CITY CHARTER MAKERS PICK COMMIS GOVT.

More Modern and Elastic Than Board of Aldermen. IS NON-PARTISAN. Use Charters of Three Cities for a Basis.

The broad question of whether Buchanan shall incorporate as a city under the alderman or commission form of government was decided in favor of the latter and more modern form at a meeting of the charter-making body held at the council rooms Monday evening.

Having decided the fundamental question, the charter commission voted that the secretary, A. S. Bonner, be instructed to draw up an outline combining the heads contained in the charters of St. Joseph, Dearborn, and Oscego, which will be taken up in detail at later meetings.

Clark Stage Troupe Gives 3-Act Farce

 least as heavy parts as the play of the "haunted house" on the eve of their wedding day, to make the place their home, despite the warnings of the bride's father as to the spooky nature of the place. Immediately in their wake comes Isabel, a willow sweetheart of the groom, played by Mrs. Wilma Boone, who at once complicates things by threats and is subsequently murdered shortly afterward.
 All three of these players made their first appearance before local audiences. The success of Miss Prosser was one of the surprises of the play, as she had never taken part in dramatics of any form previously, and was a decided unknown quantity in that role. Her interpretation of her rather difficult part fully justified her selection, and definitely placed her as a dramatic asset that the organization may depend on in future performances. C. L. Janning had some experience in dramatics before coming to Buchanan, but had never acted with the Clark Players before. His stage appearance and his interpretations of the varying moods which his part demanded were excellent. In her part as Isabel, the third corner of the triangle and the supposed murder victim, Mrs. Boone had a limited number of appearances and few speaking lines, but was fully adequate to the demands made upon her.

Of the broadly comic parts, E. A. Irwin, a veteran of a number of productions by the Players, was perhaps the distinct bit of the evening in that he met the requirements of his part more nearly than any of the other players. Whether or not Mr. Irwin has any natural talents for the role of a hick dispenser of "half and half," he was certainly able to present an overpowering interpretation of one in last week's production.
 If there were any "flops" in the performance they were presented by A. S. Webb, who portrayed the comic part of the blundering rural constable. Only in this case it was with a difference, as Webb's hops, executed at any and all times when the color or suggestion of black appeared, were among the outstanding comic assets of the production. Webb has appeared in every one of the 26 plays staged by the Clark Players, and as in the case of Hanlin, his audiences have come to expect a lot, and are never disappointed.
 Another "stock" comic part was carried by Arthur Johnston, who had proved his dramatic abilities in previous productions by the organization. In the "Haunted House," he represented the variety of pilfering tramp that infests country places, breaking into empty houses and carrying on miscellaneous petty larceny operations. It is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Johnston depicted the bum as successfully as though he had just been dragged on the stage from the town hose house.

A. B. Muir, who played in the last offering of the Clark Players two years ago, was utilized again in the "Haunted House," playing the part of the swaggering and unheeded detective which is regular "stage property" in productions of the kind. Muir was fully equal to the requirements of his assignment, playing his corner of the crime solution triumvirate with Webb and Hanlin in a manner that contributed materially to the general gladness of the occasion.

While Mrs. Muir was assigned a comparatively minor role as the long suffering wife of the "nut" fiction writer, Duncan, she appeared frequently and always effectively, and her performance was distinguished by a fidelity to her part that added very much to the quality of the entertainment. She also was a "carry-over" from the old organization.

J. A. White was another player who appeared for the first time in the personnel of the Players, taking the part of Evans, the father of the bride.

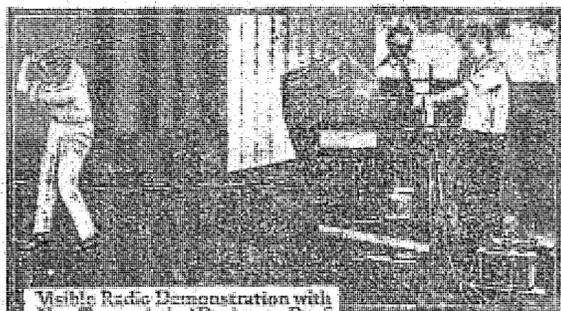

While his part was comparatively minor, the effectiveness with which he "wangled" the role proved him to be another of the dramatic "finds" of the production. Jack Boone in the minor part of Thomas, the chauffeur, played a comparatively non-speaking part, but met the requirements of the role in a manner that fully justified his inclusion in the ranks of the Players.

While one setting, the living room of the "haunted house" served for all three acts, the stage effects were nevertheless of a high order and more difficult than those of many previous plays. For this credit must go to the stage experience of Mr. Hanlin and to the effective work of Jack Boone, stage manager. The lighting work was most effective, especially in the scene scene. George Deming as electrician, proved his capacity in this department.

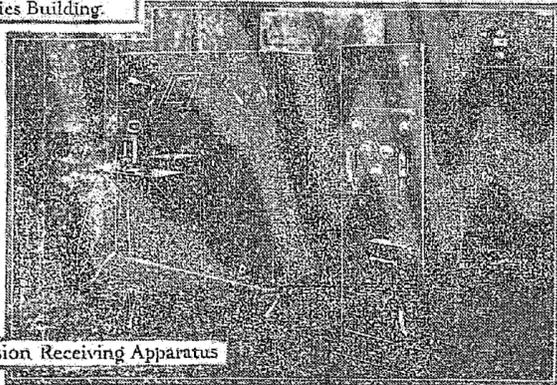

Given the situation of the bride and groom in the haunted house on the eve of their wedding day, with the sudden complications arising from the injection of the former's sweetheart into the situation and the baleful shadow cast over their honeymoon bliss by her supposed murder, the unravelling of the mystery by the three active agents of justice, the author, the detective and the constable, proceeds rapidly and with ludicrous complications to the denouement, when Evans, the father, is proved to be the murderer of—not the sweetheart, but of the milkman's best cow.

The seating capacity of the theatre was almost filled on all of the three nights, in addition to the Saturday matinee, when a good attendance of school children entered riotously into the comedy of the play.

Demonstration of Outdoor Scene By Improved Television Apparatus

Visible Radio Demonstration with New Transmitting Device on Roof of Bell Laboratories Building.

The Television Receiving Apparatus

The Distant Scene is Viewed by Looking into the Opening Indicated by the Arrow.

By DR. R. W. KING
ENGINEERS of Bell Telephone Laboratories, who nearly two years ago gave the first demonstration of television, disclosed some of the further progress which they have made during their continued researches by demonstrating a new transmitting device which is capable of putting upon the television circuit outdoor scenes. On the roof of the Laboratories actors boxed and danced, swung baseball bats and golf clubs to appear in brightly illuminated pictures in one of the laboratories on the eighth floor. The present apparatus differs radically from that of the first demonstration when the scene to be transmitted was illuminated by a powerful artificial light and only the actor's head and shoulders appeared in transmission. With the improved apparatus the scene was illuminated by ordinary sunlight and covered the area occupied by the golfer.

In the first form of apparatus, demonstrated in April, 1927, the scene was illuminated by a rapidly oscillating beam from a powerful arc light, and that limited the scene to be transmitted to a very small area. The new development frees television from one of its most serious limitations. The scene or event to be transmitted is reduced to the form of an image by a large lens, this image being scanned by a rapidly rotating disc similar to but much larger than that previously employed. The lens served somewhat the same purpose in the television apparatus as the large lens of an astronomical telescope, and like the latter it should be large to gather as much light as possible. The experiments show that moving persons and objects can be successfully scanned, although at a considerable distance from the lens, and therefore in such a position that the focus of the lens does not require changing from moment to moment. Light passing through the lens and scanning disc actuates a light responsive device of extreme sensitiveness and generates an electric current which after amplification may be transmitted either by wire or radio. The developments in television which were demonstrated were perfected by Dr. Frank Gray of the Laboratories working in collaboration with Dr. Herbert E. Ives. They illustrate the continued interest and progress of the telephone engineers in the problems of television, but the engineers themselves refused to prophesy as to future developments or applications. They pointed out that the improvement was in the television transmitter and that its use required no fundamental change in the two types of receiving equipment for use by either single individuals or larger audiences which were developed and demonstrated a year ago.

GOOD LUCK ABOUT RAISING CHICKENS

If you would go around to every farmer's place who is raising chickens, even around Buchanan alone, you would soon know why this farmer can do it successfully and that one never does.

There are a thousand chickens raised today in every community which ten were raised a few years ago. There is more money made in this pleasant work today than in any previous year. The demand is greater, prices better. Not only that, but the industry is almost the leading one in agriculture, because the money can be turned over quicker than almost any other agricultural business. Start a brood of chicks today and in less than 40 days time they can be marketed. Marketed at a profit at that, when good, common sense is applied to the job. But good common sense means more to most of us than we are willing to admit.

Now the reason that Mr. and Mrs. "A" can raise good healthy chickens that grow fast and sell at a profit, while Mr. and Mrs. "B" get disgusted and "quit trying" (this happens at least once a year) is because the A's go at it like they do everything else. You can about always find that the fellow who cannot raise at least fairly good chickens have to give up anything else very successfully. In other words, the A's can and do get things done and find a profit made in the end. The B's do not. Now observing the conditions of things the country over, going about from farm to farm, it is easy to find more B's than A's. And without an exception it is always easy to see why they are B's. It is easy for every one who wants to understand to do so.

Reasons. Neglect. Lack of knowledge. Lack of capital. These are the only causes of failure among most poultry raisers who fail.

Neglect is by far greater than any other cause. This statement will be backed up by any authority who you will ask. The time has come when great care must be exercised not only in the starting of chicks but after they are growing. There are several diseases in poultry today that were unheard of a decade back. And the only reason for this disease is unsanitary conditions. Before the big cities adopted their sanitary measures, health boards, laws governing cleanliness, the outbreaks of yellow fever, malaria, typhoid and the many other diseases would wipe out hundreds of people every year. Such outbreaks are seldom heard of since sanitation is respected so highly by all the cities. Where there is no dirt or filth there is no infection of disease germs. Where there are no disease germs to infect, there is no disease. Clean up, burn up, disinfect, fumigate! Change to that policy and see that conditions are always sanitary and most of the problems of chick raising will then solve themselves.

Almost any poultry supply dealer, hatchery, feed dealer or manufacturer will supply you with all necessary information on buying chicks, brooding them and their care. Also the state colleges supply free literature that is good. It is better to under-buy chicks than it is to buy more than you can afford to house, feed, and care for properly. They can't have the best food you can buy; they must have comfort every minute; they must have attention.

Chicks. Buying baby chicks from a hatchery is right in line with modern American progress. Buy your chicks from the producer who's success depends largely on your own success. It is far better to get chicks from blood tested breeders. Most hatchery owners who really are earnestly striving to make their chicks the best to be obtained are doing blood testing, rigid culling, and proper mating. You will not find chicks produced from flocks of this kind offered at bargain prices. You can buy them at a reasonable price, of course, but it costs to build up this extra quality and the chicks have a far greater chance to make fast growth and develop properly. Shipped in chicks cause more failures than any other. In shipping from other localities diseases are brought in that have never been found in the community before. You usually never know who you are dealing with when you trans-

Giant Monoplanes Being Used In Byrd's Antarctic Dash

IN the background above, you see the giant monoplane "Floyd Bennett"—one of the powerful heavier-than-air speedsters Commander Richard E. Byrd has with him on his present dash into the Antarctic. He intends to use this type of machine for getting over the great wastes adjacent to the South Pole where no other means of travel than by air is possible. The portrait in the foreground, of course, you recognize as the intrepid Commander Byrd himself.

act business through the mail. There are many honest hatcherymen, but there are many who are not. The producer who you have reason to believe is interested in your welfare as well as his own, who offers you good thoroughbred stock which he believes will be a boost to his business will do better by you than any other than you can hope to find.

Feeding. Feeding, brooding and general care are factors to have some knowledge about. The literature given free by feed dealers and hatcheries as mentioned in the foregoing is usually always good. Follow the feeding directions of the feed manufacturer and you will obtain better results. Feed very sparingly, however. Do not let the chicks have anything of any kind at all until they are past two days old. Then feed ever so sparingly for the first 16 hours. Four times during the 16 hours. Do not leave mash before them all the time until they are four or five days old. It is better to feed too little than too much. You are not likely to starve them to death. But you can so easily let them have just a little too much. Too much feed in a chicks crop or gizzard means inactivity of the organs resulting in the feed spoiling. Then comes diarrhea, then death.

For big healthy, vigorous, industrious chicks the mash feed seems very dependable if fed rightly. For best results, however, the no-corn granular food is used very extensively for the first few days or weeks. Most of these foods, whether mash form or granulated, contain a high grade cod liver oil and dry buttermilk. With these potent foods included in the ration it is unnecessary to get the chicks out of doors providing the house is clean, light, and roomy.

For a litter on the floor peat moss is recognized as the most desirable. This material is a form of decayed vegetation which is shipped in usually from Holland and Germany. Peat moss will not burn. There is no dust about it. It will absorb moisture so quickly that no dampness can be held to expose the chicks. Its value as a fertilizer for crops exceeds any other form of litter or bedding. Peat moss is four times as absorbent as straw and eight times as much as wood shavings.

Straw, if free from mold, dust, dirt, and chaff, is good for a litter, but should be changed every day. Sand is good if not too fine and if the chicks do not eat it. Some broods of chicks are very peculiar in this respect and sometimes they will gorge themselves until they have their crops full. This is fatal to them.

Observe the brood closely at all times. If they show signs of any craving for certain things do not let them kill themselves. Sometimes, owing to the lack of a certain vitamin or mineral in the ration of the breeding stock, the chicks will react and pursue under the proportions. There has been cases where they craved earth, sand, rotted wood, water, grit. Attention for this during the first few days will show if there is any signs of this among them.

It is an easy matter to raise good healthy chicks. There is a lot of pleasure in it too. There are few persons who do not like to set in a brooder house for an hour at a time and watch them work and play. During the early months it is a most profitable occupation also, because the farm work cannot be started and the spare time can be utilized which would otherwise be wasted.

Dogs Tracking Instinct. In following a trail dogs use more than their sense of smell. This was recently demonstrated in Germany by means of a unique "walking wheel" that produced imitation footprints from models of shoes. As it was rolled along the ground the wheels imprinted realistic tracks, and in a number of tests the animals showed their ability to follow their tracks.

Worship Under Stars
After the chores are done and the rest of the family are safely sleeping, I like to sit out under the stars and meditate. As the air cools after the heat of the day, there is more rest for me in the quiet of the dusk than there would be in sleeping during that time. A few night sounds, like the bleating of a restless lamb or the bark of a distant dog, break the monotony of the insect hum. Sheltered by the old home trees and surrounded by so many objects and sounds grown dear through familiarity, I realize what it means to worship God under our own vine and fig tree. TAXATION STUDY IS PROPOSED BY MICHIGAN SOLON

TAXPAYERS SHELL OUT $100,000,000 PER ANNUM

One provision for the study of taxation which is before the State Legislature follows the suggestion of the Governor, to the effect that a Commission be created, composed of representatives of certain definitely named classes of citizens, who are to take up the subject and, after due inquiry, make recommendations to the Legislature with regard to changes in the taxing laws to meet new conditions and demands. Another purpose is to have a committee of the Legislature itself make a 30-day study of the subject and report to this Legislature.

It goes without saying that the work would be useless. It is not going too far to say that the work of the more leisurely body proposed by the Governor might be equally useless, unless it goes into the subject without preconceived notions and theories, and attacks it only on the program of finding out how much of the net earnings of the people of Michigan can be taken away from them by the state and other governments without doing them economic harm, and having decided how much they may be called upon to surrender, suggesting the easiest and least painful way of plucking the goose to adopt the plesantry of the French statesman who coined the phrase.

Michigan's people, like those of every other state, are called upon to pay direct taxes for three distinct phases of governmental activity. The first of these is the federal government, which takes by way of income taxes, adjusted to the cases of personal and corporate taxpayers, nearly $200,000,000 a year from the people. The second is the state, which takes about $20,000,000 a year in direct taxes and nearly $70,000,000 a year in local taxes. The third is the indirect tax units, the cities, villages, townships, school districts, drainage districts and special assessment districts which, for the general purposes of government, call upon the properties within their limits for annual payments to support the government.

These three claimants of private property for public purposes call upon the properties for more than 400 millions of money each year.

These are the most apparent sums that are asked for, because they are levied directly on all the taxpayers. Then there is another group of taxes that are not so apparent, because they are not paid by the general property owners. They are the special taxes which are levied for privileges, as for instance, the corporation tax, which is laid on, theoretically, for the privilege of doing business as an artificial person. They include consumption taxes, that in particular paid upon the consumption of gasoline for motor fuel. They include the taxes on insurance premiums and those on inheritances. And their total makes a pretty penny at that.

One cannot class the sums paid for licenses as taxes. They aggregate very much in the course of the year, taken as with another, but the rule is that the occupations and pursuits which are licensed, are in some way or another affected with the necessity of regulation by the police power of the state; which does not necessarily mean that policemen supervise them, but that officers of the state acting in the quality of overseers, their oversight being necessary for one reason or another. But the license fees charged for such oversight may not amount to more than the approximate cost of supervision. It may not become so great as to render it prohibitive of the pursuits and occupations which it affects.

From all these sources governmental authorities, federal, state and municipal, take, roundly, 500 millions of dollars from the people of the state of Michigan. Not this amount nearly, if not quite, 70 millions are taken by the state and its agencies. The taking of the rest is not controlled by the state; but any scheme of state taxation which seeks to be equitable and economic must take account of the other forms of taxation, else it may defeat its own purpose by becoming harmful rather than useful. There is a mistaken notion among some tax-layers and tax-eaters that property and the citizen, exist for the convenience and benefit of the state. This is not yet true. It still remains true that the state's organization exists for the benefit of the citizen and of property.

As time passes all forms of taxation come to be out of adjustment to their purposes. Nobody is at fault in this result. It simply grows out of developments of business, the growth of property and the intensification and increase of the number of the functions of the state. But the change does not call for periodical review of the subjects and purposes of taxation with the view of preventing any other than an equal distribution of the burdens and providing for that with such care that the state's share of the burdens shall not be laid in such a manner as either to conflict with the sources of federal and municipal revenue, or to duplicate the purposes for which such revenue is taken, or to interfere with development of industry and commerce within the state. Such interference is quite possible. Michigan is not all of the states. There are 47 others, each a sovereignty, and each with absolute power to levy its own kind of taxes, or not to levy them. As a rule the general scheme of state taxes throughout the country is uniform, or, where it is not, is gradually becoming so by reason of the contentions of state taxing officials and of the economists who give attention to the subject of taxation. This uniformly has the tendency to make it possible to produce in one state about as well as in another, so far as the burdens laid upon production by state taxation are affected.

Each of these conditions, no less than the necessity of providing more state revenue, has a bearing on the subject of state taxation. The state, no more than the individual, can make one dollar do the work of two; and when the second dollar is required, it must find a new source at which to apply for it. So that the source of state taxation must consider the demands made from other sources than itself. The Michigan tax study which is likely to take place, must be a very serious one, with a search for the facts, lead where they will, rather than a preconceived notion to produce certain theories and find facts to suit them. That is not a job to be performed by a legislative committee within 30 days. It may even be a pretty big job for a commission to do in a year.

6 LAKE MICHIGAN CITIES TO ENTER BLOSSOM FETE

BRIDGMAN ARRANGES FOR QUEEN AND FLOAT COMMITTEES

Six cities along the west shore of Michigan have indicated that they will participate in the seventh annual Blossom Festival that will be staged in St. Joseph and Benton Harbor early in May, according to the reports of Ray W. Davis and Harry J. Pound, secretaries of the twin city Chambers of Commerce.

Chamber of Commerce secretaries from South Haven, Holland, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Traverse City and Charlevoix met with Mr. Pound and Mr. Davis at a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce secretaries in Lansing and the representatives of the cities along the coast accepted the invitation extended to their cities.

Kalamazoo and possibly Grand Rapids will take part in the mammoth celebration which is surpassed only by the annual tournament of roses which is staged each New Years day at Pasadena, Calif.

The selection of the blossom queen candidates in the 20 to 30 cities and communities in the southwestern section of the state and in the other cities that will take part in the festival will start this week, according to the chairman of the queen's committee.

A number of ladies will tour the state this week and will instruct the local committees on the methods of picking their candidates. Most of the communities will stage shows in connection with the selection of their queen and the proceeds from the benefits will be used to finance their floats to be entered in the big Blossom parade which will climax the week of activities.

Bridgman, known as the "Biggest Little Town in Michigan," is the first village to get started this spring. They have named their queen committee and their committee to construct their float. Other cities and villages will start their preparations this week.

How much power is in your garden?

NATURE can do only so much with any seed. The seed itself must contain the promise and the power. You would feel convinced of the power of Ferry's purebred Seeds if you could see the great Ferry stock seed farm and trial gardens. Here are acres and acres of specimen plants. Every plant that is mature is big, vigorous, beautiful, and bountiful. Only the best plants are allowed to mature—all else are weeded out. Any plant that doesn't produce true to type gets weeded out. And only seeds from the plants that measure up to the Ferry standards in size, color, flavor, productivity—are the Ferry's Seeds you can buy.

In these seeds is the power to produce flowers of superb beauty, and vegetables of superior flavor and size.

Surely all the work you put into your garden deserves just these seeds. Ferry's Seeds have to be all you expect when you buy them. In addition, they are fresh. No packet of Ferry's Seeds is ever carried over by the dealer for sale the second season. Ferry's Seeds may be had at "the store around the corner." Write at once for the Ferry's Seed Annual—with its good garden advice. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Mich.

Your garden will have its best possible start with Ferry's purebred Seeds.

GAY COLORS IN THE KITCHEN

Colors have been borrowed from the rainbow and manufacturers now are able to supply American homes with gaily colored kitchen utensils. These new products, with both modern and futuristic decorative colors, are being shown in the stores and at the hardware conventions this winter. They have been placed on sale in many places and have attracted much attention.

Color schemes long have been used in decorating and furnishing rooms in the American home, but the kitchen was the last to be given attention. Recent years have brought color schemes for the bath room, fittings are to be found in many colors, one may have just about the color and grouping of colors wanted, and those who have used them find the colors in the bath rooms entirely satisfactory. But the kitchen long had been neglected or overlooked. As a rule bright colors were not found there, dull shades were used, the smoke made them sober and drab. Cooking fixtures and utensils were sober in appearance, entirely unattractive so far as color is concerned. But not so today, with the latest offering from the manufacturer.

The old iron pot, in appearance slightly changed from the days of the Pilgrim Fathers, can be bought in Alice blue shades, or in yellow, green, even the soft pastel shades and, in appearance, shows no kinship to the ancient iron cooking pot. The colander, long a bit of plain tin, can be seen in flaming red or other shades, and so on through the long list of things necessary in the kitchen, to which colors have been carried with many bright and cheery shades provided. The kitchen has been made a room rich and attractive, cheery and delightful, with not a single dull shade left.

A WEAKNESS OF MYSTERY STORIES

We have just read a mystery story which was highly satisfactory up to the very end, when the cunning and brutal murderer, finally confronted with the inescapable proof of his bloody crime, three of 'em in fact, conveniently dropped dead in a painless manner. In real life he would not have done that, although, to be fair about it, in real life he probably would not have been caught and confronted at all. But, since he was caught and confronted, he ought not to have got off so easily. Justice ought to have been done. He ought to have been tried, convicted and led, preferably shrieking or cursing, to the gallows.

Of all the mystery stories we have read, we recall only one in which the murderer was properly punished, and he was only the butler. Suicide is the favorite means of disposing of the monsters in the closing pages and they are always permitted to end all in a swift and easy way, usually by some quick-acting poison. We do not approve of this. We are for the administration of full justice under the law right here in this world to these dreadful creatures of the mystery story, who are no longer satisfied with killing one inoffensive person but put one or more to death in almost every chapter. The mystery story villain is getting worse and worse, more and more dangerous. Where he killed one, he now kills six or eight. We ascribe his cumulative villainy to the author's way of letting him off easily, everything being considered, in the end. We are for dragging him, protesting to the last, to the death chamber. Besides, we want one more thrill before closing the book and turning off the light.

PUBLIC SPEAKING

Former generations produced many effective public speakers who won distinguished honors, wielded an influence that was far-reaching and made their contribution to the richness of public life. In those days there were great debates in both houses of Congress. It is not so today. Congressional debates with an occasional exception hold little to no interest or entertain the public. Few speakers in either house find the galleries crowded when they have a special speech. Legislation is passed or defeated by skillful organization of blocs and combinations and less dependence is placed in the oratory of the principal contenders.

During the present session the widow of former United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew has been a frequent visitor in the senate and house galleries. She must have been deeply impressed with the absence of sweeping oratory. She has made a contribution to found a chair of public speaking in George Washington University at the national capital, with a special department for the use of members of Congress and others who contemplate a public career.

There is much real need for the instruction she seeks to provide. This country today has only a limited number of effective public speakers. Of men who deserve to be classed as orators the list is painfully small. Two or three men in the senate bring the crowds to the galleries, but for others there are few visitors and not many senators are in their seats but smoking rooms are crowded. Those conditions are even more apparent in the house, where public speaking has fallen to a low point.

Absence of effective public speakers may be noted in other activities and organizations. For gatherings of importance the task of finding an attractive speaker is difficult. There are special pleaders, but the brilliant speaker for the public has become rare. Mrs. Depew has offered a service of value to American public life.

CITIZENSHIP AND PACIFISM

Martha Graber, an alien Memmonite, has been refused American citizenship at Lima, Ohio, because she declared her unwillingness to bear arms in the defense of this country if she should be required to in time of war. Her case is similar to that of Rosika Schwimmer, who was refused citizenship by a federal judge in Chicago. In the Schwimmer case the lower federal court was overruled in court of appeals and U. S. supreme court will have the last word.

That federal judges anywhere should insist on this test of citizenship from aliens is puzzling in view of the fact that for generations Quakers in this country, or other religious bodies entertaining religious scruples against war, have been favored by law with exemption from service in at least the combatant branches of the military service. Although Mr. Hoover is not a nonresistant pacifist, he is a member of the Society of Friends and has just been sworn in as president of the United States. With merely such an affiliation, the president is infinitely more dangerous to the military defense of the United States than Martha Graber could be if she were permitted to become an American citizen.

Scruples against killing another human being, whether rooted in religious faith or in moral conviction, are surely in time of peace an admirable qualification for citizenship in a land that has the largest number of murders each year of any country in the world. Even in time of war these nonkillers are not to be feared. When war comes, if they become embarrassingly articulate, the courts have all the law needed to put them in jail.

At all events, naturalized citizens who are conscientiously opposed to killing in principle might well be tolerated in time of peace which after all is most of the time, for the sake of their moral influence in keeping down the homicide rate. It is to be hoped that the United States supreme court will see its way clear to maintaining this view of the national defense.

Criminals and the Law.

The new governor of Missouri recognizes the obligation he owes to the law-abiding people of his state. He has not forgotten the solemn oath of office taken before God and man to uphold the law.

Recently he was requested and urged to commute the death sentence pronounced by a St. Louis court on two bandit murderers. They had taken human life in the commission of crime. They had been tried, found guilty and sentenced. There was no material question of fact or procedure open. They had money, doubtless the proceeds of other robberies, they employed counsel, able and eloquent, to make their pleas to the governor. He listened, as was his duty, and refused commutation because no valid reason was presented. He held the power of commutation was extraordinary, to be employed only when important questions of fact were in evidence. In refusing he said society ought to be protected against gangsters and killers.

All over the country there has been a campaign to secure unusual consideration for criminals, even when taken redhanded in murder and pillage, and forget the consideration officials owe to society. The governor of Missouri did not forget his duty to society. The governor of Missouri did not forget his duty to the law-abiding men and women of his state. He should receive national congratulations on his sound judgment and courage.

Wright Brothers Honored.

Congress has awarded and the secretary of war has delivered the distinguished flying cross honor and medal to Orville Wright. The same honor and medal were awarded posthumously to Wilbur Wright, his brother, who died years ago. It has been established officially and finally that the Wright brothers were the real pioneers in aviation, first to build and pilot through the air a machine that was heavier than air. It was a belated honor but its bestowal was approved by the fair mind of the nation.

Not all inventors live to receive just rewards and honors earned in marking out for humanity a new pathway. There has been much injustice done the Wright brothers during the years of discussion and conflicting claims, when honors, justly theirs, were withheld. One of the Wright brothers did live to see justice done.

John Coolidge impresses us as a young man who would regard the brass-buttoned, gold-braided uniform he has to wear as a member of Gov. Trumbull's staff as just one more burden to be borne, as his father remarked when they came and told him that he had been nominated for the vice presidency; in other words, John impresses us favorably.

The time when we settle back in our chair to listen to a long and detailed recital is when a neighbor woman begins by announcing that words fail her.

A chair of oratory at the university may be all right but we imagine most of the great orators just sore of picked it up as they went along.

The new bloomers are called briefs, correctly enough, and it's only a matter of about four or five inches more, we should judge, to nullies.

Cow Milking.

Stand or Run You're Shot. An Offer for Coolidge.

Why Not Lindbergh?

Farmers will be interested in the "fifty cow milking table." The information comes from Dr. J. H. McNeill, Chief of the New Jersey Bureau of Animal Industry. The milking table is devised by the Walker Gordon Company's New Jersey milk farm.

It is a beginning of industrial methods applied to milk production. A huge table like a small "round house" with fifty absolutely clean stalls on it, is made to revolve, slowly. The cows walk on and off, while the table is in motion, and soon get used to the new idea.

To each cow an electrical milking device is attached as it enters its stall. At the end of one complete table turning, the cow, milked and "stripped," walks off the table at the spot where it walked on, and is immediately fed.

Feed your cows always after milking. Feeding before milking taints the milk. Cows like the milk mass production idea, the relief of milking, followed by the pleasure of eating, makes a pleasant combination.

The Walker Gordon Company, milking fifteen hundred cows in one of its stables, can use several tables.

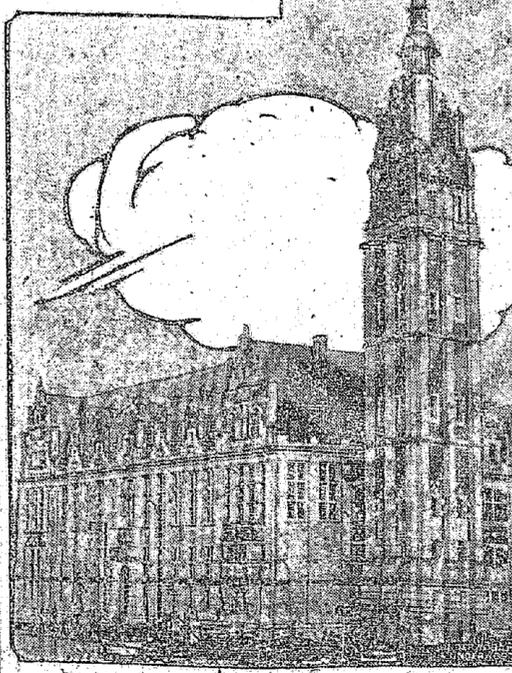

Farmers may take their cows to co-operative milking lines, like the production line in an automobile factory. Workmen will stand still, cows slowly passing them, one man cleansing them of dust by vacuum cleaner, made by Mr. Woolley of the American Radiator company.

Another man would wash the cows' udders, another apply the milking machinery, another meet the milked cow, walking off the line for her dinner.

Such a plan, taking the cow to the man, would put milk farming on a modern industrial basis. The Meet the fever following the chill with medicines which produce profuse sweating; literally "soak" the victim in perspiration. This reddeas congestion of the lung by bringing the blood to the surface. Administer a good laxative as well; I tell my patient to drink all the water he can hold; the juice of four lemons in the first eighteen hours, is a good accompaniment. A big mustard plaster over the chest, at this stage has earned its distinction for usefulness; later it is too late. I am sure I have aborted many cases of pneumonia by the vigorous steps mentioned. Once the disease is established, your management and outlook are conjectural.

I care not what moralists may say, I have found the alcoholic stimulants of great value in the profound weakness of pneumonia, combined with nourishment, especially in aged cases. But the victim is more certain, if we attack before the disease is established.

Old Timer tells of Changes in Local Lighting Systems

Have just been talking to some old friends about the Lights that we have had in times gone by and I think it is worth thinking over for a short time, any way. As far back as I can remember the old kerosene lamps were the light for all places and for all things. Before that of course I only know what I have read about it and heard about it. But the old time candles had about disappeared by the time I came along. But Boy! We sure had some fancy lamps all right. Big fancy things that filled the whole top of the room. I remember they used to have some of them in the Opera House at one time and later they replaced them with big round-wick lamps, and when we had them we thought it was about the last word in good lighting. They threw off a terrible heat, too. I'll tell the wide world, for I used to do all my studying for school work, at night and had one of those fancy "student lamps," which I took with me to Ann Arbor when there to College. It had a dandy deep green shade, (glass) and a sort of tank on the side that held the oil, and it wasn't half bad either, but it sure was hot to have to sit with your head close enough to it so you could see and you just had to "grin and bear it" for there wasn't any other light to be had. I still have my old student lamp, packed away some place and I am sure I am going to get it out and fill it up and read a while by it, to see the difference.

The street lights used to be the same thing, when I was a kid, and along Moccasin Avenue, (which was then called "West St."), there were three or four lamps from 4th Street down to the farm, and it wasn't much help on a stormy night but it was better than nothing at all. I have waded through the snow and rain storms, too, when you couldn't see those bloomin' lamps more than a few rods away, for when the wind was strong, they flickered and almost went out.

And then come the wonderful Arc lights for the streets, that sputtered and made a noise all the time, turning up the carbons that furnished the resistance and made the light. And hogs. Say, don't you remember how, about seven million bugs of all kinds would buzz around those lamps and get buzzed and drop down until the ground would be black with dead ones? The light was usually hung over the center of the street and had a long wire that was kept tied up on the side of the pole and every day John Jarvis would come around and trim the carbons and had to let the lamp down by this rope and then hike it up again and tie the rope up high enough to keep it out of the reach of the kids. When we had the old kerosene lamps, I think it was "Old Man Steele" that used to trim and fill them. From that time on, things began to change faster. Mr. Edison had used the world's first lighter and brighter place and in doing so has made himself a mighty rich man. But that is as it should be. We are fortunate to have lived to see the great evolution in lighting.

Remember the way they lighted the first automobiles that came out. With acetalene gas, and also with "carbide" light. We used to have to carry a can of carbide along with us all the time and if your lights went on the bum, perhaps it was a crust that had formed on the clay burners, and you had to scrape it off with your knife. Then maybe there wasn't enough water in the tank to wet the carbide and you had to find a pump some place and fix that up. Oh, it was a merry chase, all right, but we didn't know anything better and so it was good, we thought.

Sometimes I wish that we could force some of these night hawks on the highways, driving with all their bright lights on, to use some of the old time lights. They sure do blind a fellow. But we have light now and have plenty of it. No excuse at all for any one to have one light "out" and the other side of the car with a bright light, so that when you are meeting them you can't tell which side is which and it is mighty dangerous. I see that the State of Michigan is enforcing the law on that sort of thing and I wish they would do it everywhere. You know Michigan is right in a whole lot of things. I am for it in enforcing the law as the law is made, and that applies to the enforcement of the "18th Amendment" as well as any other law. That is a little off the subject of light but it is on the subject of law and I am for it. I wish we had the same law in Illinois regarding habitual criminals, and then I think a whole lot of our bootleggers would go out of the business, or be more careful what they sold and to whom.

The Chicago Motor Club is doing mighty good work in trying to get legislation regarding lights, etc., on the highways, but it seems that they let mostly anybody drive a car, now-a-days, and it is pretty hard to enforce the law to the fullest extent.

I once attended a dinner, and it was so arranged that each State had a table to themselves. Each State chose its representative from those at their table to respond to a toast to that State when they were called upon. I sat at the Michigan table, of course, and happened to be chosen to make the reply from the toastmaster. So many had made long speeches, that I decided to cut mine short and so when called upon, I said "I come from the State of Michigan, and all I have to say is that is a damned good state to come from." It seemed to hit them about right and has been quoted by others, and I assure you that I never hesitate to say that Michigan is the ground work for good things in all lines. I am for it.

Old Timer.

SENTIMENT IS BUSINESS FACTOR SAYS HUDSON HEAD

COMPANY TO CELEBRATE ITS MAJORITY THIS YEAR

Is there sentiment in big business? Executives of the Hudson Motor Car Company will tell you there is.

This is the "coming of age" year of the company, during which it will celebrate its 21st birthday.

Last year the executives planned to make 1929 the biggest year in the company's history, thus making the "majority year" a real celebration. From the heads of departments down to the men on the production line; field service men, distributors, dealers, salesmen and service men, came pledges to work towards that end.

The first indication that the pledge has been kept was officially made known when thousands of men from all over the country, and from the overseas countries which Hudson-Essex serves, went to Detroit to see what the engineers, artists and workers at the factory had done as their part in that program.

What they saw pleased them. Hudson was introduced to them as "The Greater Hudson. It was more beautiful, had higher standards of performance, was more economical, faster, roomier, more comfortable and had 84 improvements. Essex was christened the Challenger, because, said the men who created it, it could successfully challenge anything in the field, in comfort, speed, roominess, fast get-away, brakes, economy, durability and value. Essex the Challenger had 76 improvements.

The men who were to play their part in the field in making the 21st year a glorious success liked the cars. They undertook to do their part with them.

And here is how they have performed so far:

Within ten days of the introduction of the Greater Hudson and Essex the Challenger, so many orders had been taken that the factory had to go on increased production. The schedule was the largest in the company's history for January. In February it again became necessary to "speed up" production so well were the men in the field doing their job. By the end of the month, 37,000 cars had been produced, the largest February in the company's history.

March started off sensationally, with the factory working at full capacity and turning out 1,900 cars per day. This was speeded up on March 2nd, upon which day a new record was established with 1,928 cars shipped.

Europe was asking for cars at such a rate that an urgent telephone calls came through demanding more cars, although Europe had been selling Hudsons and Essexes in record breaking numbers.

Essex Challenge week found the distributors, dealers and salesmen working at a capacity never before reached in the history of the organization. From coast to coast and from Canada to the Gulf, in metropolitan cities and in farm communities Essex cars were being driven by enthusiastic salesmen to new records in speed, acceleration, hill climbing, endurance, economy and brake efficiency.

Buchanan Youths Offered Chance To Join Coast Guard

An exceptional opportunity is offered young men of the right caliber to complete their education at government expense and to become commissioned officers in the United States Coast Guard, one of the military services of the United States afloat and ashore.

The age limits for appointment of cadets are 18 to 22 years. An applicant who has passed his 22nd birthday is ineligible for appointment.

Cadets are trained and educated at the Coast Guard Academy, at New London, Conn., and each summer are taken on an extended practice cruise. Cadets receive the same pay and allowances as amidshipmen in the navy, $750 per annum and one ration per day, 80 cents.

Upon graduation, after three years at the academy, a cadet is eligible to be commissioned an ensign. Commissioned officers in the Coast Guard rank with officers in the army navy and marine corps, and receive corresponding pay and allowances, grade for grade.

Educational examination for cadets precedes the physical and takes two days. Applicants for cadetship of the required moral character who present satisfactory certificates that they have completed the equivalent of a four year high school course and have received fourteen credits in subjects prescribed by Coast Guard headquarters are required to take a written examination in mathematics, algebra and geometry, history and English. A high school graduate should be able to pass the examination.

The examination is strictly competitive and is open to young men who possess the qualifications with respect to age, education and character. Examinations will be held at such places throughout the United States where it is found practicable to have examining boards and the number of candidates warrant.

The successful candidates who are tendered appointments will be ordered to report to the superintendent of the Coast Guard Academy on or about Sept. 1, 1929. They will be allowed five cents per mile to cover travel expenses from the place of appointment to the academy. Upon arrival at the academy a cadet will be required to deposit the sum of $200 to be applied to the purchase of necessary uniforms and equipment. Pay and allowances received are adequate to cover all expenses while at the academy.

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

WHEN the proud owner of a General Electric Refrigerator takes her friends in to see it, the first comment is "Why it's so quiet—you can barely hear it." The unique construction has established a new standard for quiet operation.

This design, however, accomplishes something even more important. It makes possible the top-unit arrangement. Placing the unit on top makes it possible to enclose all the machinery in an hermetically sealed steel casing. There, always oiled, it remains safe from dust and difficulties. No one can tinker with it—no one ever needs to.

Quietly, economically, the General Electric Refrigerator gives you the perfect refrigeration that does away with food spoilage and safeguards health. It provides a generous supply of ice cubes.

A small amount down and conveniently spaced payments buys any model. Come in today.

Camp Fire Girls Hold Weenie Roast

The Okepe Camp Fire Girls met Thursday at the home of Mrs. Waldo. There were nine present. The secretary's report was given and the check up on middies and "on time" was taken. We discussed our "Count Books" and decided to start making them this week. We also helped our new members toward earning honors, etc.

Our next meeting will be a weenie roast and a hike. We will leave Mrs. Waldo's home at 1:30 Wednesday, March 27. Dorothy Babcock, Scribe.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Within Arm's Reach

In the most modern homes you will find a telephone conveniently near you wherever you may be. The old time reception hall telephone is retained, but, in addition, extension telephones are placed in the bedroom, library, guest room, kitchen and basement, and even the bathroom. A telephone makes any room more livable. You may use it not only to talk to near neighbors and distant friends, but the installation can be made so that it will be possible to telephone from one room to another within your home.

Extension telephones are inexpensive conveniences which are becoming more and more popular. There are portable telephones, too, that can be moved from room to room. We will be glad to have a representative explain to you just how these modern telephone facilities can be applied to your own home, at moderate cost. Call the Telephone Manager.

The Motorist Will Stop for the Signal Light at the Street Intersection Where He Will Not Slow Down for Oncoming Train

It is one of the strange experiences of railroads in dealing with traffic at the highway crossing that a large number of motor-vehicle drivers are indifferent to all danger.

It is an anomaly of this situation that the motorist will stop for the red light at the street intersection, where he will give no heed whatever to the signal at the railroad crossing on the highway.

DANGER lurks around the corner in both places. BEHIND the automatic signal at the street intersection there is generally the police officer and the police ordinance with its inevitable fine to back its message.

BEHIND the automatic signal or the crossing watchman there usually is no such force of law, but there may be injury or death.

THE Motorist, through some perversity in make-up, stops at the Street Intersection for the Signal Light which indicates possible peril or a police court fine, where he often will not be awed by the oncoming train with its infinitely greater danger in the event of a mishap.

TOO often this certain type of motorist seems to set a higher value on his pocketbook than on his life.

THE American railroads are doing everything within their power to prevent casualties at the crossings.

THE American railroads have not the money to eliminate all of the grade crossings, for this would involve $20,000,000 additional investment.

ELIMINATION of crossings would not be necessary, if the motorist and others were made to take reasonable care in crossing railroad tracks at grade.

PUBLIC authorities, including the Police, State Troopers and Village Marshals—as well as the Newspapers—should take an aggressive interest in any policy that makes for obedience to the railroad crossing signal.

NEWSPAPERS should constantly impress upon all the importance of observing signal indications.

THE caution so given by public authority—or the warning so sounded by the newspapers—may save a life—or many lives. AFTER all the saving of a citizen's life alone, pays a big return on the good work so done, whether the result arises from individual or co-operative action.
