Highway Board Adopts Five Year Safety Program

Michigan's state highway system, because of the degree of perfection and advancement which it has attained, is now faced with new and pressing problems. The better the road system the more pressing the problem of grade separations and of bridges.

Indications of the pressing character of the secondary problems in the highway system are indicated by the plans of the Michigan State Highway department program for the next five years. It is planning to very specifically attack the problem of safety at the crossing of highways with railroads.

Besides this there are 215 bridges that this year must be built with a view to making them fit to carry the heavy traffic that the bettered highway system the state now has demanded. In the days of slow moving traffic and of light traffic the problem of the grade crossing and of the bridges did not exist so acutely. Both problems have come with advancement.

In respect to grade crossings with railroads there are now 800 such crossings with the number of automobiles that are momentarily using nearly, if not quite every one of them, the magnitude of the

Conservation Head States Oil Policy

The attitude of his office and of the Department of Conservation toward the future and the prospects of the oil and gas industry in Michigan has been outlined by R. A. Smith, state geologist.

Mr. Smith's statement was made at the request of Director George R. Hogarth, to clear up conflicting reports recently circulated and which resulted in some misunderstanding as to his and the department's positions.

"Contrary to some recent but erroneous newspaper reports, present geological evidence, and also investigation by the Geological Survey Division of the Department of Conservation, indicate that the oil and gas industry of Michigan is to become one of importance," Mr. Smith said.

"Michigan may not become a Texas, Oklahoma, or California, but the evidence indicates that she will probably reach and maintain a position in oil production comparable with the adjoining states of Illinois and Ohio.

"Wildcat drilling has usually shown the presence of anticlinal folds or 'oil structures' and it is menace from this source may be appreciated.

Grade separation is the practical method of solving the danger problem at crossings of highways with railroads, but separation is known to be highly expensive. Where the great expense is not warranted by the volume of traffic, other safety methods must be employed.

Aside from grade separations, at least $250,000 will be spent this year in the promotion of safety at grade crossings.

But in numerous instances partial safety measures will not suffice. Grade separation is seen as the only solution. The State highway department plans 20 grade separation jobs this year at an estimated cost of approximately $2,000,000. It is fair to say that the railroads concerned will participate in the expense of the grade separations, but even with financial assistance, the added expense will mount into figures of large items of highway financing.

The problem of the bridges is similar to that entailed by good pavement that leads over railroad right of way. But with long stretches of paving throughout the state the weight of traffic has become such that the replacing of once adequate bridges is imperative.

more than probable that further exploration will disclose the presence of other structures favorable for oil and gas.

"Since only a small portion of the state has been thoroughly tested by the drill, it is practically certain that the number of anticlinal domes or folds should be much larger than the number already found or indicated and that many of them will be productive of oil and gas.

"During the past two years a large number of wildcat wells have been drilled. Studies of the records and samples from these indicate the presence of a considerable number of folds, anticlines or 'oil structures' in the underlying hard rocks. Such structures are very suggestive of the presence of pools of oil and gas beneath. While not all such structures have 'closure' or the form necessary to trap and retain these substances as accumulations or pools, drilling experience on the Saginaw, Muskegon and Mt. Pleasant anticlines make it almost certain that several of the indicated known structures will be found to be productive of oil and gas.

"Oil interests in Michigan should not lose sight of the fact that the major production states and the Federal Government are bending every effort to control production in the major fields, to avoid over production and consequent ill effects on the oil market."

Dr. James Gordon Bonine's Announcement for STATE SENATOR!

Many friends have asked me to enter the primaries for Republican nomination as State Senator from this senatorial district which comprises Berrien and Cass Counties.

Times are unsettled financially and economically. I realize there is need of serious thought, honest councils and genuine, sincere work applied to the problems of this district and of our State.

I have no lurid panacea, sure-cure-all, worked out and ready to present to you. My proposition is this: If nominated and elected, I will give all our problems and the business of Senatorial District No. 7, the same study, interest, attention and application which I would render to and do render to my personal affairs.

Frankly soliciting your support on this basis, I am

STATE FORESTRY TRAIN IS READY FOR JOURNEY

SPECIAL TRAIN WILL MAKE TRIP THRU WESTERN PART OF STATE.

Trees which have been kept on ice to prevent their roots from drying out before they can be distributed will be sold to applicants who attend meetings held at the forestry train which started this week.

Many state organizations will cooperate in supplying the exhibits and speakers who will travel with the special train. Foresters at the Michigan State College say that idle acres in the area through which the train will pass can be made to pay a profit by planting the proper varieties of trees.

The State Department of Conservation will have exhibits of live animals on the train, and speakers from the department will explain how more forests will add to the attractiveness of the state as a resort section.

Another exhibit will show how the use of trees for wind breaks will prevent the blowing of sand. This part of the display will show the proper species of trees to use, the best methods of planting and the benefits which will be received.

The work which the Michigan 4-H Forestry rangers are doing will also be shown. These forestry clubs have grown rapidly in the past two years. Each of the rangers is required to plant 1,000 seedlings. Several of these forestry clubs are planting community forests.

"KONJOLA KEPT ME AT WORK ALL DAY EVERY DAY"

RHEUMATISM CAUSED MAN TERRIBLE AGONY; NEW MEDICINE BRINGS QUICK RELIEF.

MIL. JAMES EATON

Don't get the idea that there is no relief for rheumatism, no matter what has failed. Put to the test, Konjola, the new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs. Read for instance, the words of Mr. James Eaton, 141 Walker Street, Grand Rapids.

"Konjola put an end to the rheumatism that for years caused me terrible agony, and that defied every other medicine I tried. Many a day I was unable to leave my bed, my joints were so stiff and sore. But three bottles of Konjola put all my pain to rout, corrected my kidneys and let me go to work all day every day. I endorse Konjola with all my heart and soul."

Thus Konjola works, quickly and thoroughly, going to the very source of the ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

Konjola is sold in Buchanan, Michigan, at W. N. Brodick's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

PRES. AMERICAN GAS & ELECTRIC CO. TESTIFIES

The following are excerpts from a statement made on the witness stand before the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C., by George N. Child, president of the American Gas and Electric Company. Mr. Child's testimony was in connection with the commission's inquiry into public utility corporations under the provisions of senate resolution No. 88.

The subsidiary companies of the American Gas and Electric Company are: Atlantic City Electric Company, Appalachian Electric Power Company, Kentucky and West Virginia Power Company, Inc., Kingsport Utilities, Indiana and Michigan Electric Company, Indiana General Service Company, the Ohio Power Company, the Soranont Electric Company, The Wheeling Electric Company.

Our company commenced business approximately twenty-four years ago with a limited capital and in a business which was undeveloped and which presented a great risk to those investing their money in it. We served less than 20 communities and had on our lines less than 15,000 customers, while today, as your engineer has testified, in a territory of 50,000 square miles spread over nine states we serve over 1300 communities and have more than 650,000 customers using our service, in a territory with a population of 2,815,000. So much for the growth of the territory, although volumes could be written concerning the money and effort expended in securing this business and developing it.

Practically all of the generating plants were small and inadequate, many furnishing service at night, others furnishing service only until midnight and therefore giving practically no power service. The production costs of these plants were very high, many indeed, and road switches, teams were used to haul their coal and ash, many were located in congested districts and were a down night nuisance to the public generally. Hand-fired boilers aggravated the smoke problem. Distribution circuits, if many of them could be so called, on account of poor construction and lack of maintenance were highly dangerous. Voltage conditions were below normal and naturally poor service resulted. Employees were paid a low rate of wage and the rates for lighting service averaged from 12 to 15c per KWHR. Little use was made of household appliances and new business promotion departments rarely existed.

Referring specifically to properties we acquired during our growth, we usually found them financed with closed mortgages and their owners unable to secure low cost money. Financing through local banks was usually resorted to and this form of credit was soon exhausted. Consequently, the service remained local and was not extended beyond the congested districts.

We have presented an exhibit giving many specific instances of the conditions I have just stated. In contrast with these plants we speak briefly of the conditions existing in our property today. Our transmission lines bind the property of our system together and interconnect it with surrounding utilities for the purpose of preservation of service in time of distress. This phase of our service was well brought out by your witness who testified to what is termed "our backbone power line."

Our service is being constantly extended in the rural communities. All of you must realize that a few years ago a farm that made use of electrical current was almost a curiosity, while today we have on our lines over 18,000 farm and rural customers. We consider this branch of our service so important that we have specialists in charge of it. We have prepared special rate schedules to enable the inhabitants of rural sections to avail themselves of the service. Our ability to give high grade service with adequate capacity to meet all needs for power is bound to bring about a decentralization of industry and expansion of agriculture to the immense benefit of the farmer and factory owner and his employees, and tends towards producing a balance between city and country life which to all who have studied the situation is the ideal to which we look forward.

As to our generating plants they are models of high efficiency. I could talk with you for days of what we have done and what is being done in the way of conservation and economies, great savings in fuel and scores of other things incident to the operation of our plants. We have installed every approved device for effecting economies and improving service in our properties.

I have made several trips abroad for the purpose of making detailed studies of European stations in order that no point of improvement might be overlooked in ours. I, as well as the technical men I employ, keep constantly in touch with the situation and are constantly working to develop a higher degree of efficiency and economy. The development of our power plants is reflected in our rates and the character and reliability of our service. It is reflected in the large amount of industrial use made of our facilities. The manufacturer today must have power of a quality and at a price that enables him to meet competition.

Game Dept. Urged to Ban Spear and Jacklighting

"In the matter of changing the spear and jacklight law, the Conservation Commission is not a law making body and consequently is unable to take any action, if it desired, unless an actual emergency existed," according to Director George R. Hogarth of the Conservation Department.

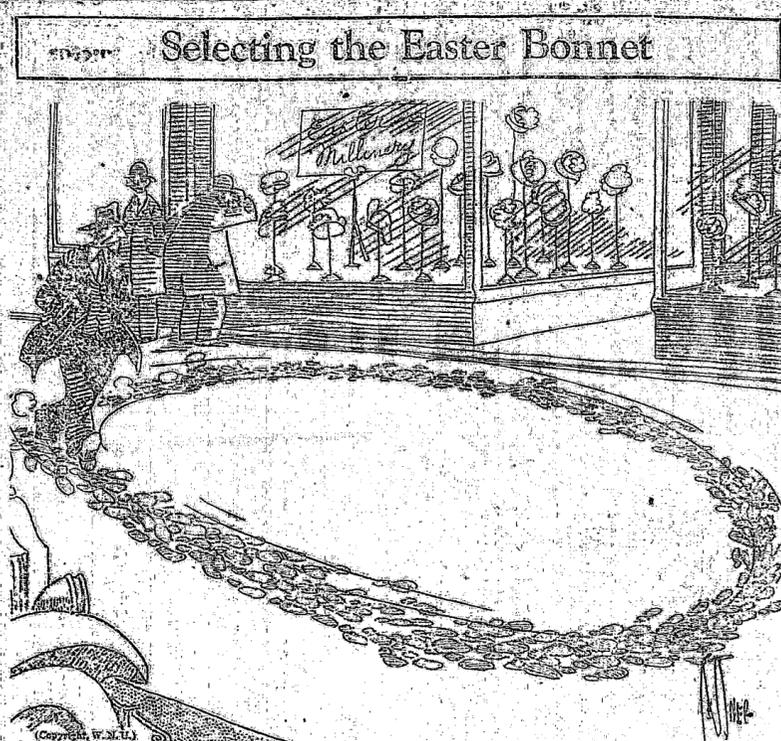

Director Hogarth's statement was made following numerous requests from all parts of the state urging that the Commission exert its discretionary power authority to ban spearing and jacklighting.

"The discretionary power act was created by the legislature to be used only in cases of acute emergency," Director Hogarth said. "No emergency exists today if none existed when the last legislature enacted the present laws. Conditions are no different now than they were last spring when the inland fishing bill was adopted by the legislature."

"The Department of Conservation had recommended control of the spear, but the legislature saw fit to enact the law now in effect," he stated. "Since the situation has not changed, the discretionary power act cannot be employed to shorten the spearing season or to prohibit jacklighting."

Under the inland fishing act all non-game fish with the exception of Great Northern and Grass Pike may be speared with or without the use of jacklight, in any of the non-trout streams of the state from April 1 to May 31. The Great Northern and Grass Pike spearing season, with or without a light in all non-trout streams is from May 1 to May 31.

BONDS BRING LOUISIANA OUT OF MUD AND DUST

OLD ROAD BUILDING METHODS SCRAPED; TO HAVE 3,000 MILES PAVED BY 1932.

At the end of 1927 Louisiana had but 60 some miles of first class rural paving. That state has every expectancy of possessing 3,000 miles of paved highways by 1932.

This illustrates in a striking way what a state may do toward providing the motor car with facilities in keeping with its own fine mechanism. Louisiana has looked over her resources, scanned and abandoned the former wasteful methods of road building, and has adopted financing methods which enable her to make the greatest use of these resources. The two-cent gasoline tax of Louisiana was raised to four cents a gallon. The law provides that the income from one cent of the four-cent gasoline tax may be expended and this is the money that is putting Louisiana's highway paving program on a par with that of other progressive states.

Louisiana also has a modern attitude in the actual improvement of her highways. Through routes are being paved as rapidly as possible in order to serve the greatest number of motorists first. Among the important highways slated for early improvement are: The Old Spanish Trail, The New Orleans-Sireveport Highway, The Dixie-Overland Highway, and The New Orleans-Hammond Highway. Louisiana is taking cognizance of the fact that municipalities are benefited by state-wide road improvement programs. New Orleans, for instance, because of its concentration of motorists, is paying about two-fifths of the cost of building all the roads on the state system. However, New Orleans realizes that this is good business for not only will the standards of living in rural Louisiana be bettered, but this betterment will be reflected in increased trade for New Orleans. Louisiana's progress is somewhat of a surprise to the outside world, in that until recently highway mud and dust were as characteristic of Louisiana as pelicans.

Game Department Closes Areas for Spawning Grounds

"Notice! Spawning Area and Refuge. No Fishing Within Enclosed Limits." Michigan anglers will see such a sign for the first time this year with all preparations made by the Fish Division of the Department of Conservation for compliance with an act adopted by the 1929 session of the state legislature.

The act passed last year, and now effective says: "The director of conservation is hereby authorized to extend the closed season on all spawning beds when it shall appear that spawning or guarding is delayed beyond the time of the closed season provided by law. Notices defining the closed areas must be posted not less than five days prior to taking effect. For the purpose of this act, a spawning bed shall be defined as any section of a lake, river, pond or other body of water where fish are known to congregate for the purpose of spawning."

With pike lakes open to fishing May 1, it is expected that it will be necessary to designate spawning areas in many of the lakes and to close these areas to fishing until after spawning. It is also probable that in the northern part of the state there will be a few instances when spawning is not finished by June 25 when all lakes and streams are open to fishing.

Cards, one to be placed around the boundaries of the refuge and one to be posted on shore and around boat houses will be sent to all conservation officers. Cards will indicate when the enclosed area will be re-opened to fishing. When conditions arise which make a refuge necessary conservation officers will post the area. Individuals, sportsmen, organizations, etc., observing spawning beds may ask the local officer to post notices.

New Aviation Code in Effect in Michigan on Mar. 1

Aviation in this state appears to be on the threshold of the most successful year in its history. This year's gains by increased material progress in the affairs of all leading aircraft manufacturers here, progress which is expected to bear fruit during the current 12 months. Aircraft Development Corporation of Cass City, was a leader in the aviation during 1929 of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation a $2,000,000 organization of some 100 important aeronautical manufacturing concerns with headquarters in Detroit. Stinson Aircraft Corporation, Wayne, became allied with the Cord automotive interests last year, placing at the disposal of this company the engineering brains of an important unit of motorism. Eackard erected a large plant for the production of its new Diesel engine and quantity production is planned for 1930. Ford increased its production facilities last year and produced more planes than ever before in its history. Further increases in output are planned for the current season. These are but a few of the developments which featured the progress of aviation here during the past 12 months. Aviation necessity concerns greatly enlarged their manufacturing facilities and have entered the new year with the greatest production capacity in their history. Plane ownership increased perceptibly and airport facilities were provided or increased by many cities of the state. Although this newest of industries in which Michigan is anxious to claim leadership, experienced a good year last season and great things are promised for 1930.

Aviation, not only in Michigan but in the entire country, found accidents a serious obstacle to public flying last year. In spite of undeniable progress made by the industry last year in increasing the safety of flying, a number of minor flying accidents occurred which had a dampening effect on the public ardor for air transportation. The number of deaths compared with the number of miles flown in the country, was small and proved air transportation one of the safest mediums of travel. Under the publicity of accidents of a catastrophic nature, however, necessarily has its effect on prospective air travelers.

It is an accepted truth that the great majority of air accidents in recent years has been due directly to carelessness, inability or inexperience of aviators or to the fact that obsolete equipment was being used. Michigan has taken cognizance of this fact and has just taken steps to eliminate as many of the unnecessary hazards of flying as possible. The state aeronautical commission has adopted a new code governing pilots and flying schools. The new, and somewhat drastic regulations, will become effective on March 1. Practically all of the flying schools of the state will be compelled to increase their standards and equipment under the new code or be forced out of business. Private pilots will no longer be able to give free instructions, even to members of their own families, and will be unable to land intentionally in any field other than a licensed airport.

H. S. Instructor Gives Directions On Treating Seed

Friday, March 21, means more to some people than just the beginning of spring. To about 24,000,000 people it means the beginning of the "rush season" on the farm.

In connection with this thought we have problems to be revealed. Among these problems is that every present one of "How shall I treat my seed crops before planting?" Below I will attempt to give a few simple practices in treating the various seeds:

Potatoes for Seed
We may use either the corrosive sublimate treatment or the formaldehyde treatment. In the opinion of the writer the first treatment is superior to the latter. It must be used with caution as it contains a poisonous mercury compound.

Treatment: Use 4 ounces of corrosive sublimate to 50 gallons of water. With each additional batch of potatoes add sufficient water to make the 50 gallons and to the add one more ounce of corrosive sublimate. Repeat this process until you have dipped all the seed potatoes. Immediately after dipping them place them upon a clean surface and spread out to dry. Remember they have been treated with poison to kill a fungus growth and hence are rendered unfit for animal consumption.

Next week's write up will give treatments for grain.

Game Heads Study Relation of Points To Ages of Deer

Is it possible, as it is with horses and sheep, to determine the age of a deer from its teeth? Has the diameter of the antlers any relation to the age of a deer? How old is a buck with four, eight or twelve prongs on his antlers? Does a very old buck finally lose points and go back to a "spike"? How old is a given doe? How old is a doe before she goes permanently dry?

These are some of the questions the Department of Conservation, as well as thousands of deer hunters would like to have answered, and the Department, this winter, is making a serious effort to work out some definite relation between teeth and horns and age. The idea that a year old buck has spikes and that a point is added for each succeeding year, is both denied and defended by sportsmen but most authorities seem agreed and there is no direct relation between the number of points and age.

During the past deer season, when hunters were returning from the woods of the upper peninsula to lower Michigan, Department of Conservation employees at the Straits ferries, measured antlers and counted antler points on nearly 2,000 bucks.

Later, through co-operation with Paul E. Young, Detroit taxidermist, the Department received several hundred deer skulls, each with the necessary data on the antlers. At the University of Michigan Museum, at Ann Arbor, these skulls are now being cleaned. Later in the winter, V. H. Cahalane of the Game Division, with the assistance of the University specialists will try to work out the relationship between teeth, antlers and age.

It is thought that a fairly accurate idea of the age of a deer can be gained through a study of the teeth, using methods well tested in connection with horses, cattle and sheep. Since deer are closely related to sheep, their teeth should show similarities in replacement of the milk teeth by the permanent teeth spacing and in wear. Having ascertained the approximate age in this way, the antler tallies and measurements will then be checked over to find a factor, such as the diameter of the number of points, which is constant for a given age.

If successful in finding a simple means for determining the age of a deer, the Department will then have a way to check the age classes of deer killed each hunting season, and a shortage of deer of any class due to shortage of bucks, abnormal death among the fawns, or any other serious combinations should quickly be apparent.

 Men in all ways are better than they seem. They like flattery for the moment, but they know the truth for their own. It is a faithful cowardice which keeps us from trusting them, and speaking to them rude truth.—Emerson.

MODERN CABLE IS PRODUCT OF LONG EVOLUTION

First Adapted to Telephone Use in 1879, With 100 Wires; Now Contains 3600

Telephone cables have been in use since 1879, and in 1888 a cable somewhat similar to those in use today was manufactured. It contained 50 pairs of wires and made possible a great reduction in open wire systems. By 1892, 100 pairs of wires in cable had been made possible, and by 1901, a cable with 400 pairs of wires was put into service. From that time on, progress has been rapid. Cables containing 900 pairs of wires were laid underground in 1912, and today, cables are available containing 1,818 pairs of wires, but the diameter of the cable is only a little bit greater than the original fifty pair cable of 1888, which was about two-thirds as thick as the present cables.

The first cables were of rubber or gutta-percha, but experiments soon proved that the introduction of cotton into the cable instead of rubber was feasible. Cotton insulation was finally superseded by paper. In the modern cables each wire is separated from the others by a spiral wrapping of manila paper, and all are enclosed in a continuous lead sheathing which protects the wires and assures continuous and practically uninterrupted telephone service.

A new type of armored cable for land use is now being manufactured. This cable is designed for toll use and is laid underground without ducts.

To the small boy shouting at a cliff and hearing his voice carried back to him, an echo is merely an amusing plaything. To the telephone transmission engineer, it is often a most perplexing problem. Whenever a telephone current meets any sudden change in circuit conditions, a part of it may be reflected back to its source, where it echoes the sound carried by the original current.

On short lines, just as in small rooms, echoes are not perceptible. On long loaded cables, however, the interval between original sound and echo may be so long as to cause serious complications. Unless measures were taken to guard against them, echoes might travel back and forth indefinitely, making conversation difficult.

Telephone engineers get rid of these troublesome intruders by installing special devices or switches so sensitive that they are operated by the voice itself. These devices or switches permit a voice current to pass in the desired direction but form a barrier against any reflected portion which would otherwise interfere with conversation. They are, in effect, automatic traps set by the voice to capture its own echo.

Nearly 600,000 local telephone calls are made on an average business day in the City of Portland, Ore.
