmolested, in luxurious ease, with calm oblivion to the world at large, he could sit with undisturbed satisfaction and devour an entire lemon pie.

And now, at the age of twenty-four, athletically broad shouldered and tall, with a face capable of inspiring both trust and respect, a fact which men admired and women loved, he had boarded the fast train at Wash- ington, with its few stops between there and his destination, Laurel, Md., with the long wished for and much thought of treasure in his hand.

Ever and always before had some- thing happened to prevent the realiza- tion of the admirable anticipation. Sun- ny faced reminiscence, with faint fra- grance of blossoms, stole over him as back in the past he saw again the old porch of the southern Maryland home and the group of little sisters and brothers around him clamoring for pieces of the pie which his mother had made for him. And after each little ravenous mouth had been filled what remained of the lemon pie? Only the satisfying remembrance of a generous heart.

Fleet footed recollection bounded swiftly before him, portraying the long forgotten day when in an enviable frame of mind he had seated himself on a bench in one of the apparently deserted squares of the city, when a pale and unkempt newsboy in passing paused, eying him in hungry surprise. And that which remained of the lemon pie was the mark in the book of the recording angel of the spirit with which the donor had given to another in greater need than he.

There had been many other and similar interruptions, but the time which stood out beyond and above all others in shadowy eyed memory was the morning several years previous when in passing through a southern town in winter he had purchased the last and only pie in the one and only confectionery store of the place and when he was about to depart there had entered slowly, indeed almost feebly, a girl whose pale, thin face showed promise of blossoming into rare loveliness with good health and proper environment.

Attired in a long, dark skirt, evidently the property of some one else ere it fell to her lot, and with a shawl of green and blue plaid thrown over her fluffy hair, she had crossed to the counter, addressing a few words to the clerk in a low tone.

"A gentleman just bought the last one," the clerk had replied, and Had- ley, perceiving the blank expression of speechless disappointment, had silently handed to her his treasure, receiv- ing in return a silver ten cent piece.

Frequently since then, as com- mercial traveler, he had passed through the same little town in the south, al- ways looking and watching for the girl whom he intuitively knew to be now the one woman in the world for him.

Fate had always been most unkind, and now all of that dream most per- force fall in line with the procession of other impossibilities and fade away among the soft white clouds in the for- gotten blue of the sky, for Cousin Sophia on dying had just left to Had- ley in her will the entire bulk of her riches on condition-and money meant much to young Richard, with his wid- owed mother and the younger mem- bers of the family to be educated for both the social and business duties of life-that he marry Miss Angela Cath- away of Maine, a wealthy creature and an absolute stranger to Hadley, but who was a daughter of Cousin Sophia's first love. If he failed to win her consent the property and money were to go to hospitals and schools in the Philippines. He was now on the way to meet her at a house party and-

"Hyattsville! Hyattsville!" called the conductor, opening wide the door for ascending passengers.

"Why, Dick Hadley!" cordially ex- claimed a gracious voice in his ear.

Dick inwardly groaned, remembering the unclean pie, as he quickly rose and extended his hand.

Beside his friend, Mrs. White, stood a girl of wonderful grace, richly at- tird with simplicity of elegance in white, her fluffy hair framing a face of rarest beauty. In her large brown eyes were written surprise as they gazed into his own from over the red roses at her throat.

"Miss Cathaway, Mr. Hadley," in- troduced Mrs. White. "Angela, my dear, this is Dick Hadley, son of my girlhood's dearest friend, and I hope you two will become acquainted while I sit with an old friend farther up the aisle."

"Once upon a time," remarked Miss Cathaway as Hadley seated her next to the window, "while visiting an aunt in the south I became ill, and when convalescing the physician in attend- ance consented to my earnest request to be permitted to taste a small piece of lemon pie.

"There was none in the house, and my aunt, who strongly opposed the idea of any injudicious eating on my part, hid my clothes. So, usurping one of her skirts and with the cook's plaid shawl over my head"-Angela paused.

"Yes, yes!" said Richard, his splen- did eyes alight. "And what then?"

"I feebly walked out of the kitchen door and through the back gate to the confectionery store near by, only to find all the pies sold. Imagine my dis- may! The only thing in life I craved-at that time! A gentleman stepped up and offered me his, for which I gave in return a silver dime. It was a lemon pie, deliciously golden, with a golden brown heap frostily arrayed on the top. I have never forgotten the pie. I shall never forget the man," gazing steadily out of the window.

"Would you recognize the fellow?" exclaimed Dick, with pounding heart.

"Yes," replied Angela, with downcast eyes.

"Would you know the dime?"

The girl's eyes flashed indignantly. "Certainly not," coldly.

Hadley took from his pocket his watch, to the ring of which was at- tached a small silver coin.

"See how I treasured it all these years of searching for you. And look," he cried in exuberance of spirits, dis- playing the emblem of bliss from the brown paper bag. "I even go armed with a lemon pie when on a hunt for you. And now that I've found you life seems crowned with"

"Laurel! Laurel!" shouted the offi- cial.

"That conductor is a knowing one," exclaimed Dick.

"Well, have you two become ac- quainted?" inquired Mrs. White, bearing down upon them, noting with sur- prise the radiant face of Miss Catha- way. "You naughty creatures, you've been eating pie and never invited me to a taste. We get off here. Come, Angela, my dear, hurry," she called over her shoulder, "and tell Mr. Had- ley goodbye."

"Never!" said Dick firmly, with de- termined air. "From you to me there shall be no such word as 'goodbye.'"

And to this day Dick Hadley's boy- ish dream of a time all alone and un- molested in luxurious ease, when in calm oblivion to the world at large he could sit with undisturbed satisfaction and devour an entire lemon pie has never been fulfilled.

The Sailor Man.

An old salt who navigates a bicycle when in port was working a rapid pas- sage the other day when he collided with a lady cyclist. After they had extricated themselves from the wreck the sailor made an apology from which she could gather little except that he was sincerely sorry.

"I'm sure I ought to be scuttled for it, mum," he said rapidly, "but I couldn't get yer signals no more than if we were feelin' through a fog bank. I was blowin' for you to pass to port an' steerin' my course accordin'. Just as I was goin' to dip my pennant an' salute proper your craft refused to obey her rudder an' you struck me for'ard. Afore I could reverse your jibboom fouled my starboard mizzen riggin', your flovin' gown snarled up with my bobstay, blew out yer pneu- matic, parted yer toppin' lift an' car- ried away my jacksaddle down haul. As I listed I tried to jibe, but I cap- sized, keel up, an' you were flound- erin' in the wreckage."

By this time there was an interested audience and the girl was mentally de- bating whether she should run from a supposed lunatic or ask for an inter- preter.

But Jack's headpiece was still in his hand and he was not finished.

"I'm hopin' yer not enough damaged for the hospital," he went on, "but I'd be sunk if I wouldn't be glad to stand yer watch till you righted. This here little craft of yours will be as seaworthy as ever when her upper works is straightened out an' we get wind into her sails again. I'll just tow her down to the dock for repairs."

And she smiled an assent-Illustrated Bits.

Conditions Are All Unfavorable For a Panic.

By WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

WHILE there will be readjustments from time to time, I do not look for any GENERAL PANIC, because the indus- trial and financial conditions do not indicate it. We had a panic in 1893 because the prices had been FALLING for a period of years. Securities were decreasing in value, and men could not pay their debts. Today the conditions are JUST THE OPPO- SITE. Prices are RISING instead of falling, and the purchasing power of the dollar is diminishing all over the world. While in some cases speculation may have raised prices above the normal level, the general level of prices is likely to continue to rise, and so long as peo- ple can sell their property for more than they paid for it THERE WILL BE NO PANIC.

When financial institutions have been MANAGED BADLY people may lose confidence in them, but this is not likely to injuriously affect the general public.

Because all immorality in business must finally be punished and because in the punishment the innocent often suffer with the guilty EVERYBODY ought to be interested in preventing business im- morality.

IF NEW YORK FINANCIERS WERE AS ANXIOUS TO PREVENT THESE DISCLOSURES BY PREVENTING THE WICKEDNESS WHICH IS DISCLOSED AS THEY ARE ANXIOUS TO REMEDY THE DAN- GERS AFTER THEY ARE EXPOSED THEY COULD DO A GREAT DEAL IN THE WAY OF RESTORING CONFIDENCE. BUT THEY AL- LOW HIGH FINANCE TO RUN RIOT UNTIL IT DOES SOME DAN- GEROUS THING, AND THEN, THEY TREMBLE FOR THE PUBLIC WEAL.
