He had also served several terms on the city council. He was born in Buchanan Feb. 14, 1865 and had spent his entire life here.

95 Per Cent of the Game Violators Are Fishermen

Ninety-five of all the convictions obtained in Michigan for violations of the various conservation laws during the past month were for offenses against the fish laws.

A report issued by the law enforcement division of the department of conservation shows a total of 425 convictions through the state, of which 403 were for violations of the fishing laws and 22, or .5 per cent were for violations of all other conservation laws, including game and fur.

During the month, violators paid $8,344.53 in fines and costs and served an aggregate of 305 days in jail. The average penalty inflicted on all violators was $19.16.

The majority of violated fishing laws involve fishing for or taking bass and bluegills before the opening of the bass season, and for fishing on closed rivers and lakes. Of the fish law violations, 359 were for catching undersized fish, nine were for possession of more than the legal catch, 28 were for using set lines illegally, 12 were for using nets illegally, eight were for spearing trout or spearing out of season and 12 were for fishing without a license. These violations included six non-residents and six residents who were caught fishing for trout without the necessary license.

Among the violations of game and fur laws were five convictions for taking racoon out of season and three for illegal possession of beaver skins.

The most severe penalty inflicted during the month involved the case of Ira Mutchler, Montclair county, convicted of the illegal possession of furs. Mutchler was sentenced to serve 30 days under the charge. He was again convicted of attempting to escape and was sentenced to serve an additional 30 days in jail.

Only one $100 fine was imposed and that was upon Lester Gordon, Mason county, convicted of hunting deer during the closed season.

Despite the fact that June saw the opening of the bass season, that more fishermen were out than during the previous month, and as a consequence officers were more vigilant, there were slightly fewer violations than during May according to the report. In May, 430 convictions were reported with aggregate fines and costs totaling $7,884.25.

Definite Limit On Size Bullheads Caught for Market

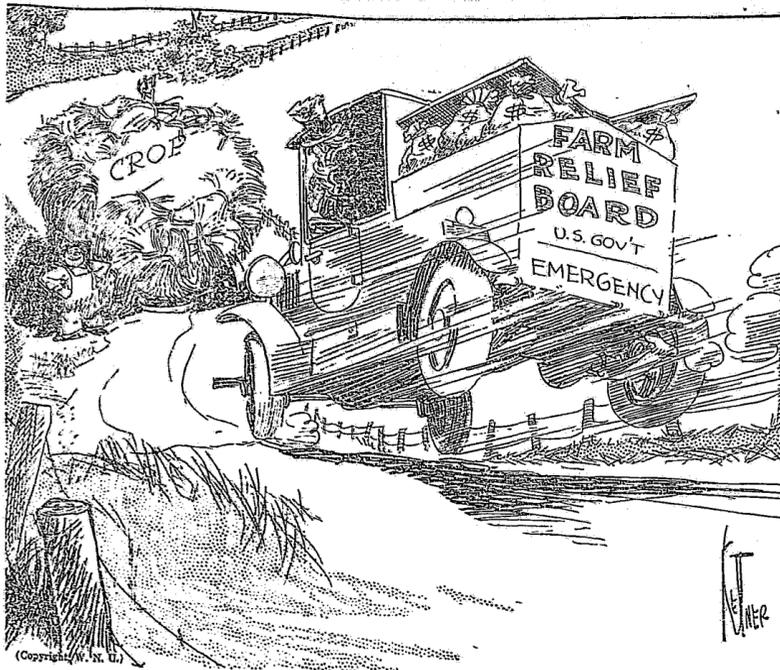

There is no size limit or creel limit for bullheads taken with hook and line, but there are definite limits for bullheads taken for commercial purposes. Bullheads may not be taken for commercial purposes when they weigh less than eight ounces "in the round."

A recent conviction of a commercial fisherman in Monroe county for possession of undersized bullheads has resulted in many inquiries as to the regulations concerning this species, according to the law enforcement division of the department of conservation.

A Hurry Call

SMALL FACTORY UNIT IS FOUND MOST EFFICIENT

SPECIALIZED PLANTS FOR SMALL ORDERS MOST ECONOMICAL.

The forward march of big business, represented by mass production through the concentration of manufacturing in large units, appears to be slowing down and factory managers, aware of important weaknesses in large plant organization, are attempting to introduce into big plants some of the flexibility and mobility of the small unit. Contrary to general belief, the number of large plants in the United States is not great, there being less than 1,000 plants employing 1,000 or more each, while the number of small plants is surprisingly large and they are increasing.

The experience of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company reveals the problems of all large manufacturing enterprises. The Springfield, Mass., plant of this concern has speeded production by organizing a separate department for the manufacture of equipment to fill small orders. For many years there was general complaint because small orders and orders for special apparatus could not be filled quickly.

After struggling with the problem of producing these quantity "specials" in as short a time as the small manufacturer, it was decided to establish a separate department for orders of 10 units or less, regardless of whether the equipment was standard or special, according to A. B. Reynolds, works manager at Springfield. The result has reduced delayed shipping dates for special equipment to a negligible item.

"A large plant has the advantage of quantity production and can obtain the advantages of the small plant by careful attention to details," he maintains. "The advantages usually considered as resulting from a small plant are quick action, low production cost of small quantities and close relationship of employer and employe."

In a large plant, the problem of holding down cost on small quantity production is difficult to accomplish because of overhead. "The large plant must be departmentalized and equipped to carry out the same functions as a small plant," the executive holds.

The advantages of a small plant are enumerated by Crosby Field, vice-president of the Brillio Manufacturing Company.

"From the viewpoint of the small plant, in sizing up its opponent, the large plant, the problem is much like that of an inferior army in combat," Mr. Field says. "The small plant that endeavors to compete with its larger neighbor by making everything the larger plant makes, puts itself in an unfortunate position. The strength of the small plant is essentially specialization either specializing in product or in method of manufacture, or in marketing."

"Depending as it does upon volume, the large plant naturally tends to manufacture more of its own raw materials, which means more products to use or sell, which means an ever increasing line of products, marketed more and more upon a price basis and with constantly increased fixed capital investment."

All this tends toward a rigidity of operation, a building up of inflexible policies and other attributes that render it comparatively immobile while the small plant can succeed better because it can move quicker. In order to maintain its mobility, it must maintain a close contact with customers."

Modern College Students Enjoy Better Health

"Pale emaciated faces and pallid countenances" have definitely passed in favor of a more cheerful situation, according to the records and observations of University of Michigan Health Service officials. In fact some improvement in the general health level seems noticeable.

In former days college enrollments were much smaller than at present, and the students were perhaps too serious minded. Many were inclined to ignore physical fitness in search of scholastic records. A large proportion were preparing for the ministry or for other cloistered, bookish vocations and often lived under unhygienic conditions.

The present day student, however, benefits from generally improved conditions of public health, and in addition usually has the special care and guidance of college health departments as at Michigan. Heads of this service at the University have determined many things which indicate that the health of the college student does not suffer from his years of work at the institution.

In the opinion of students themselves, twenty-five per cent stated that they felt that their health had definitely improved since entering the University. Sixty-eight per cent thought that their health was the same as upon entering the University and only seven per cent felt that their health was worse than it was when freshmen. In the opinion of the medical examiners who compared the findings with the freshmen year the actual figures offer even more convincing proof that the life of the college student at the University of Michigan does not present any particular health hazard. The examiners found that forty per cent of the students had shown signs of much or some improvement over their freshman year. Fifty-two per cent were thought to be in about the same health, and only six per cent were considered to be worse off than when they entered.

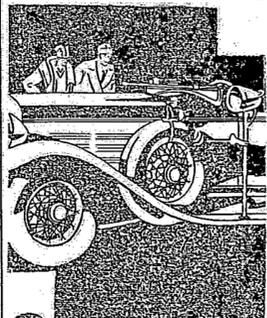

Recognition of the fact that mental health is as important as physical well-being is made by the University, and a well trained physician on the staff has been performing this task. A particular adviser is assigned to each class as it enters the freshman year, thus giving the members a sort of "family doctor." Starting with the coming fall term three full-time physicians and psychiatrists will handle those personality difficulties usually included under the term of "mental hygiene."

To Start Drilling Another Oil Well Near Barron Lake

Oil exploration in the Niles area will be extended soon by the drilling of a well in the Barron Lake area by a new syndicate including J. DeWitt Robinson of St. Joseph, H. H. Heimann of Niles and a group that had been assembled by Mayor Fred D. Cook but never organized. The syndicate is capitalized at $25,000 and will be known as the Niles Oil and Gas Company. Robinson will be general manager and G. H. Schrack will be in charge of drilling. The site selected for drilling has been approved by the state geological department, which has indicated that there is a strong likelihood of oil in the Trenton strata in the east Niles section.

MRS. RICHARDS OF EAU CLAIRE IS HONORED BY STATE

MICHIGAN FARM WOMEN TO BE AWARDED SYMBOL OF SUCCESS.

Five Michigan women have been selected to receive the gold emblem which is the symbol of acknowledged success in managing their household and in aiding community enterprises, and they will also be awarded the title of Michigan Master Farm Homemakers at a ceremony held at Michigan State college, August 1.

Women to be honored this year are Mrs. Frank E. Haas, Ravenshaw; Mrs. James A. Richards, Eau Claire; Mrs. Eliza W. Moyer, Ypsilanti; Mrs. Ward A. Bullen, Mason; and Mrs. Charles Ludlow, Albion.

They were nominated by their neighbors and were selected by the Farm and Home Economics department, published by St. Paul, Minn., in cooperation with members of the home economics extension division of Michigan State College.

Statements made by the women show that their initial interest is in their home and children and that their opportunity work is centered about these things. Each of the five Master Homemakers has been Sunday School teacher and a leader of a group which has made a study of some phase of home economics under the direction of a specialist from the state college. Three of the group are former school teachers and two have been members of their local school boards.

Educational training apparently does not determine the ability of a woman to become a Master Homemaker, as some of this group of five left school at the completion of the eighth grade and others have high school or college diplomas. The type of house in which the women live did not affect their selection as the houses vary as widely as the amount of time spent in school.

One similar trait possessed by all five is expressed in their statements concerning their home life. One says that her family will remember the little things she does for them longer than they will the dust on the window sill. Another remarked that her chief ambition was to make the community a better place for children to grow up in. A third stated that she tried to train her children the right way, and the ambition of another member of the group is to rear children to be healthy, honorable men and women.

Money is discounted as a factor by one of the women who says that hers has been a happy family without a great lot of money. It works and no play is taboo with one of the group who makes the statement that she takes some time for leisure whether it is available or not. Michigan women who have been awarded the same honors in previous years are Mrs. Maude Shull, Hart Mrs. Morris Belford, Holly; Mrs. Lottie Crider, Middleville; Mrs. Jennie Holliman, Byron Center; Mrs. Elwood Bartz, the South Haven; Mrs. Howard Irish, Coopersville; Mrs. Charles Gruner, of Coldwater; Mrs. Mabel Weller, of Rockford and Mrs. Fred Morse, Jasper.

LEADER BANDIT GANG BROUGHT TO ST. JOE MONDAY

ALL MEMBERS OF GANG THAT TERRORIZED COUNTY LAST SPRING CAPTURED.

Dewey Rock, 28, leader of the bandit gang which terrorized Berrien county for several months and which executed more than a score of holdups, was brought to St. Joe Monday by Deputy Sheriffs Irwin H. Kubath and Charles H. Andrews, to stand trial in the circuit court here. Raymond Rock, his younger brother, who participated in the robberies, was not returned but was sent to Joliet to serve the remainder of an unexpired sentence. When the brothers were arrested on information furnished by Berrien county authorities, they had guns and short pieces of rope such as are used to the robbery victims, in their pockets.

David Shaw, the other member of the gang, being held in the Cook County jail on a robbery charge and will not be returned to Berrien County. The information which led to the arrest of the entire gang was secured when the Berrien County officers raided the farm home of Homer Evans of Baroda, cousin to the Rock brothers. They arrested Homer Evans and his wife after they had found a quantity of merchandise which had been stolen from the Cookson Drug Store in Benton Harbor. Mrs. Evans supplied the information which led to the arrest of the gang.

"KIDS" THE YOUNGER BROTHER

FARM BOARD MEMBER URGES CO-OP. ACTION

WILSON SAYS PROGRESS TO BE RAPID AS FARMERS ARE ADVISED.

Charles S. Wilson, member of the Federal Farm Board, predicted that progress in the co-operative movement in Michigan will be rapid when farmers are advised fully of the benefits which will come from group action in marketing, and he also said in his speech at Michigan State college, Farmers Day, that the fruit growers of Michigan have already realized themselves of the Board's financial assistance in preparation for marketing this year's fruit crop.

Mr. Wilson said, "The declaration of policy in the Agricultural Marketing Act directs the Farm Board to raise the economic level of agriculture to that of other industries by eliminating speculation and wasteful and inefficient distribution, by preventing and controlling surpluses, and by encouraging the development and organization of co-operative marketing organizations."

The Board member told his Farmers Day audience that six and one-half million farmers have been marketing their farm products with a system which took one hundred years to develop, and that it is just as easy to create a new system immediately so that the farmer will receive a larger share of the consumer's dollar.

1,200 AT FARM PICNIC IN SPITE OF BLAZING SUN

PROGRAM OF SPORTS IS CANCELLED ON ACCOUNT OF SULTRY HEAT.

A crowd estimated at 1,200 braved the blazing heat of Saturday to attend the Farm Bureau and Grange picnic at the Indian fields, Benton Springs, to hear the address of Congressman John C. Ketchum and enjoy the varied program of entertainment.

In charge of the festivities were Wayne Armstrong of Niles, County Grange Master, and Jesse G. Boyle, president of the County Farm Bureau, who collaborated in introducing the speakers. At the suggestion of Ketchum, the program of sports was cancelled on account of the heat. He also called for recognition for Mrs. James T. Richards of Eau Claire, one of the five women of the state to receive the title of Master Farm Homemaker. He referred to the leading position held by Berrien County among the farming counties of the United States, and recommended to the county farmers present two acts of federal legislation passed last year of great value to agriculture, the Commission Merchants Licensing Law and the Mapes Canning Bill. Ketchum stated that in 1929 foodstuffs for which the farmers received $1,000,000,000 were resold to consumers for $21,000,000,000.

Auto Specialties Defeat East Side Radio Nine 8-7

The Auto Specialties nine of St. Joseph initiated its new field, the Twin City Airport diamond, with a victory over the East Side Radio club of South Bend Sunday, nosing out the lead by an 8-7 score. The South Bend team had trimmed the Twin City outfit 15-5 in an early season game, and the latter were out for revenge. Tied at the opening of the ninth, the Twin City team cracked out two hits to bring in the winning run in that session.

Sodus Boosters Trim Dixie Gas

The Dixie Gas nine of St. Joseph lost a tight contest to the Sodus Boosters Sunday 8-7, the Sodus nine coming from behind to slip across three runs in the ninth inning and win the game. Watervliet Metros Defeat Coloma 9 In Last Inning

The Watervliet Metros came back to win the second of their series with the Coloma Crystal Palace Blues Sunday, though their victory was due to a slump on the part of the Blues in the last half of the ninth when Pitcher Perry hit Price, first man up for the Metros, with a pitched ball, and his team mates followed with a flock of errors that allowed the Metros to send six men across the plate, winning by 7 to 3. Until the ninth inning Perry had held the Metros to two hits and one run. Harold Daisy for the Metros held the Blues to six well-scattered hits, the majority of the Blue runs being made on Watervliet errors.

3 Oaks Loses To LaPorte 16 to 9

Sumnerville Trims B. H. Naval Reserves

The Sumnerville baseball nine won their 15th game out of 17 starts by defeating the Benton Harbor Naval Reserves 7-6 Sunday. The Mitchell brothers and Frank Ross starred at bat for Sumnerville, the latter getting four hits in five times up. Next Sunday Sumnerville will play Indian Lake.

Uncut Grain is Good Food Supply For the Pheasant

Better pheasant hunting next fall and better feeding conditions for these birds next winter will result if patches or strips of weeds, brush, clover alfalfa or grain are left uncut, especially along fences and at swamp borders, according to Dr. Miles D. Phinix, ornithologist of the game division of the department of conservation.

Pheasants are attracted by the grain and corn fields, and hunters on lands where such feed patches occur will have less reason to complain that the birds have moved off to the feed patches and cover on neighboring farms. Buckwheat, corn or wheat, left uncut at harvest time greatly simplifies the winter feeding problem and practically guarantees that the birds will not starve. Several farmers have reported that they have been well-repaid for leaving patches of buckwheat and other grains for the birds; also plantings of elderberry, dogwood, willows, thornapples, etc., either in clumps or along fences will greatly improve cover, conditions and favor increased numbers of birds. Dr. Phinix points out that now is the time to plan for cover and feed patches, not only to help the birds in winter, but to improve hunting conditions this fall.

The Old Timer's Corner

Old Timer Tells of Joys of Farm Life After Wheat and Oats are in

When the harvest is over, the wheat and oats in the shocks and a corn in tassel, the full-fledged crop started, the clover and timothy in the barn, then it begins to look like real fall. That's the way it looks right now and while the farmer is so busy getting his work done that he doesn't notice it at all, the fellows like myself, that pass along and watch the changes take place, are reminded that another season is soon to close and another winter will soon be here to change the things around for us again.

In reality there is only the growing season that enlivens us, and then that is past, we must live on stored up energy from that same growing season, physically and mentally. We grow and accumulate and then live and use what we have stored away. So it is with nature.

When you pass a wheat field where the shocks stand in order—rows or where they have been "acked" and are ready for the threshing machine, we can look across the field and watch the old waves rolling and we can't help but feel that we are walking on that stubble field. Boy, the sun of the last week or two is so hard to feel, any old place. I notice that the old thermometer registers at ninety-six right here where I am writing. You know, I think we feel the heat more if we watch the reading of the thermometer. If we are out in the field on any place where we don't know that reading, we can stand the heat much better. There is a certain amount of mental effect upon us, when we know just how hot it is.

I certainly wish we could have some rain along with this heat. The corn will not fill, if it don't get some rain pretty soon. Some of the corn was in tassel before I came home last week. That's the time it ought to have a little moisture, if it is to fill good.

Well, the farmers and people in general can't kick on the crops this year, if they have taken any sort of care of them at all, for to my knowledge, the crops almost without exception have been fine. The new potatoes are fine. Berries and apples and pears look good. I don't know about the peaches for I didn't get down in that part of the country much.

But, while I know it must come, I hate to see the wheat and oats in the shock, and things beginning to get ready for winter. I like winter best, because I am fat, but I like to see things grow, and that is what I like about summer. We are right in the midst, now, of the ripening season, for all nature. That's why this heat, if it would otherwise be a failure, we would go to the fields and watch the old dame Nature for the harvest, even if it is inconvenient and hard to "luff it off."

Harvey Sherwood Describes Visit to the Old Southwest

New Orleans, La. July 25, 1930

My last letter you probably received from San Antonio, written July 13. We stayed one day there, or there and saw the Alamo thoroughly. It is a phase of American history one cannot get from text books nor impart to a pupil. It is also an instance in which one may call to mind that now obsolete Berkeleyan principle, "Esse est percipi." In order for one to realize the meaning of the thing in itself it must be seen. Here Davie Crockett handed loaded guns by the rest of the group, did his last shooting of a great career. He was found in the night room at the entrance of this famous old building established as a mission in 1766. Its story can be briefly summed.

Following the overthrow of Spanish rule in Mexico in 1821 the Mexican government offered liberal grants of land to colonists in Texas and U. S. citizens flocked there by great numbers. In 1836 the Texans rose in revolt against the Mexican dictators and such leaders as Stephen Austin, Zerkow James Bowie, "Deaf" Smith, William Travis and Davie Crockett were the martyrs. These heroes (only 182) stood out against General Stanton Anna with his army of 4,000 and were all killed but one, who brought the story. Texas was independent for 10 years and then upon invitation of the United States joined the Union in 1846.

There are a number of interesting facts about San Antonio of which I did not write before. It was a base of operations for U. S. troops during the Mexican war, the Indian Wars, Confederate and Civil wars, as well as the point of assembly for Roosevelt's Rough Riders of the Spanish American war and has now become Fort Sam Houston in military geography. The U. S. government has located here the largest and most varied military establishment in U. S. Kelly Field is the largest aviation field in U. S. and the clouds were filled with planes as we left. Every type of plane known to aviation is represented in the great hangars. Duncan Field, Brooks Field, Camp Normoyles, Camp Stanley, Camp Bullis, U. S. Arsenal and Randolph Field, the West Point of the air, are all located here. Shortly, $20,000,000 will be expended on the latter, 2,800 acre site.

The palm trees were killed by the cold weather here last winter. Some of them were over 100 years old and had to be cut down. The sunken gardens in the old stone quarry are so beautiful that they actually attain the aesthetic qualities of a dream because of the placement of the lights in rocky nooks, flowers and waterfalls.

After leaving San Antonio we visited the border towns of Mercedes, Fann, McAllen, San Benito, Brownsville. They raise the Cotton, Corn, fruit of all kinds but a distinct contrast is their needs, bugs, flies, mosquitoes, gnats, cockroaches, etc.

In Old Mexico, we saw in Matamoros the most typical of Mexican towns far more so than Tia Juana. There I talked with the American vice-consul, who knew of my room mate's consular record. He said that the consul he had the honor of consul-general. The cathedral, stores and fascinating old cemetery is too interesting for description. Their tombs, many of them, have been opened, the caskets and bones showing the sepulchral beads, wreaths, sculpture etc., beaten by the sun for so long are certainly other-worldly in their impression. We were in the town of San Antonio de la Huasteca, the border town which indicates the Mexican kiddies wreak vengeance.

The old fort which we inspected was kept by a soldier and his family whose splendid uniform was in strange contrast to the neglect of the architecture but not the cleanliness of the home. These Mexican homes are far cleaner and cooler than most southern homes we have seen and that was another surprise. Streets, all of them, were more narrow and bumpy than any American can guess, who has been across even a Texas ranch detour.

In spite of the fly-blown nature of the old market, it was most enjoyable. Here was life: insect, plant, animal and human. I've never seen such a variety of trinkets, pottery, pottery, meats, fruits, baskets, roulette wheels, etc., and good humor. Pictures are forbidden except one go thru a patience, trying process, which I did not care to do with no Spanish craft pyramids and this is as classic a way of putting it as Milton's "Pandemonium signified." It sways everything. Even our guide had to split 50-50 with a taxi chief who caught him on our car. I feel sorry for these poor misgoverned people. Nothing in the thirty some states in this country we've seen in the last five years (outside of the French market in this city of New Orleans) can compare in vividness of recollection with the Mexican scene.

In Texas we saw huge game preserves, went by the largest ranch in U. S. and thru one almost as large. The latter was the wildest country I've ever seen, rattlesnakes, gila monsters, sage, mesquite, vultures, long horn cattle, buffalo hump cattle, cactus, Mesquites clearing land and burning brush, valleys and almost impassable roads. I visited a cotton gin and learned that they "get 50 bale and it costs $75 to produce." One chap made $12,000 in one year from samples of cotton he cut. I don't see how the grower makes anything when he is robbed of samples at every turn.

We camped at Corpus Christie within about 30 feet of Corpus Christie bay on the Gulf of Mexico, reminding us of the time we camped within a shorter distance of the Pacific waters at Pismo Beach in California. Such a stiff salt breeze was blowing we had to close the window hot as it was. Everything was reeking wet. A daybreak swim was great but I got another reminder of California when I was sunburned fishing for crabs. (I caught five large ocean crabs.)

Houston is reputed to possess the largest inland port in the world. Galveston is directly on the gulf and has a sea wall on which are 1000 ft. towers and which rises 17 feet above the water. The large coast defense disappearer guns in Fort Crockett interested me more than anything else because it was the first time I've seen them to such good advantage. This city is the largest cotton and sulphur port in the world. Driving to Beaumont we found an oil town strictly up to date. A beautiful yellow pine forest similar to that at Flagstaff, Ariz., in which cattle were pasturing, was an agreeable relief after our first glance at this type of scenery for five years. On the way to Lake Charles, La., we saw beautiful plantation homes in their live oak surroundings, picturesque river boats and lumbering.

This section is called the Rice Bowl of America. White herons inhabit these marshes and are very beautiful. The lotus blooms are very fragrant and in such large groups that they are prettier than usual.

We lunched at Eunice, La., where two days earlier 54 shot were exchanged at a dance. Six men shot and three houses, it is said to be the toughest part of Louisiana.

You will recall in "Evangelina" how Gabriel and his father established a home after the British warships moved the Acadians from Nova Scotia to this part of Louisiana. We went thru this huge 130 year old French house, built of great timbers with its fireplaces plantations architecture, large lawns covered by live oaks and Spanish moss. It is to be made into a state park soon but we saw it unspoiled by efforts to reconstruct it. Near New Iberia I photographed the Evangeline Oak, located on a bayou and near this they have Evangeline buried and believe firmly in the story.

In this town the homes are large and old architecture, unpainted structures but picturesque and undoubtedly have their history. The Old South here is still the Old South and I'm glad to have seen it, as it will soon be spoiled as far as its originality is concerned, as stone roads are about to go thru and that of course always destroys the romantic conception of the place.

After ferrying the Achafalaya river and observing lumber mills which show what the country used to be, we followed the Mississippi river for some distance along its great levee to camp just outside of the South and the most interesting that I've seen aside from Santo Fe.

This would not be a bad country in which to live if it were not for the prevalence of pests.

Yesterday we saw Tulane University, which is one of the best known of southern universities. It was not as large as I had expected. We also saw Loyola University and the University of New Orleans. Special places of interest we saw include Audubon Park, zoo, aquarium, Canal Street with its beautiful lighting and broad expanse unsurpassed in this country, fine residences etc.

We lunched at the most famous restaurant in the South, the Louisianne. I spent some time in a well-known antique gun store. At the Cabildo, the most famous museum of the South, I talked with the director about my usual topic. We also visited the St. Louis Cathedral, Old French Quarter, Old French market extending for miles and not excepting California, the largest and most interesting I've seen. Wharves stretch for nine miles along the river front and we watched the loading. A record number of cemeteries are grouped in one section of the city and remind one of the Mexican or northern Michigan where the Indians buried above ground.

New Orleans was founded in 1718 and is located 110 miles from the mouth of the river, 70 miles by air from the gulf. Buildings average between 100 and 200 years in age. In the old quarters of the history of the area known as Louisiana territory which has been carved into 17 states, have been written. It has an area ranking fourth in U. S. Canal Street already is the world's main thoroughfare, and has just been made the world's finest main business street at a cost of $3,500,000. They have $2,500,000 auditorium seating 12,000. We are traveling the Old Spanish Trail. Will write from Cuba.

Love,
Harvey.

Winona Lake Bible Conference

August 15 to 24

In the midst of one of the greatest programs ever offered by a Bible conference are three great days, each with a special feature. While the program will run through each day with numerous other speakers of note, on the first Sunday, August 17th, and the following Thursday, August 21st, and the last Sunday, Aug. 24th, three of the world's outstanding platform men are to speak.

On the first Sunday, August 15, Clinton N. Howard known as "the little giant" will speak on "The Glory of the American Constitution." This is an address which more than one noted American has declared to be the strongest thing ever delivered on the question of the 18th Amendment and the Constitution. On Thursday, Aug. 21, is what is known as "Home Coming Day," when the friends of the "old days," friends of recent days, and the Winona enthusiasts from everywhere are expected to be at Winona in great numbers.

Lionel Fletcher, Australia's outstanding evangelist, and at present pastor of one of her largest churches, will speak on the subject "A True Detective Story." Immediately at the close of this service an old-fashioned lawn party will be held on the lawn under the giant oak, with a number of speakers and reminiscences from old timers.

On the last Sunday, August 24, Dr. O. F. Bartholow, will be the speaker. He comes from the great Methodist church of Mount Vernon, New York. His great men's Bible class is the largest in the United States. He is a mighty preacher and will speak on the subject, "The Philosopher's Stone."

These services will be held in the Billy Sunday tabernacle, seating 7000 people, and if the experience of last year is duplicated the huge building will be packed to its capacity.

For details of the Winona Lake Bible conference, write to Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, director, Winona Lake, Ind.

Fire Starting From Thresher Burns Two Barns
Fire believed to have started from a spark from a threshing machine engine destroyed two large barns and their contents on the William Brecht and Mason Brant farms near Coloma Saturday, with a total loss estimated $32,000, only partially covered by insurance. The Brecht barn caught fire about 11 a. m. Quick work on the part of spectators saved the live stock but before those pres-

GUILLOT
Chef, Hotel Astor, New York City

The two following recipes, Mr. Guillot points out, are sufficiently unusual to be well out of the ordinary routine of the family menu, but at the same time are both economical and easy to prepare.

Devilled Bones—Brush the drumsticks, wings or back of a cold fowl with melted butter. Mix together one tablespoon prepared mustard, one tablespoon chutney, and one tablespoon curry powder. Cover the parts of the fowl with the mixture and broil lightly. Mix together over the fire one cup gravy, one teaspoon sugar, juice of one lemon, one tablespoon ketchup, few grains cayenne, and salt and pepper. Cook the parts of the fowl with the sauce for five minutes and serve.

Spanish String Beans—Shred two medium-size onions. Sauté in two tablespoons butter until tender. Mix with two cups strained, stewed tomatoes. Add salt and pepper to taste, one teaspoon sugar, and a few grains cayenne. Bring to boil and add one quart of freshly cooked string beans. Simmer for a quarter of an hour, add two teaspoons butter, and serve.

ent noticed it, sparks had blown across the road and ignited the Brant barn. Both structures were tinder dry and burned within an hour. The Brecht barn contained 50 tons of hay, 400 bushels of oats, eight acres of wheat in shocks and a considerable amount of farming equipment. The Brant barn contained 60 tons of hay, 300 bushels of rye, and farming equipment.

SMITH-HUGHES INSTRUCTOR HAS ADVICE ON FEED

FARMER WHO CAN GROW GENERAL CROPS SHOULD MIX OWN FEED

The question is often asked whether a farmer should buy feeds or whether he should use his home-grown feeds. There is only one way to answer a question of this type. If the farm does not produce the general run of crops, it will be necessary for the farmer to purchase feed. If your farm produces the common crops, that is, hay, wheat, corn, oats, barley, soy beans, etc., then you are producing all the element that is necessary to the maintenance of the animal body.

The matter of a suitable protein supplement is sometimes chosen as the sales argument of the eager salesman. It is to be remembered that a protein supplement is vital and necessary in practically every ration that may be used on the farm. A commercial feed exceeds the farm produced feed in value only in so far as it is able to supply numerous proteins, digestible ones, at a fair market price.

With good alfalfa hay, corn or barley, ensilage, oats, and a little purchased cottonseed or linseed meal any farmer should be able to mix his own feed that will be superior to most commercial feeds at a great saving.

Farmers are sometimes asked to purchase expensive mineral supplements. This policy is advisable only when you have an exceptional condition on your farm. If you have a sow that has farrowed and has a big litter of pigs to feed, or if you have any other case where the animal seems run down and emaciated and an ordinarily rich ration will not rebuild the animal, it may be wise to give this animal a mineral supplement. As a general rule any farm that will produce any of the above mentioned crops will supply the average animal with all the minerals necessary to the thrifty maintenance of that animal.

Alf Roe No Longer In the Same Class With Gertie Ederle

Another endurance record that has lingered intact for the past fifty years was cracked several ways Monday Aug. 4, when Bert Christensen crossed it, but after a swim across Clear Lake ten times. Our informant stated that he was not sure whether the lake is a quarter of a mile or a mile and a quarter wide at the point where Christensen crossed it, but either way it was a good swim. Christensen got no rest en route save what he could take sitting in the water at the end of the trip, and was able to haul himself into the boat unaided.

The former record was made by Alfred Roe at the tender age of eight years. It is said before the strain of business life had sapped his vitality and endurance. It is not known at the present date whether or not he will permit the new mark to go unchallenged.
