Adams Family Writes Record to Correct Report

The Record has received the following letter from Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Adams and Louise relative to the report that H. R. Adams had been injured.
Jan. 23, 1931
Burlingame, Calif.
Dear Sir: We are receiving many cards and letters from home and they all tell us about the report around town that H. R. had gotten hurt and was in a hospital. Now that is erroneous for he never enjoyed a winter more in his life. Wonderful climate, health and appetite so what more could you wish?
There is so much to see and so many places to go that we really haven't time for anything else. The natives call this their rainy season. Because it doesn't rain any other time of the year. And that is about two days a week.
During Christmas week we had white frosts every night but since then the rains began. The hills are all green now and narcissus and jonquils are blooming. The tulips and hyacinths and all kinds of bulbs are up. Iris is also in bloom and the Scotch heather is beautiful.
New Years night we had a little surprise-what the natives call a small earthquake. It jarred the houses. It sounded to us as though a powder mill had exploded. We have been all through the northern part and expect to go to Los Angeles March 1. This is a wonderful state. Wish our friends could all be with us.
We surely enjoy the Record in the Golden West.
Regards,
Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Adams and Louise.

Atty. Worthington Endows Church in Memory of Wife

The exercises attending the presentation of the communion table gift to the Methodist church by Atty. A. A. Worthington in memory of his wife were attended by a large audience Sunday morning. The presentation was made by Mrs. W. F. Runner and the acceptance in behalf of the church board was made by A. H. Hiller. At the request of a number, the addresses are in part reproduced:

Presentation of Communion Table to Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday, Jan. 25, 1931.
This occasion brings both sad and happy memories. Sad, because in our meeting together we are again made conscious of the loss of one who was dear to us; and yet happy because of the many years of friendship and fellowship we enjoyed together. We cannot well do proper justice to this occasion without mention of the one whose memory we all delight to honor and perpetuate. We who best knew Mrs. Lou Worthington are familiar with the well-established fact that hers was a life of highest ideals and purposes; and her devoted service in the home, to her church and the community, were the best possible efforts of a well-spent life.
In recognition and appreciation of these facts, her husband, A. A. Worthington, desired to give some definite expression that would worthily honor Mrs. Worthington, and help to perpetuate her memory in the heart and life of the church. Acting in compliance with this wish, he presented the Ladies Aid Society with a sum of money that was to be used in any way the Society should choose—for a memorial.

Whitefish Caviar Supplants Russian Article in Favor

A recent report of the Department of Conservation that the waters surrounding the state last year produced 4,463 pounds of caviar caused some questioning remarks, for sturgeon are protected in Michigan.

Whitefish "caviar" came into popularity after the cessation of trade relations with Russia disrupted the caviar market. Today the popularity of caviar taken from whitefish is forming an important source of income for Michigan fishermen.

Whitefish roe is a by product of the commercial fishing industry. It is secured mostly during the month of October in advance of the spawning season of the whitefish.

The general economic situation, and a desire to co-operate with the state government in its effort to conserve state tax funds, were responsible for the course adopted by the University authorities, said President Ruthven.

The Russian Five-Year Program

It is rather worthy of note that the Russian propaganda in favor of the Soviet government and the amount of trade which the Soviet is giving the rest of the world in furtherance of its so-called five-year program is modifying public sentiment in regard to Russia and its aspirations. The reasons therefore are very simple. The program is moving forward toward its fruition and the actual usefulness of the plan is almost on the eve of demonstration. Started originally as an ultra-democratic form of government the Soviet has developed an over-mastering dictatorship, the necessity of which is defended by the dictator as a prerequisite for solidarity of the state and of its people. Here is one of the greatest populations of the earth being exploited for its own protective self-containment, on a scale never attempted on this earth before. Whatever the qualifications of the leaders in education, the fact remains that the Russian government has at its service a very great number of highly learned men. Of course some are wholeheartedly in accord with the Communistic theory of government and some more are merely hopeful that the five-year program may, with some modifications, produce a favorable result for the Russian people.

Meantime, with these human helps, and with the almost wholesale employment of foreign planners and technicians the Russians are putting in an industrial establishment which is the wonder of engineers employed upon it. A great waterpower development of greater size than that of Niagara, is under the control of General Hugh L. Cooper, an American engineer of the highest standing. Industrial structures of enormous capacity are being built by the Austin company, American constructing engineers. American and German factories are furnishing machinery to equip these factories. Great storehouses for grain are in process of erection at economic centers of its collection and distribution. Incidentally the Russians have already learned enough about comparative values of equipment to have come to the conclusion that the Germans build their machines too light for long and hard service. But the work of completing the five-year program is going on so actively that the observers and economists in Europe are beginning to wonder what will happen to the trade of the other nations on the continent in case the Russian experiment does make good. If Russia, with its every sector being made to sweat to produce things which may be exchanged for gold, with which to meet the bills for the foreign equipment, does make a measurable success, that country will have little dependence on the rest of the world.

Two reasons appear which may militate against its success. One is that a nation cannot get educated into machine-mindedness in five years, because that process has taken a hundred years, nearly for other nations. The other is that, with self-containment not requiring supplies from other countries, the processes of exchange will not operate and Russia will not find a market for her raw materials in other countries for gold. These raw materials constitute some of the greatest reserves in the world of timber, minerals and products of the soil. The attempt to sell them to other nations without compensatory purchases seems to be foredoomed to failure. Meantime, the Russian experiment seems to be progressing in spite of the absence of formal relationships with several other leading countries in the world.

Already the success of the Communistic theory is being doubted and the Russians themselves are suggesting compromises with the capitalistic idea. Maybe that is the way it will work out, and that the future of Russia will be affected by an evolution rather than by a revolution.—Mich. Mfg. & Fin. Record.

The Forthcoming State Tax

The state tax for 1931-32-33 is indicated by the report of the budget commissioner already filed with the governor. It calls, if previously started activities are to be continued on the basis upon which they were begun, for a substantial addition to the levied tax, perhaps as much as $9,000,000 more. Part of this, half of it, is to take up a deficit from the current fiscal year. That must be levied, because, in the few instances so far apparent, Michigan governmental units find that deficits are destructive to credit and good administration. Whether or not a letting up in the institutional programs will be desirable and practical remains to be seen, although Gov. Brucker has indicated it as a method of keeping the tax levy down.

With an average rate of taxation in Michigan now over $31 on the thousand of assessed valuation, of which more than 10 per cent is for state purposes, any establishment of a higher state levy than that which has been established will be poor policy. During the recent state tax inquiry it was clearly shown that the bulk of the taxes levied in Michigan is self-imposed by the communities. If they are to lead to economy and decreased levies it will not be by the state setting an example of increased levies.

The face of the first Englishman according to one expert was animal in type, with a broad flat nose, a massive jaw, little chin and shaggy hair.

Learning From Adversity

"Sweet are the uses of adversity." The writer of this cheering bit of philosophy may not have had in mind an American business depression or a record-breaking drought, but he knew a thing or two and he expressed a great big truth in a very small proverb.

Others have told us about angels visiting us unawares, about the silver lining in the big black clouds, about blessings in disguise, and a hundred other pretty and hopeful sayings that assist us in getting a new grip on the life-line and in making another try before we quit the game.

Sometimes adversity presents such a perplexing maze that our faith in the above bit of philosophy becomes badly cramped, but it is said that the exception proves the rule. Adversity does not always bring blessings in its wake—not at all, but where one man is undone by adversity a hundred are dammed by prosperity.

The parable of the prodigal son illustrates the point. It was prosperity that led the lad into a far country and finally into the hog lot where he ate shucks with the hogs—it was adversity that drove him back home and back to good bed and board.

The distracting effect of prosperity upon the prodigal son has recurred in individual and in collective experiences, times without number. It was prosperity that lured the American people into the distressingly helpless condition that they are in today. It was not hard times, not famine, not a financial panic, not a visitation of Providence.

It was a life of ease, of plenty and of boundless wealth and opportunity that paralyzed the nation and engendered a feeling of security and an unbounded faith in the future. Adversity had no part in bringing about present conditions.

We learn nothing from prosperity, but we find a world of schooling in things that have gone awry. The business depression that now prevails throughout the country is an adversity that is big with blessings for the American people. It may not seem so to those who suffer immediate loss in the closing down of business, but the American people had to be taught the lesson, and they would learn in none but the school of experience. They were as the prodigal son and had to be driven to the shucks before they would learn the proper use of prosperity.

Adversity is teaching America what a shiftless spendthrift she has been and how improvident has been her ways. With adversity will come wisdom, and with wisdom will come some sort of government control that will preclude the possibility of such another breakdown of business.

The schoolmaster is abroad in the land and his name is Adversity.

Science and Religion Meet

Observing the annual convention of American scientists, a minister said from his pulpit: "As one watches the scientists he becomes aware, I think of attitudes and states of mind which are akin to religious faith."

Another minister declared: "Science is giving religion amazing tools for humanitarian work. It is leading men to sublimer conceptions of God."

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, regarded as the foremost living American scientist, in discussing his own great discoveries, said that science was not only consistent with religion but tended to lead men to religion.

The director of research of the General Electric laboratories recently announced that he knows no way to explain the laws of nature except to say that they are the "will of God."

So religion and science, after a long period of mutual suspicion and hostility, are coming into harmony, each with a bigger outlook than it had before.

Public Music Taste

Walter Damrosch has just completed a poll of his radio listeners on the subject of the ideal symphonic program to include music representative of the overture, the symphony and the waltz. Thousands of replies were received, the majority of which favored numbers by Wagner, Schubert and Strauss. Mr. Damrosch concludes that music lovers' taste remains true to classic works.

Oddly, too, the four numbers most favored were the same four chosen 25 years ago by persons attending a series of orchestral concerts conducted by Mr. Damrosch. This suggests a Damrosch audience, nation-wide, but with a specially cultivated taste.

If Paul Whiteman or Rudy Vallee had conducted such a poll of listeners' favorites, the replies might have been just as numerous but the choices quite different.

Mr. Damrosch is right; the classic composers are as much admired as ever. But popular taste is growing wider, as well as better. It appreciates a great variety of good music, modern as well as old.

People had a big time on their imaginary profits. Why can't they imagine some more and keep on spending?

The Old Timer's Corner

Old Timer Marvels How Tempus Fugit in Buchanan Dist.

It's a funny thing how things change and develop in ways that we least expected when we were kids. I was thinking of the way things have gone down along the Lakes and ever where we used to call it Stevensville and all along that shore line, north and south. There is nothing but sand, and blamed poor sand at that. It used to be said that nothing but beans would grow there, but look at that country now. The hard roads being put thru our course "macker" that country, and they found they could raise a lot of things besides beans. It is a mighty prospect for part of the country now, as dollars and cents count.

If you have occasion to drive some place off the highways it is nearly as bad as it was forty or fifty years ago, but they have not been stingy with their concrete, and so it is easy to go any place you want to and not die in a fog of dust either. In our day, it was a good days trip to drive over to the lake and have an hour or two to eat and swim and drive back home for the sand was deep and dry and slippery and it took a good husky team to pull thru it. I often think of those days when I am driving down thru that country, and seeing the same old dunes and sand, but the homes look new and prosperous, with green lawns etc., where before it was all sand and sandbars, and hot and dry and dusty.

John Holmes Tells of Big Wheat Deal in Old Buchanan

It was developed as a matter of necessity, for with the coming of motor drawn vehicles, came the demand for good roads and short-cut points. When I say shortest I have to leave plenty of room for revision for it seems to me that in many cases there are places where distances could have been shortened a lot, and sharp corners have been avoided, but so long as I didn't have anything to say about the construction of those roads and less to say about where they should go, etc., I suppose I might as well make the best of them as where they are. And when I drive down thru some "hol-low" where it used to be a log road and mud and clay knee deep, and now go speeding along over a hard road where it has been filled in and made solid and firm, I guess I will be glad to take the change as they fixed it. Maybe later on they will make some super-highways, perhaps elevated, and made in absolutely straight lines between points, and if we are still alive, I

Editor Record,

Way back in the years when the Democratic party was trying to split this country, 1861-4, there were a number of peculiar things happened to our money and trade matters, such, for instance, as driving all of the metal money except pennies and two cent pieces, out of circulation, and the whole business depended for small change on five, ten, twenty five and fifty cent "shinplasters." Consequently prices went skyward. Wheat flour as high as $16 a barrel. A thrifty farmer in the northwest part of Buchanan township grew a lot of wheat and as the price went up he stored for higher, until he was said to have over 20,000 bushel on hand and when the price reached $2.55 he sold to one of the Buchanan mill men and was to have two weeks in which to bring it in. In a very few days the price went to

$3 and the miller was scared lest he would not get the 20,000 bushels so on Sunday morning he hitched old Doc Dobbin to the buggy and drove out to the home of his farm-er friend and asked him to release him from the wheat sale. Mr. Farmer jumped to the conclusion that wheat had fallen in price, so said firmly there would be no release on the sale. Well the miller said if you insist on it I will take it but I want you to get it right in. Have your neighbors help you and bring in the wheat as quickly as you can. The next day there came a caravan of wagons loaded with the wheat. You can imagine what happened when the true situation dawned on Mr. Farmer.

Well, it is only another week until the 26th annual dinner of the Chicago-Buchanan Society. Are you coming over? By the way, speaking of Milton Platts and the Chicago-Buchanan Society, he was the very first secretary of our organization. He lived near Chicago, in some little town, and his mother was the instigator of the formation of the Society, in 1905, at the home of Belle Graham Daw, who then lived on Sedgewick Street near Lincoln Park. When I first came to Chicago I had a room right near their home and used to see them pass and mingle from the grocery store on Clark Street near their home. And that's a long time ago, what?

Miss A. M. Carlton spent the week end in Chicago. Clyde Marble is said to be very sick with the flu. George Adams is in Chicago today attending the auto show. Nathaniel Weaver spent Saturday and Sunday in South Bend. J. H. Knight spent yesterday with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Knight.

Harleigh Riley is seriously ill with pneumonia. Charles Blodgett is acting as janitor at the school house during the absence of Mr. Eganar, who is ill. Mrs. Eva Huss has returned from Lansing where she spent three weeks at the home of her brother, C. A. Barber.

Mrs. F. F. Pierce returned to her home in South Bend Sunday, after a visit of three weeks here with relatives.

Editor Record,

As we reached Dairen at 6:30 a. m., July 12, we had little chance to see the country through which we traveled. That which we saw appeared to be good agricultural land, mainly from the look of the crops, koftiang (which look like our Indian corn) covered vast areas. Soy beans, which we were told was used for making everything from candy to ammunition, are grown in immense quantities. The farm houses appeared to be well built brick buildings, very neat in appearance.

We found Dairen to be in no sense an Oriental city. There were wide, well paved streets, fine street cars, modern six and eight story office buildings, taxi cabs and motor busses. On our arrival we were the guests of the railway people to a very fine breakfast at the Star Beach hotel, a fashionable beach resort run by the company some miles out of the city on the splendid auto road to old Port Arthur. The hotel is in a beautiful location and as we looked about on the sea and hills it was hard to make ourselves believe we were not at some resort along the coast of southern California.

We had more to say of Dairen as our return from taking us were forced to remain here about two days. At 12 noon our boat left the wharf at Dairen and coasting round the point of the Liaoting Peninsula we passed the narrow entrance to the harbor of old Port Arthur (China) by the Japanese (Kupang) and in the distance saw the great shaft erected to the memory of the 30,000 Nipponese who lost their lives fighting the Russians for the possession of this strategic point on Chinese territory. This whole coast is military ground and so, of course, no pictures could be taken. The "Rus-sians thought the same about Port Arthur."

Shortly after passing the monument we swung out from the coast and headed almost directly west. Out of sight of land we began to take account of our quarters on the boat, our fellow passengers, the cargo and various other matters. The boat was the smallest that we had been upon. The forward deck was covered with piles of freight and on top of these were the Chinese and their wives and children as could be seen from the deck. They were quite comfortable but when it rained (as it did later on) it was quite another matter. There were a few first class cabins, all filled. By far the greater part of the passengers were with us in second class. Besides our forty Americans, there were many Russians, Japanese, Chinese and several representatives of European countries. Our sleeping quarters were below deck where we found that we had been allotted space enough such as it was, matting covered floors and nothing more. There were perhaps 50 to 75 Asiatics already there packed in like sardines. The air therefore teacher not present. So they were attending a Japanese middle school in Mukden where expenses were within their means. But it galled them to have to attend a school conducted by the hated Japanese. Besides, doing his regular daily work in the school he had been taking two lessons per week in English as outside work. When you realize that the required work in the Japanese schools is much heavier and the hours are longer than in an American school you can realize how this lad had been working.

Towards midnight it began to rain and there was nothing to do but take our bed and run for that suffocating place below deck. The sleep was really only a stupor. Our boat being small and of consequent light draft, we were not delayed at the bar for high tide as many larger ones were, but steamed merrily on past them and up the Pei Ho (pronounced bay ho) some 15 or 20 miles to Tien Tsai. The Pei Ho is an artificial canal, dug some 1500 years ago as an outlet for the Grand Canal. It is crooked, narrow and shallow. Only at high tide can boats of any considerable draft navigate it and then only by being careful to keep in the middle of the channel. The country through which we traveled on this canal is part of China's great coastal plain. It is the only way for the grain of growing crops. We passed a camp of American Marines and also the U. S. airplane headquarters. Old Glory was beautiful even when surrounded by Chinese mud.

At 1:30 p. m. July 13th, our boat finally tied up at the pile of mud designated as the Tien Tsai wharf. We had been warned that in China the only way to be sure of the safety of our baggage was to handle it ourselves and thus keep it from the horde of coolies sweating at every turn to make a few coppers. Due to the war conditions our friends in America had prophesied that should we be able to get to Tien Tsai we would never get to Peking, which of course was our objective. Well we were in Tien Tsai. What about going on? Some of our scouts brought back word, shortly after landing, that trains were running regularly and that ours was due to leave at 4 p. m. The only conditions of which I had seen thus far aside from the camp of the Marines and the airplane headquarters were portable barbed wire entanglements and one or two Marines doing guard duty at the Ford plant just as we entered the city.

The run to Peking took three and one half hours (about 80 or 90 miles). The road bed seemed to be in very good condition but the rolling stock was a motley collection of box flat and passenger cars. When Chiang Tsao Liang withdrew into Manchuria in the spring he had gutted all the railroads of their rolling stock and taken it north with him. We rode in a third class passenger car with all straits of Chinese citizens as our companions. We found them courteous and kind. The country traversed was more of the almost endless coastal plain. It was well cultivated and here and there were small groves of what looked to be young trees but as the varieties were all strange to us we could not say as to age. There were no farm houses, only tiny villages and those were walled. They dotted the landscape as far as the eye could reach. Just as these seemed to be no system of roads so there appeared no order in the location of these habitations. Why walled? To protect against thieves and tigers. Thieving is so common we were told that the farmer has to continually guard his crops. In Japan there seem to be little but rice raised, here there was much rice but also great areas of vegetables of different kinds. The railroad stations, platforms and yards were fairly well kept up in those places where, our train stopped long enough for us to look about. At nearly every place and often between stations, we saw many soldiers (Chinese) but very few of them with arms of any kind.

FORD SMOOTHNESS

The new Ford has more than twenty ball and roller bearings. EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all—an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do. As soon as you get into the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At other roller bearings are used regardless of their location. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford means smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triple X sheet-protect glass windshield, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Handall double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

BUCHANAN MAN VISITS TOMBS OF MANCHU EMPERORS

GETS GLIMPSES OF WARRING ARMIES OF CHINESE HACQUONS.

After the dinner we again entered the city and were taken outside the city about four miles over abominable dirt roads to the northern group of tombs of the ancient Manchu Emperors. There are two other groups of tombs, much farther away and said to be of considerable "less" interest. The North Tombs, as they are called, were built sometimes in the 16th century A. D. It is a high walled inclosure perhaps two to three acres in extent, rectangular in form with a grass wall, the shape of the rectangle dividing the area in the ratio of perhaps two to three. In both enclosures, are several rather small brick buildings with ornately constructed and decorated roofs. In the larger were several very large stone statues of various animals. We were told that the real sepulcher was under a large mound of earth heaped against the north wall on the outside. This mound itself is surrounded by a high wall which is an extension of the two long side walls of the enclosure.

On our way to and from the tombs we passed a group of large brick buildings and it was explained to us that this was an institution of higher learning, the University of Mukden. One of our companions crossing the Pacific was a Dr. who had had his graduate work in China with degrees at Peking and was on his way home to take a position as instructor in this institution. Many of the courtesies which our party had received here were due to his kindness and forethought.

At 8 p. m. we were again on board train on the Manchurian Southern Railway and headed south for Dairen. As an example of the mixture of international interests and products, this road is outstanding. It was originally built by the Russians with French capital on Chinese territory and is now operated by Japanese with the best of American rolling stock. It is the activities of this Japanese railroad company which is causing international complications between China and Japan and possibly Russia. I likewise have the feeling which many have that a more progressive manner of the management of the road did about everything in their power to accommodate our party, even to having a special dining car sent up from Dairen and attached to our train. The sleepers were a delight. As we reached Dairen at 6:30 a. m., July 12, we had little chance to see the country through which we traveled. That which we saw appeared to be good agricultural land, mainly from the look of the crops, koftiang (which look like our Indian corn) covered vast areas. Soy beans, which we were told was used for making everything from candy to ammunition, are grown in immense quantities. The farm houses appeared to be well built brick buildings, very neat in appearance.

We found Dairen to be in no sense an Oriental city. There were wide, well paved streets, fine street cars, modern six and eight story office buildings, taxi cabs and motor busses. On our arrival we were the guests of the railway people to a very fine breakfast at the Star Beach hotel, a fashionable beach resort run by the company some miles out of the city on the splendid auto road to old Port Arthur. was stupefying. The only chance for ventilation was thru the few 12 inch port holes and the roof where part of a hatch covering had been left off. During the night it rained hard and according to Japanese marine regulations all ports and hatches must be closed. Well, in this case they were not tho for a time international complications threatened. On that part of the deck which we were permitted to use sitting space was at a premium during the good weather but after an all night rain, with canvasses all soaked and leading Oh Boy! What a mess! Early in the evening everyone was out scouting for a spot where they could sleep on deck and avoid the "holes" below deck. We found one on the roof of the cooks galley in the after part of the ship. Here, by clearing away empty boxes and coils of steel cable we made ourselves fairly comfortable. What would we have done without these blessed sleeping bags! While making "camp" we had some very interesting callers, three Chinese high school boys. One of them spoke quite good English (a fact of which he was very proud) and acted as the spokesman. He seemed anxious to talk to us and particularly so when they learned we were Americans and not English. They are all educated Chinese, were intensely patriotic and were well informed on the political complications of their country with England, the United States and Japan, both of which it was evident they reared and hated. America was of dead been the one spot of hope among the nations. But some recent occurrences had left them doubtful now even there and as a result "China have no more friend among the nations." The lads were anxious to come to America to attend school but as they had not the funds and there were no schools in their home towns for the very good reason, as our young friend expressed it, "China have no money

Buchanan Dancers
Featured in South Bend Program

On Friday and Saturday nights of this week, five of Buchanan's talented young dancers will be featured in "The Follies of 1931" presented by the Progress Club of South Bend.

The Miller sisters, Eleanor and Mildred, the young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller, will appear in one of their ever popular acrobatic numbers. Peggy Merfeld and Una Kelley, with seven young girls, led by Teresa White playing the piano as accompaniment, will present a very beautiful Spanish dance, "La Rosita". The same group of girls, with Miss Mohn as soloist, will dance a difficult tap number, "The Black and Tan," a typical southern dance.

The young ladies have appeared before audiences many times in South Bend and are always outstanding in the program because of the professional and finished presentation of their dances.

On Sunday Miss Merfeld and Miss White will accompany Miss Mohn to Chicago where they will demonstrate and teach, with Miss Mohn, an original character number at the meeting of the Dancing Masters Association in the Bal Tavarin of the Sherman Hotel.

The Buchanan fire department answered a call from the Bishop building on Dewey Avenue Monday evening, some papers in a rear window in a room in which the trucks of an M-60 subcontractor are stored having ignited. The flames were extinguished without the use of fire or chemicals and before the fire had ignited the woodwork. The department was out eight minutes.

Christian Science Churches
"Truth" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday, Jan. 25.
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following taken from the Bible: "Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day." (Ps. 25:1)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "My angels are exalted thoughts, appearing at the door of some sepiulture, in which human belief has buried its fondest earthly hopes. With white fingers they point upward to a new and glorified trust, to higher ideals of life and its joys." (p. 299.)

Bridgman Basketeers Defeat Buchanan 33 to 11

BRADFIELD TAKES 1ST TEAM OUT DUE TO ROUGH TACTICS

B. H. S. SECONDS NOSE OUT BRIDGMAN SECONDS IN HARD GAME 20-15

Bridgman high school's basketball team took a 33 to 11 decision from the Buchanan reserves Friday night after the local regulars had played a hard game with the regulars.

Bridgman had built up an 8 to 0 lead in the first quarter, but the second quarter was a half-minute old when Steller, Big, Bridgman forward, crashed into Dalton Morse, who was trying to get off a shot, thereby ending Mr. Morse's performance for the evening. With the game continuing rougher than ever Coach Bradfield withdrew his regulars from the game, allowing the reserves to finish the game as well or as poorly as they wished. When Drietzler was banished from the game on personal grounds the referee missed several others; the Bucks finished the game with four men.

The Buchanan seconds nosed out the Bridgman seconds 20 to 15; after fighting an uphill battle all the way. "Pony" Dumbolton led the scoring with seven points, but he was ably assisted by "Skeet" Roleri who contributed five points and some nice floor work.

B. H. S. Debating Team Wins Through to the Semi-Finals

Out of 240 schools that took part in the preliminaries in the state league debate, eighty-five have qualified for the semi-finals. Twelve points are necessary to qualify for these debates. The eighty-five schools now in the semi-finals, have been divided into a fifth preliminary in which twenty-one schools will take part. Forty-three schools draw a bye in this fifth debate. Buchanan was one of the forty-three.

Of the eighty-five schools now in the semi-finals, the remaining sixty-four will go into the finals. Schools in this section that are in the finals are Plainwell, Paw Paw, Dowagiac and Buchanan.

PROGRESS OF CLASS ROOMS DURING WEEK

33 AG. REPORTS READY FOR INSPECTION; MUSIC MEMORORY TEST.

Mr. Knoblauch states that thirty-three project reports are ready for inspection at the State Department of Agriculture.

The object of taking projects is to give the students practical experience along the lines of agriculture.

Two members have become so interested in agriculture that one project did not satisfy. Clall Sult and Clarence Huff are making four reports.

The projects that are being covered are: potatoes, tomatoes, pop corn, beans, strawberries, hogs, calves and chickens.

SCHOOL SLANTS

Elliott Boyce was seen at school Monday morning dressed "fit to kill," (to use that much hackneyed expression). What in the world could the attraction be?

We are all glad to hear that Cy Bullard is coming along great after his tonsorial operation, and that his smiling countenance will again be seen within the portals of dear old B. H. S.

Wuxtra! Wuxtra! Tommy Quirk got a haircut and just ruined all the feminine hearts that beat quickly when Tommy passed flaunting those adored tresses. Ah, Tommy! How could you?

It is an easy guess that the main dish in cafeteria for the next two weeks or so will consist mainly of eggs. As it happened, last week Miss Skeels told Marjory Campbell to boil a dozen eggs. Marjory got out the eggs and went cheerfully to work. After a short time, Miss Skeels returned for the eggs only to find—no! the intended one dozen but five dozen bobbing merrily away, already past the soft boiled stage and well on their way to being hard boiled. Just another case of misinterpretation.

A group of well known students held a square dance Friday after school in the hall. A good time was being enjoyed by all when the party had to break up on account of the big too much racket.

BASKETBALL BIOGRAPHIES

Shelby, Ill., awoke one morning to find that on August 17, 1914, a baby boy had been born to Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Jesse, and had been duly christened James Glenn. However, the neighbors did not remain in ignorance of this fact very long, little Glenn soon informing them by means of a lusty pair of lungs.

The inevitable step came soon, and when Glenn was five years old the family moved to the rising village of Buchanan, bringing also Glenn's smaller brother and sister. The young Mr. Jesse prospered rapidly in the new habitat and when Glenn graduated from eighth grade he received the trophy annually awarded to the best citizen in the eighth grade.

With such prestige as this as a background, Glenn entered dear old B. H. S. and was immediately elected president of the freshman class. As he had starred on the basketball team in the junior high school, Glenn also embarked on an athletic career in high school. He reported to Coach Bradfield for football practice and was awarded an end position on the second team. Last season he was second-string quarterback, and an excellent passer.

He also reported for basketball and started his freshman season on the second team, but before the year was over Glenn had seen much action on the varsity. He is also fond of music, being a member of the high school Glee Club last year and also during the present school year. He is also a ranking member of his class, the present sophomores, scholastically. To see him in the street or in the school he is no different from any other student, except that he is a little more quiet. But on the basketball floor he is "all there."

Glenn's build has given him the nick-name of "Tiny" and "Diminutive" but his ambitions are much higher than his size. Glenn hopes to enter college upon the completion of his high school course and become a "Colitch-boy" and an athlete.

Glenn likes home made candy, certain types of women and harmonica playing (being one himself) but his pet peeves are spaghetti and manual labor.

B. H. Physician Talks to Assembly On Bone Fractures

The assembly program of last week was opened by a medley of "old time" songs. The speaker of the morning was Dr. C. A. Mitchell of Benton Harbor, and his topic was "Broken Bones."

"Besides reading, riting and 'rithmetic, a persons needs good common horse sense and good health," says Dr. Mitchell.

"Last year there were 32,500 killed in automobile accidents. This number has increased in late years because of more people, more mechanical devices and more vacations and leisure time."

Dr. Mitchell enumerated several things which one should remember in caring for persons with broken bones: (1) Do not transport patient unless injured part is well protected. (2) Make injured person as comfortable as possible until a doctor has arrived. (3) Keep your head in case of an accident.

Interclass Basketball Tournery Starts

Last Tuesday night began the first series of the basketball tournament with the freshmen and the sophomores, and the juniors and seniors playing. The score of the freshmen vs. sophomores being 22-3; the junior-senior game, 11-5 in favor of the juniors. Katherine Portz made the most baskets for the juniors and Florence Shipperly made four of the five points for the seniors.

Thursday night gave another game to the juniors when the sophomores played them, the score being 8-7. This was the best game played this year. Doris Campbell of the sophomores and Jane Habicht of the juniors were considered the outstanding players. The freshmen and seniors played on Thursday with the seniors winning by a score of 17-7. Jean Russell of the freshmen and Florence Shipperly of the seniors made the most baskets.

The basketball games will continue this week, the sophomores second team playing the junior second team. The junior vs. freshmen and sophomore vs. senior first team will be played this week.

Fashion Expert Tells what the Better Dressed Studs Wear

(Note) This column is not printed to tell one what to wear, it is merely a review of what the better dressed upper classmen are wearing.

While most of the male students of B. H. S. appear on Monday morning, the same as any morning, with the ordinary pants and sweater outfit, one senior boy blossomed out last Monday morning with a swell brown suit.

The suit, a tailor made one, was a two-button affair. The vest was the popular five button model and the pants were the conventional twenty-one inch cut. The shirt worn with this outfit was the customary white broadcloth, and was well set off with a dark red tie and also a light red silk pocket handkerchief.

As this breaks up all dress conventions of B. H. S., the whole school is agog and wondering whether the boys will continue with the old fashion, or if they will follow the lead of this popular senior. One of Buchanan's post graduates who has regularly appeared in corduroys, appeared last Monday in a pair of black herring bone trousers topped off with a black, red, and white sweater. A striped tie also accompanied this ensemble.

A report has also been received at this point that the trousers with which John Strayer had an accident two weeks ago, have been resurrected and are now appearing with the green sweater to form one of Buchanan's neatest ensembles.

Countries have been covered, the class will have these programs.

Extempore Winners Work

The winners of the extempore speaking contest, Roger Thompson and Thomas Quirk, with their instructor, Mrs. Dumbbar, have been working hard for the coming contest to be held sometime in February.

Practical English

English 9 students gave directions on doing various things for their speech day this week. The directions were all of a practical nature, such as, how to send telegrams, how to use a library, etc. The talks were interesting and instructive.

Sciences Class Talks Projects

Aeroplanes, locomotives, electricity, iron and many other resources are to constitute the semester projects of the junior high science class.

Mr. Moore says, "These projects are to be chosen to give the student a better understanding of the subject in which he is most interested."

These projects are strictly chosen by each individual student. The source of material is to be gathered by his own initiative, and arranged in booklet form.

BECK'S TIRE FIVE CREEP UP ON 3 OAKS PIN QUINLET

A gradual slipping by the Three Oaks quintet, city league leaders, and some high individual scores marked the play at the Buchanan Bowling Club alleys during the past week.

The Three Oaks quintet won one and lost two to Beck's Tire Shop, the runner-up.

In the series between the First National Bank five and the Dixie Oil Five, Karling rolled a 215 and a 212 game in succession, making the series in 588. Heyde of the same team rolled a 245 and made the series in 883.

STATE PARKS ARE LABORATORIES IN WILD LIFE STUDY

FERTILE GROUND FOR STUDY OF FAUNA AND FLORA FOR STUDY.

Most of Michigan's state parks are ideal open air laboratories for the study of wild life and other natural resources, and the Department of Conservation invites the schools of the state to take advantage of these places.

With 65 state parks scattered through practically every part of the state, at least one is within reasonable distance of every village and city. A field trip by a school or a class to one of these parks will give boys and girls a more vivid and comprehensive understanding of the necessity and value of the state's program of conservation.

In extending the general invitation to the schools of the state to take advantage of the object lessons offered by the parks, P. J. Hoffmaster, head of the Parks Division of the Department of Conservation, said that every country will be given these group visitors by park employees. Park superintendents will welcome them and give them every possible assistance. At several of the parks there are group camp buildings where arrangements can be easily made for over night or week end stops.

Mr. Hoffmaster pointed out some of the outstanding things of conservation interest in various parks. At the Walter J. Hayes park, for instance, is a variety of trees, shrubs and flowers that probably cannot be exceeded in any other place of its area in the state. The Hartwick Pines Park offers the last stand of virgin pine trees in southern Michigan. Other parks have places of historical importance. Every park, he said, offers some thing of particular interest.

In southern Michigan, especially, where forests and other comparatively "wild" places are being rapidly lost to industry and agriculture the need for such places as the state parks offer can be readily seen, and it is the hope of those administering the parks that these places will be given extensive use not only for recreational purposes but for educational uses as well.

13,000 Cards Submitted in Creel Census

More than 13,000 creel census cards have been submitted by anglers and conservation officers to the Fish Division of the Conservation Department since last spring.

This is far in excess of the 1930 figure when 10,326 cards were received. In 1929 the number was 8,000.

The cards will continue to be received throughout the winter. During the past it has been customary for fishermen to fill out cards only during the spring and summer fishing seasons. The Fish Division this year is asking them to continue to fill out information concerning catches taken by all manner of fishing; lake spearing, ice fishing and spring spearing.

If ice fishermen will submit the cards indicating catches of various species, the time spent fishing, etc., the Fish Division will be able to obtain some approximate indication of the extensiveness of ice fishing and spearing in the state.

How Much TO SAVE?

With spending now offered as the solution of the country's problems, the puzzling question arises: How much to save? This bank would counsel all who can, to spend normally for normal needs, but not to spend all; save at least a certain percentage, regularly.

It is well, always, to have a cash reserve equal to at least three months' income. If you have no such fund available, isn't right now an ideal time to open a Savings Account and get started?
