'Way Back in the 1790's

President Washington urged a practice of thrift, not only by the infant government but by the nation as a whole. His own life reflects his faith in its benefits—and time has borne him out. That we are a thrifty nation today is evidenced by the fact that there are more than 53,000,000 savings depositors, and the average account amounts to well over $500.

Perhaps, if you have no Savings Account, it would be well for you to join this vast army of savers who are furthering their own and America's prosperity.

How Do You Choose?

Every time you make a purchase you make a choice. Buying a certain product may be so much a matter of habit that you don't realize you are choosing. But the fact remains that in accepting one brand of goods you are always rejecting others; and the satisfaction you get from what you buy depends on the knowledge of quality and value that guides your selection.

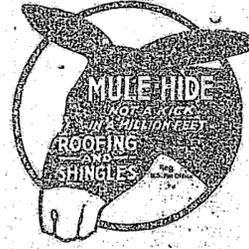

How do you know which bed sheets, or which roofing material, or which radio will give you the service you require? You can't personally test everything you buy and compare it with all the other products in its class. But there is a way to find out which brand fits your needs.

The people who are most successful in their buying—who achieve the highest percentage of satisfaction from the things they own and use—are those who consistently read the advertising columns, and buy consistently advertised goods.

Choosing isn't just "guessing" when you follow the guidance of the advertisements.

YOU CAN DEPEND ON ADVERTISED GOODS. IT PAYS TO READ THE ADVERTISEMENTS.

I became so ill that I could not eat anything but toast and milk and for a long time lived on milk alone. I became very nervous. After the first bottle I could notice a change for the better, and I kept on until I had taken eight bottles. By that time my health was restored. # The Old Timer's Corner

Mrs. Winch Tells of Early Buchanan Church Services

Dear Old Timers, Corner readers of 1930:

Another year and I am here. Nearly 80 years ago when we moved to Moccasin Bluff the Buchanan Methodist church was a circuit-riding one. I do not know its extent. A married man with children occupied the parsonage across Second Street from where, later, the old brick schoolhouse was built. His name was Osborne. His colleague in riding the circuit was an unmarried man named Lee. My father was made the class leader. The two ministers came to our house one day. According to our "raisin" to reverence the "cloth" Oren and John and I cracked butternuts, hickory nuts and walnuts and carried a half tea cup full of kernels (laboriously picked out to each one. Mr. Lee said, "No, I never eat anything children have handled." Even a little bit is less safe than to destroy a child's confidence. We knew who said, "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

But we lost confidence in his professed follower. Little "hilly-billys" as we were, we felt insulted. The Presbyterian minister at that time in Buchanan, was Mr. Parry, a kindly man with a kindly wife. The United Brethren had a church but I do not remember the early ministers there. At that time the men sat on one side of the church and the women on the other. One of my earliest speculations was why there were no bald headed men on their side of the church as there had been many in the York state "meeting house."

Evidently the advice of Greeley, "young man go west", had a following in Buchanan. We were two weeks on the vessel from Oswego to Detroit in 1850. A cousin in Detroit met us. He gave us each an orange, the first we had ever seen. In 1850 tropical or semi-tropical products came from across the seas. Mother carefully divided the oranges, one at a time, among us. Years afterward, the taste of an orange revived the memory and taste of the orange in Detroit.

Strange is the economy of our being, that a taste, an old song or a wail of half forgotten fragrance should accelerate the heart beats and open the doors of memories store house. These stories in old timers corner seem to take small account of time or space or place. They lack sequence quite decided. But my hobby, Berrien County reminiscences, will wobble entirely out of line, so that I often get off the reservation. And yet I always wander back to Buchanan and its close in surroundings.

I was a very gad-a-bout little girl. As a small child I knew more neighbors and knew them so easy to "stop in" coming home from school. Nearly all of them, were really companions. I often sat on the topmost round of their hospitality in reception and entertainment. One of my best loved ones was a woman who lived alone with an idiot son. He was a man in years, but could not feed, nor dress himself. He had never spoken a word. He wore only one garment. A wadded one in winter and a long cotton one in summer. He slept in a trundle bed so that she might lift him into bed and out again. They lived in a log house about two miles from Buchanan. Afterward the place was the site of "Charley" Roe's sawmill. Then she moved somewhat farther into the wilderness into another log house. She told me such good stories. I told her all of the family history I knew. She told me that once her husband went to mill or to town, on a two-day trip. She drew in the latch string for protection against predatory Indians, who sometimes molested white settlers. In the night a maudlin Indian tried and did break down the door. Then he lay down on the floor for the night in a drunken stupor. This was a bad story. A sad story. Although I did not know until years afterward, the terrible significance of that night of terror. The husband had succumbed to the strain of living on the frontier long before I knew her. Relatives provided for food. I wonder how many readers of the "corner" know the origin of the "latching" is out. How many ever saw a latching in its "latch" Perhaps there is a wooden latch in the Three Oaks museum.

The wooden latch, like the well-sweep, the neck yoke, to carry two pails of water, the poke for the pig, the mallet and the heavy top rail, were clever devices of men, whose necessities made them inventors. The aged old conundrum, "Which has done the most for humanity, the ax or the plow" could scarcely be told in Berrien County. The horse, the ox, the sheltering covered wagon, all were factors in its development.

Some artist of historical mind painted, years ago, a woman peering through the oval of a covered wagon, a telling story which he called "The Madonna of the Prairie" Another picture of note is "The Madonna of the Santa Fe Trail." Mr. Vandeville of Kansas City, has placed a finely sculptured statue in one of the parks called "The Pioneer Mother." A tribute to his own pioneer mother. What of the Madonna of the Woods? I hope some day she may grace the Moccasin Bluff park. With fortitude and fidelity, women came into the wilderness, not for adventure, but to insure their children's future. They sank their own identity in the family. They were only mothers. When the little boy was asked at the door, is the lady of the house at home, he answered, "No, nobody is home, but mother is here." He voiced her status, "Just mother." At least in early western life, as I remember it, through the 1850's in Berrien County, "mother" should bring worshipful affection into every living soul. What man would exchange his manhood for woman's inheritance of anguished motherhood. Not one!

A little girl came late to school. She said, "I did not know what time it was, mother was too busy to wind the clock." Although early settlers were not pioneers of Berrien county in 1850. The Indians had gone. The government land had been taken up, farms were partially cleared, orchards were started, homes, even log houses, were comfortable and schools had been established. A generation had grown up since the first settler cut down a tree or plowed a furrow in Berrien county.

Correct Holmes

Editor Record,
Buchanan, Mich.
Dear Sir,—
I always enjoy reading J. G. Holmes' letters in your paper. I just happen to know first hand about the following incidents and so want to set friend Holmes right in regard to the first freight agent at Buchanan.

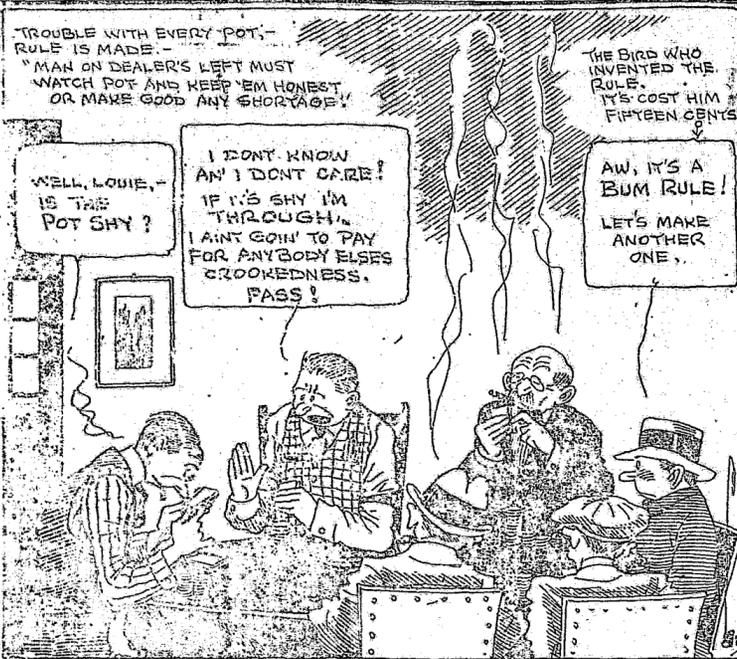

David Treat was an uncle of mine and a very excellent man, well respected by all the community. However, instead of being first freight agent of the Michigan Central Railroad, he was third. A Mr. Lewis was the first agent and George B. Treat, my father, was the second. Later, on account of poor health, father resigned the position to his brother, David.

When father came to Buchanan from Ohio in 1840, it was through the influence of Mr. Lewis. At that time he was a widower with two children. The daughter later became Mrs. Levi L. Redden and has continued her residence in Buchanan since that time as most of you know. Her brother, Herman, was telegraph operator in the local station, when he died at the early age of 16. Father first did track work. Soon Mr. Lewis was promoted and father was appointed agent in his place.

I can vouch for the passenger house standing on the high embankment on the south side of the track opposite the freight house. I fell down that bank and broke my arm. It was in that passenger house that I was born in 1851, being a combination of depot and dwelling.

Years later the passenger house was moved onto Portage Street and is now doing good service as a home owned and occupied by Fred Bromley.

Respectfully yours,
C. B. Treat.

Local Reserves Repeat the Triumph of the First Team.

The Buchanan High School basketball team ended the athletic program of 1929-30 with Niles by handing the representatives of that city a 23 to 19 trouncing on Friday night.

Because of the intense rivalry between the two schools, the last game turned into a fast and furious battle.

Ralph Pfingst, Buchanan's "Hyatt," rang up 14 points for the locals, while Susan, Niles center, led the losers with six points.

Pfingst opened the scoring with a long shot from the side of the floor, but Susan evened the count with a fielder from the foul district.

Knight's two short shots, R. Pfingst's free throw, and two charity tosses by Morse, brought the "Bucks" total to 17 at the third quarter.

In the last quarter Weber dropped in a free toss, but Pfingst sank another from the corner.

The Buchanan Reserves made the evening complete with a 15 to 12 victory over the Niles Reserves.

Score by quarters: Buchanan 5 4 5 9-19, Niles 3 7 7 6-23

TRAFFIC EXPERTS WOULD ABOLISH RED LIGHT DELAY

ESTIMATE LOSS FROM UNNECESSARY TRAFFIC DELAY AT TWO BILLION.

Evidence that the public is becoming tired of spending large slices of its precious time sitting under red traffic lights while nothing moves by in front is cropping up in many sections of the country, according to reports compiled recently by traffic experts. Some of these engineers believe the real impetus to the unrest is being given by recent publication of data announced by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

Traffic congestion and delays are causing an annual national loss of $2,000,000, according to the conference report. Secretary of Commerce Lamont followed this up with a statement that the damage "may be equal to our annual expenditures for the construction and maintenance of traffic facilities."

George E. Hamlin, chief engineer of maintenance of the Connecticut State Highways Department, also is quoted as follows:

"Traffic is becoming more critical and intolerant of unnecessary delay. This is a definite cost to the community which more often far exceeds the price of the remedy. The public in general has signified its desire for delay reduction and its willingness to accept the necessary financial responsibility. To those in command the opportunity offered is unlimited. Editorially, the Utica Observer-Dispatch deprecates present method pointing to 'cities and villages which put up lights which hold up traffic exactly as though it were halted by a traffic jam. Signal lights are highly valuable where they regulate traffic. Where they tie up motor cars constantly, they create artificially the delays and costs of heavy traffic. Traffic lights should be fitted and operated according to conditions." In a study made by engineers of Yale University, it was estimated that the city of Hartford, Conn., is losing about $18,000 per day from traffic delays. The estimates place New York City's loss in the neighborhood of a million dollars daily. Another traffic expert made, in part, the following statement: "Traffic control is years behind both motor car and highway development. The automotive industry has eliminated waste of time and energy to give us the splendid automobiles of today—and our cities make them the victims of the lost time and lost motion beyond computation."

A statement made by a nationally known traffic authority to the effect that signals should move traffic and not stop it, gives the correct aspect of the entire problem.
