MORSE TWINS CELEBRATE 17TH BIRTHDAY MAKING 24 POINTS.

After putting up a slow and indifferent game of basketball against Three Oaks last Friday evening, the Buchanan high school team showed a complete "change of heart" Tuesday night and, along with their old rivals, Niles, gave as nice a show as has been seen for some time.

Louie Morse opened with a pot shot, but Mattix soon tied it up with a similar shot. Lauren scored twice from the foul line and Mike Schultz a close-in shot, but Hand and Meyer broke loose with field goals and Shoop made a free throw to give Niles a 7 and 6 lead...

Louie started things off again by scoring from close-in and Lauren sank a long shot to give Buchanan the lead, but Hand slipped away to give the lead to Niles and the Bucks retrieved it when Lauren sank a pot shot. Mattix scored from the field and Frizzo from the foul line to give Niles a 22 and 20 lead at the end of the third period.

DOG INFECTED WITH RABIES BITES 2 BOYS

The boy had gone to the kennel where the dog was kept chained and attempted to quiet the animal which had been barking and howling dismally for days. The dog first obeyed but came out again and as the boy came within chain length, he suddenly leaped and bit him in the face, lacerating the nose and lip so that it was necessary to take the boy to the physician for treatment.

The next morning the dog died, about 22 hours after he had bitten the boy. The head was immediately severed and sent to Ann Arbor, where it underwent examination in the laboratories of the University hospital and a verdict was returned that the brain was found to be marked with peculiar patches denoting rabies infection.

Melvin Jewell incurred a slight scratch while playing with the dog Feb. 4, and is also being treated. Both boys were reported all right this morning.

Chicago-Buchanan Society Held 26th Annual Banquet Friday Eve

Chicken dinners were served to fifty members and guests at 7:30 p. m. We waited for quite a while until the promised representatives from Buchanan would arrive. A slight rain and snow flurry had come up late in the afternoon and we supposed that was what scared them out and so we had our dinner without them.

An invited guest sang several songs for us and then the annual "Question Box" of, for and about "old timers" was gone over, which brought out many amusing incidents in early Buchanan history.

The secretary mentioned several items of interest, including the WLS broadcast to be put on the air, Feb. 11th at 12:40 p. m. And it is understood that they will mention the fact of the Chicago-Buchanan Society as being "the only club of its kind, but we will now have to include our "daughter society" out in Los Angeles, which is 2 years old and given power by Will House and George Joslin.

The election of officers resulted in a single vote cast for the entire set of officers of last year to hold office for another term.

Those present at this meeting were: Will Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Barton, Dr. and Mrs. L. H. Harner, Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Schriver,

Capital and Labor

An unusual magazine advertisement in the news-papers points out the most remarkable development of the present business depression, the new friendship of capital and labor.

"This new era which is just now beginning," it says, "is the second great movement in the modern economic set-up of the world. The first came with the advent of steam and the concentration of manufacture. It automatically threw capital and labor into different camps. And for 150 years they fought each other with all the weapons at their command."

"This second era was ushered in by an entirely new group of basic factors which have drawn capital and labor together just as definitely as the first era had thrown them apart."

There is evidence on all sides of the truth of this view. Previous periods of depression and unemployment were accompanied by terrific strikes and lock-outs. There has not been one important "labor war" in the last year and a half. Employers and employees have co-operated with each other to a degree never before known.

If they can do this in adversity, assuredly they can do it in prosperity, even more effectively hereafter than they have done in the last few years.

So one big industrial problem is taken care of. The other problem remains: "Getting enough commodities into the hands of the masses of wage-earning Americans to keep the wheels of mass production turning." The best minds of the nation are now working hard on this problem.

Windows.

There has been talk lately of windowless buildings, lighted and ventilated artificially. It has sounded efficient but not very attractive, since many human beings still have a desire to see through a window and know whether it's raining or snowing or whether the sun's shining or where the fire engine's going.

There may be windowless office buildings some day, but there is likely also to be evolution of windows, giving a wider outlook even than at present.

Specialists of the U. S. public health service are studying various types and shapes of windows in a quest for the most beneficial daylight illumination. In a special building on the government experimental farm they are measuring the amount and quality of daylight which comes in through different windows. They have found that certain sections of the sky may be 10 or 12 times as bright as other sections at the same time, as artists' studios face north in order to get a certain quality of light.

The whole subject of home and office illumination, by natural and artificial means and with or without windows, deserves careful attention. Health and happiness and general efficiency depend more on this detail than was realized in the past.

Washington's Alleys

Washington, D. C., planned by a great city builder, was laid out with alleys between the streets. That was done for convenience, neatness and respectability. All the traffic that was not genteel—deliveries, garbage collections, etc.—was to be relegated to the alleys.

Now Washington is trying, as it has tried often before, to clean up those alleys. They have degenerated into "plague spots" where accumulate the refuse of respectable homes and buildings and the human refuse of society.

The alleys are "cut off from the wholesome life of the city." They have become slums, occupied mainly by the most poverty-stricken and irresponsible of the colored population. They reek with liquor and crime. Half the births in alley dwellings are illegitimate. From those narrow, reeking thoroughfares disease spreads over the city, invading the homes of the healthy.

Here is an excellent example of one thing not to do in city-planning. Better handle everything from the front, where publicity compels cleanliness and decency, and provide proper quarters elsewhere, like-wise open to the light of day, for the humbler part of the population.

The Lure of the Sea.

A glance over the list of the casualties in the recent clash between the U. S. Marines in Nicaragua and a band of Sandino's troops reminds one, once more of the way in which inland parts of the country contribute to our naval forces.

In the old days the navy and the marine corps drew their enlisted men chiefly from the seaports, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore—these ports were, literally, home ports for most of the sailors and marines with the U. S. fleet. But now the recruits come from the interior—from places where men of war are never seen, and never will be seen.

The casualty list, for instance: The boys whose names appeared in it came from such places as Des Moines, Ia., Chillicothe, Mo., Washington, Pa., and Lawrenceville, Ga. The lure of the sea has a potent effect in places where salt air is never smelled. It drew these chaps far afield—to unexpected death in a Nicaraguan jungle.

We Wonder.

We often wonder why some good cause, some splendid reform, or some effort to benefit the community, does not meet with a general response and with immediate success. We wonder why the world has waited so long to do things that ought to have been done in the days of its youth, and that still remain undone.

And we wonder and keep on wondering why men refuse or hesitate to make this world what it ought to be and what it might be, and why they suffer and keep on suffering from generation to generation without a single honest effort to escape the evils that have come down from the beginning of time.

We wonder why the orient is still grinding corn by hand, plowing the fields with crooked sticks, and flailing the wheat on the threshing floor. And while we are wondering why these ancient implements of the farm have not been replaced by those of modern make, we jump to the conclusion, and properly, that the orient has been content with what it has—that it has made no determined effort to keep pace with the western world—that it gets and deserves nothing better than that for which it strives.

And we waste but little sympathy upon the man who keeps in the ruts of his ancestors rather than make a fight to get out on the smooth highway of progress and opportunity.

We wonder about these things, but the slow pace and the halting step of progress and reform are surrounded by no mystery. The people as a whole get just what they deserve and what they are willing to work for and fight for. The evils from which the people suffer are evils that have won a victory from divided or unworthy foes.

No evil has ever won a victory in a fight-to-a-finish battle with right. We wonder why so many evils exist, but when we see the half-hearted, irresolute and vacillating armies that oppose them, we wonder how any progress has ever been made. The wonder is, that any improvements have come or any victories won. The Lord never helps a coward.

Aviation Slang

Aviation already has its own lingo. A sample of it, as set forth in a recent newspaper story on the subject, runs like this:

"The stick-pusher herded his tin lizzie over the hump, where he hit zero-zero and had to stand her on her ear, taking it in the face while he horsed down to count the insulators. With his flippers flopped and the coffee mills straight under, he laid it on the railroad, gave her the gun and headed for the old ladies' home."

One gets the general idea even without the translation, which is: "The pilot flew his tri-motored Ford plane across the country, hitting low visibility and being forced to bank sharply, looked through the opened cockpit window while he nosed down over a line of railway telegraph poles. With the altimeters tilted and the motors headed down, he skimmed low above the railroad tracks to guide him, opened the throttle wide and headed for the home airport."

Taken in large doses, it seems a little strained, as most slang does when used to excess. Still, aviation has a right to its own picturesque phraseology. Fortunately the passenger needn't master the language before taking to the air.

Next Without Trouble

Father stoking the family furnace these winter months, or mother taking a hand at it in his absence, should cheer up. The smoke, ashes and soot will not be with us forever. The heating problem, for homes as well as larger buildings, grows simpler and easier.

Fuel oil burners multiply, operating automatically under the thermostat control, making neither smoke nor ashes. All father has to do is to set the indicator a little to the right when he gets up in the morning and a little to the left when he goes to bed. Natural gas is coming into far more general use with improved burners and similar thermostat control. With uniform pressure assured, it is the simplest of all heating arrangements.

There is hope even for those forced to use coal. Smoke consumers and automatic stokers appear in factories, apartment houses and in private homes. Soon, perhaps, coal will be burned in powder form, as efficiently and cleanly as fuel oil.

Is it a far cry from the wood yard and base burner of our fathers.

The Cuban Lid.

The Cuban government recently suspended nine Havana newspapers and news magazines, on the ground that they had "exaggerated and distorted accounts of recent disorders." They included the most popular and important papers in Cuba.

The government explained that while it had "a wholesome respect for the freedom of the press," it could not countenance such exaggerated criticism as the proscribed papers had resorted to.

The "government" is, of course, President Machado, about whose head a storm has been gathering for years. The storm seems to be growing in volume and force. He retains his authority by making himself more and more of a dictator.

Sitting on the lid becomes perilous as the pressure increases underneath. The lid may blow off there, before long, as it has done in so many other Latin-American countries recently.

Cuban rioters, says a news item, are setting fire to sugar plantations. Razing cane, as it were.

Every year the people of England and Wales consume half a million hundredweight of coddles.

MILTON PLATTS TELLS OF VISIT TO OLD PEIPING

ENJOYS RICKSHAW RIDE IN CAPITAL OF CHINESE EMPERORS.

When we "discovered" Peiping, we at the same time learned where Los Angeles got her idea of incorporating large agricultural areas in her city limits. The walls surrounded Peiping, the outer or "Chinese" and the inner or "Tartar." Between the two a few of our New England states might have been located, it looked to us. (Before we go further, we should explain the proper way to spell and pronounce the name of this ancient city. Not Peiping, but Peiping and pronounced Bay Jung.

The station is just outside the Tartar wall and near the Water Gate through which we made our entrance into the city and passing through the Foreign Embassy quarters, proceeded at once to our hotel. Due to the war conditions that had been in control tourist trade at all hotels had been very meagre for months. As a result the hotel that had been included in our itinerary was found to have gone out of business and we were forced, for the night, to stay at another where accommodations were extremely short. The men of the party slept in the dining room on such beds as could be contrived. The next day a good part of the group went over to the Hotel de Pekin. This is ordinarily about a $10 a day place but due to the conditions we secured fine accommodations, including meals for $1.7 per day (gold).

The Water Gate had peculiar interest to us, we were told, it was at this point that the American Marines during the Boxer Rebellion of 1899-1900 made a breach in the wall and thus came to the relief of the beleaguered embassies.

Before this war native dwellings and business places were commingled with the buildings of the various embassies. Hence when the outbreak came it was next to impossible to keep the enemy back. At the close of the war the conditions imposed on the Chinese government was that all natives should be excluded from this area and that the entire tract known as the Legation Quarters should be surrounded by an unoccupied strip of land. This "No Man's Land" is, we would judge, from 150 to 400 feet wide and is used by the military of the various legations for drilling and parade purposes.

The one building now on this strip is the Methodist hospital, a fine two story brick building just inside the Hatamen Gate. This denomination was permitted to build here (on ground which they already owned) only on condition that should war break out again the building should be immediately turned to medical use, being shelter for an attacking force. The embassy buildings themselves are surrounded by a heavy brick wall pierced for machine guns and rifles. The city streets which can be quickly closed and are well protected by guns now in position or which can be quickly placed.

Our party remained in Peiping until July 27, but due to an attack of a disease for which the Orient is noted the writer was unable to participate in the various guided excursions and side trips. We were not alone in our misfortune as some five or six others were down at the same time. We were very thankful that none of the cases proved serious, though it was a bitter disappointment after coming thousands of miles to be unable to enjoy to the full, this, the high point of our entire summer's trip.

One group of our party took a two or three day trip out through the Western Hills visiting several famous temples and points of scenic interest. One of the temples was that of the Laughing Buddha which, for the present, is the main solemn of Sun Yat Sen. Only one of our number succeeded in getting to the Great Wall about 40 miles to the north. The roads were in such poor condition that though they traveled by auto, two days were required for the round trip. The old Summer Palace several miles out of the city was its marble boat, the Forbidden City (Chinese royalty's Winter Palace) within the city of Peiping; the Temple of Heaven, and last, but a long way from being least, the people themselves in shops, on streets and in public places, were a never ending source of interest. Street scenes and sounds might make the subject of a lengthy article.

As soon as we were able to ride in a rickshaw we struck out for ourselves in the sight-seeing business. The first place to take our attention was the Old Astronomical Observatory, located on a large brick terrace adjoining the inside of the Tartar Wall in the southeast part of the city. The top of the terrace is some 20 feet higher than the top of the wall. The instruments are mounted in the open and cover a space of perhaps 30 feet square. This particular structure for the instruments was erected sometime since 1800 A. D., but there has been an observatory of some form on this site for thousands of years. Close by is also the sight of the famous old examination halls, the climax of Old China's educational system. The cells (for that in reality is exactly what they were) have entirely disappeared. But to return to the Observatory. The instruments are made of heavy cast bronze and all of the supporting structure of each is decorated with elaborate dragon designs. From the standpoint of moulding and casting they are master pieces of artisanship. Verily, a French Jesuit priest, is said to have designed them but the work is all that of native workmen. This old observatory furnishes a good example of the "taking in" ways as various nations in their dealing with poor old China. After the Boxer uprising the German kaiser, as part of his pickings, took part of these instruments to Potsdam as curiosities. They are now back in their proper places (showing rough usage) thanks to the terms of the Versailles Treaty.

At 4:30 p. m. July 23rd we bid adieu to China's ancient northern capital and started by train for Tien Tsin where we arrived in safety at 7:30 and the next morning boarded our boat for the return trip to Dairen enroute to Shanghai. Our quarters were more cramped than before, the food just as poor, and it rained a good deal. When the tide went out the boat heeled over pretty well in one way or the other. The mud planking on the decks at an uncomfortable angle for sleeping; some of the boys had had something besides tea to drink, the air in the hold could be cut with a knife and altogether we were a pretty miserable bunch but not a grouch out of anyone!

At 8 p. m. July 26th, we landed at Dairen. The delay at Tien Tsin caused us to miss our scheduled boat, hence we had to stay in the city till the 28th when another boat left for Shanghai. As it turned out we gained doubly by the delay. Had we made the first boat we would have been in a typhoon. Due to the delay we had the opportunity to visit old Port Arthur. We went over on the afternoon of the 27th by train, a distance of 36 miles. The railway is double tracked and road bed and bridges are all constructed for one if not two more tracks. The return trip was by auto busses over a splendid macadam road. Port Arthur (renamed Ryojium by the Japanese as already stated) is now a Japanese naval base and therefore—no cameras! We visited the old Fort, one of the old Russian defenses, the capture of which cost Japan thousands of lives. The effect of shell and mine were evident all about the massive concrete structure.

On numerous hills we saw Japanese monuments marking the location of some heroic struggle. We have already mentioned the great shaft which is a memorial for all those Japanese whose lives were sacrificed fighting Russia on Chinese territory.

Altho it has been 24 years since Russia was ousted and Japan took her place yet there is quite noticeable "Bear" atmosphere in architecture of many of the buildings but even more in the drowsy or horse-drawn carriages in which we did much of our getting about in the city. Dairen has something of the style of a growing western American city.

At 11 a. m. of July 28th we steamed away from Dairen heading down the Yellow Sea for Tsing Tao in the south side of the Shantung peninsula. It will be recalled that this place and its surrounding territory was Kaiser Bill's hand hold on poor old China before the World War and Japan was given the job by the allies to break that hold.

Our boat was heavily loaded and about all passenger accommodations taken before our party could start. The captain traded in us very well indeed under the circumstances but our quarters were more cramped than ever before. Fortunately the weather was fine and most of us slept on deck and again the sleeping bags scored high.

Sunday morning at 7 a. m. we docked in an almost ideal harbor, Tsing Tao. It was quite evident from the appearance of wharves and streets that the Germans had had no intention of doing otherwise than making themselves decidedly at home here in China. A delegation from the Lion's Club of the city met us with autos. The club's president addressed us at the Y. M. C. A. We were then driven through the city and country starting first at one of the dismasted German forts. Here we had a chance to see the kind of underground living quarters we read of the armies in Europe having during the World War. We saw where the Japanese, when attacking this fort filled a moat with the bodies of their troops that the balance might cross in their mad assault on the fort. The German suburbs where many California style bungalows are in evidence. We were given a reception in the building that was the former German governor's residence by Chao Chi, the present Chinese governor.

Monday, July 30th at 6 p. m. we tied up at Shanghai wharves. Shanghai is a strange city and a terribly wicked one. It is now largely Chinese in point of population and store proprietorship yet controlled by the financial interests of Europe. Great wealth and terrible poverty are here side by side. On the morning of the 31st we visited the Orient's greatest printing establishment. We had English speaking guides and visited all the main departments. Originally the business was started by missionaries to print Bibles in the Chinese language. The business has grown enormously and is now conducted as a commercial concern known as the China Commercial Press. The product ranges anywhere between the limits of hand bills to the most elaborate of bound volumes. It was the writer's good fortune three years ago to visit the plant of the great book publishing establishments in America. By comparison we would say that the Commercial Press had the better equipment in point of labor saving machinery. They employ about 3,000 men and women.

The Old Timer's Corner

OLD TIMER LIKES LISTENING TO ORGAN RECITALS

FORGETS BLOOD PRESSURE IN HEARING OTHER FOLKS TROUBLES.

I wonder if all folks are the same everywhere. It seems to me that they are and some are more so than others. The other night I attended the dinner of the Chicago-Buchanan Society, and the best part of those meetings is the visits you have with old friends. Well, I won't mention any names but I want to tell you that I had to "referee" a word battle between two of our estimable ladies, each trying to outdo the other in matters of big words and such.

One of them had had four (count 'em, one, two, three and four) operations, and the other had had high blood pressure and a "stroke." Now all this sounds commonplace and nothing unusual at all, but if you could have been standing there with me and listening in, you would have seen the funny side of it. Not that it is funny for the dear ladies to be afflicted with blood pressure nor with operations, but the fact that each was looking for sympathy from the other and neither was getting it, nor giving it. I suppose people get that way after they have been sick for a long time. But the funny part was that both ladies looked well and husky and got all "het up" arguing over this affair.

It all started because I was asked why I was getting so thin. (I only weigh 240 now, or thereabout) and I told them I was on a diet for high blood pressure and reducing my flesh somewhat. Then the fun began. I forgot all about my own self in laughing at them, but that wasn't the only thing I remember about the meeting that night. A lot of old friends were with us and some of them had never been there before. Seemed mighty good to see them. We were disappointed that the bunch from home didn't get over, but we will hope for better luck next time.

THIS WILL BE HARD READING FOR LOCAL DEMOCRATS

BUT WE'LL TAKE A CHANCE THAT WE WON'T MEET BOTH OF THEM AT ONCE.

Editor Record, For over 65 years the democrats have been working to get the government to give official recognition to the great patriotism and valor of their patron saint, Jeff Davis, and I see by my last Record they have at least succeeded, in the form of a statute sent from Mississippi for a place in the Statuary hall in Washington. Next logical thing for them will be to have their friends in Connecticut send a statute of that other prominent democratic patriot, Benedict Arnold, a Tory, but the same party. It would seem that enough time had passed for us to not be hearing anymore of that old "Confederacy" but we are still to have it with us. I have in my possession a copy of a bill, known as H. R. 2859, introduced in congress by John N. Tillman of Arkansas on Dec. 10, 1923. "To pay Confederate soldiers and to the widows of Confederate soldiers $1000 and $50 per month during the remainder of their lives." The bill carries an appropriation of the sum of $100,000,000 to carry out the provisions of this act.

There are seven "Whereases" to the bill, the third of which reads: Whereas the South, prior to the Civil War and since that time abundantly proved her loyalty to the union, namely lost without a murmur, four million slaves, valued at $2,000,000,000; gave to the country much in military science, and added much territory by the genius and diplomacy of her statesmen."

Directly after the close of the war there were filed claims from the South asking the government to pay for everything that was lost in the war, even to the time lost by the rebel soldiers while they were fighting the government. Accompanying the copy of that bill was the letter from the congressman who sent it to me and in that he said: "I am told that hundreds of old war claims were favorably acted upon and passed, often in big batches, appropriating millions of dollars." This during the Wilson administration.

Near the close of every session of congress there is what is known as an "Omnibus bill covering a lot of loose ends that have not been discussed, and it was in this omnibus bill that they tucked the democratic war bills. The rest are waiting for the time when that party gets full control of the government to pass them.

I am not in favor of anything of the sort and every person who votes for that will vote for just that. This may look a bit "faretched" but it is not. During that Wilson administration there were 128 democrats in the two branches of congress, of these 92 came from the "Solid South" 18 from the plug ugly districts of New York and the balance scattered over the rest of the country. From this it is easy to figure who controls the country in such conditions as prevailed in that Wilson administration.

In 1876 a bill was brought into congress for pensioning certain soldiers who served in the Mexican war, urged very strongly by the democratic members. In time it came out that it would include Jefferson Davis, and then things became warm in the extreme. In the melee one Junius Caius Quintus LaMar, senator from the South, Mississippi, I believe, made a speech in which he said: "The only reason why I am not as much a traitor as Jefferson Davis is that I have not the supreme ability of my worthy chief." The discussion was brought to a sudden close when Senator Zach Chandler of Michigan told them what he thought of Jeff Davis. The point to this is that when Grover Cleveland had the appointment of a member of the Supreme Court, he selected that man LaMar, which tells the prevailing sympathies of that party.

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man is tributary to God, Spirit, and to nothing else. God's being is infinity, harmony, and unity, and boundless bliss. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty; like the archpriests of yore, man is free to enter into the holiest, the realm of God." (p. 481).

Bucaneers Nose Out Three Oaks Friday 17-11

ACORNS SURPRISE LOCALS BY STIFF UPHILL BATTLE

VISITORS LEAD AT HALF BUT ARE NOSED OUT AT FINISH 17-10

The Three Oaks basketball team, doped to take a good licking and not even expected to furnish much opposition, nearly duplicated their game of last season (when they surprised the Bucks and went home with a victory) but were finally nosed out 17 to 10.

The Buchanan team, for some unknown reason, confident and cocky, took things easy the first quarter, missed lots of shots, and let the Acorns build up a 6 to 0 lead. Then the Buchanan boys began to realize that a little exertion might help their chances, so "Doc" Strayer, sent in for Mike Schultz, dropped in a nice field goal and Tiny Jesse immediately followed suit, bringing the score to 6 and 4. Three Oaks led at the half.

Coach Bradford's oration between the halves must have been good, for the Bucks came back and rolled up 8 more points while holding the enemy scoreless. Ike Schultz, who had been unable to hit the proverbial side of a barn, promptly sank a pair of baskets. Jesse added two more points to his count, and Strayer and Chubb both scored from the foul line, making it 12 and 6 at the end of the third period.

After this brilliant spurt the Bucks began to sag a little, and the Three Oaks guard, a big fellow named Hess who got the tip-off and then dropped back, dropped in a long shot and a close-in basket thus bringing the score to 16 and 12. Once more the Bucks put on steam, and Strayer and the Schultz scored a basket a piece and Louie Morse a free throw, thereby bringing the score to 17 and 10.

If the Buchanan outfit was looking for something soft, they missed it in Three Oaks. The injection of Chubb and Strayer put some fire into the team, but it was surely lacking otherwise.

The Buchanan seconds had an easy time in their game with the Three Oaks seconds, winning 22 to 10. Buchanan led at the half, 16 and 5, and was never threatened. Dumbolton with 6 points, and Topash with 5 were the big guns in the Buchanan attack, while Fick led the losers with 5.

JOURNALISTS PAY VISIT TO SOUTH BEND NEWSPAPER

OBSERVE PROCESS OF PRINTING IN TWO DAILY PLANTS.

For several months the journalism class has anticipated a trip to South Bend to visit the newspaper plants. Monday, Feb. 9, this trip was taken. The class left in a body at 12:45 in four cars with Miss Hanlin, teacher.

The South Bend News Times was the first paper that went to press in the afternoon. The class was taken up stairs by Mr. Reed, publisher of the paper, and introduced to the city editor. He showed them through the plant. At the desks were men writing headlines, cutting down news and writing news. The plant has four electric telegraph news machines. This news coming from United Press in Chicago, is typed in Chicago and relayed to all United Press Agencies by electricity.

There are nine linotype machines in the News Times plant. The linotype is set up by hand in the form of the page, and a rubber sheet receives the print by being put through a large roller. From there the impression sheet goes to the lead forms and is made ready for press rollers. The News Times prints 30,000 papers an hour.

The South Bend Tribune was also visited. The Tribune has a very up-to-date plant but everything is run the same as the News Times. The guide took the class through WSBT broadcasting station where the engineer of the transmission plant explained the way the programs are broadcasted. Here, the class also met Mr. Kennedy, station announcer and saw "Denver Darling," radio entertainer.

Post-Grad Five to Battle Scottdale At Stevensville

MIKE FASHION EXPERT GIVES STYLE CLOSE-UP

WHAT FACILITY AND STUDENTS WEAR AND HOW THEY WEAR 'EM.

The celestial occasion is over and all the Buchanan Cinderellas and Prince Charmings will put their party regalia back on the hooks in the dim dark corners of some closet until they will again be hailed forth for another momentous occasion.

While it lasted the party was one panorama of beautiful colors and as the mystic lights played over the gym floor, it showed us many of our well dressed upper classmen in their party best.

Among those present in the most striking modes of dress were: Mrs. Dumbur, hostess for the evening, who wore a black chiffon dress, sans sleeves. A light brown fur was an attractive accessory to the dress.

The Misses Chandler and Shriver appeared in dresses quite similar. These were black crepe with unique yokes of printed crepe. The jewel accessories worn were simple and well chosen.

Mrs. Knoblauch was present in a black and white figured chiffon. The most striking affect of this dress was the black lace jacket with colored flowers.

Miss Hanlin wore a black silk crepe dress. The vest, yoke and sleeves were of pink satin and lent a charming color to this creation.

Miss Rothenbach was quite conspicuous in a flame colored crepe model with cape affect. The cape was lined with red and white polka dot material.

Miss Olson wore a brown figured velvet dress. It was quite long and the collar was one of the new styles.

The co-ed's vied with the faculty for honors in the matter of dress sophistication. During the course of the evening's entertainment we saw many outstanding creations. The great majority of the feminine sex preferred the high waist-line type with varied styles of yokes and lengthy flared skirt. Of course the usual capes, jackets and boleros held sway with the puffed sleeves and fur trimmed elbow sleeves, also quite in evidence.

Jewelry accessories worn, were, as a whole, simple and of charming effect—the crystal necklace and fraternal jewelry being the more prevalent.

The men were a little more conservative in their dress than were the women. Many of the better dressed men, in choosing their party clothes, wore dark suits. These came in a variety of color tones and designs. They ranged in color from dark blues to light browns and in design from herring-bone to square figured chevrons. A few of the boys also wore light tans and grays. These were mostly in stripes and herring-bones. We noticed two or three heralding the approach of spring by wearing tweeds. By numbers worn, the three-button model was the most popular but the two-button was not far behind.

The shirts worn were mostly white broadcloth, but solid colors and designs also had their place. The most popular solid colors were greens, tans, and blues, while the designs were thin stripes and checks.

The cravats were, on the whole very conservative in color. Solid colors were far in the majority. Blues, blacks, greens, browns and tans being the most prevalent. We espied one flaming orange tie, and while we were trying to recover from that shock a vision of a blue suit and a scotch plaid tie passed and nearly blinded us for the rest of the evening.

Pocket handkerchiefs, always in style, were also noticed in a medley of colors. Collar pins, as yet unknown by the majority, were quite common among juniors and seniors. Shoes were mostly black although we noticed a few tans and browns. A few of the more sophisticated upper classmen further adorned their feet by wearing spats.

More than 12,000,000 tons of rice were shipped from Saigon, Indo-China in 1930.

PROGRESS OF CLASS ROOMS DURING WEEK

MILLER'S CLASS BUILDING FRAMES FOR ATHLETIC PICTURES.

Mr. Miller's classes have been very busy constructing frames for the high school athletic club pictures. The pictures are to cover the entire space between the boys' and the girls' locker room doors.

Many members are working on projects covering radio cabinets, sewing cabinets and desks similar to those found in the class rooms. Members of the Schram Air Derby club are constructing miniature models of modern aircraft. Students of the first year mechanical drawing classes have advanced to projecting plates and views of a machinists' vise.

Lincoln Notebooks. The eighth grade students, under the teaching of Mrs. Whitman, have started an interesting study of the Civil war.

They are starting to make Lincoln notebooks. The tenth grade, under the supervision of Mrs. Whitman, have finished the study of the commercial revolution.

Lead in Thrift. The citizenship class is starting the study of thrift of money and time.

The first division of the eighth grade in Mrs. Whitman's room have banked a hundred per cent for a longer time than any other class.

Winter Poems. The seventh grade students under the supervision of Mrs. Zerbe have been studying poems about winter. The poems are, "The Great Blizzard" by Hamlin Garland, "The Frost Spirit" by John Greenleaf Whittier, "The Snow Storm" by Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Snowflakes" by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind" by William Shakespeare.

The students made posters illustrating a snow scene. The best ones made were handed in by Dorothy Jerue, Wilma Metzger, Vivian Mogford, Mary Peacock, Harold Holmes, Ellen Baldwin, Barbara Hamilton and Spencer Kohlman.

Form Uke Club. A Ukelele Club has been organized of the seventh grade girls. They are to meet twice a week. All that is required is a Uke and a sense of humor.

Use Pipe Organ. The Methodist church was the scene of the seventh grade music classes Monday and Tuesday. The use of the organ by the church to Miss Olson offered the opportunity to show the students what goes to make up an organ. Several selections from Bach were played by Miss Olson. The seventh grade has been studying him for the last week.

N. D. Debator Speaks Before the Friday Assembly. The assembly program for last Friday was in charge of Miss Ruth Shriver, foreign language instructor of Buchanan schools.

The program was opened by selections from the orchestra. Following these was a piano solo by Ray Barbour, a former Buchanan graduate.

The speaker of the morning was Frank Mac Greal, a senior at Notre Dame. Mr. MacGreal spoke on "Debating in the Schools."

Another team that is significant at Notre Dame besides the football team is the debating team, said Mr. MacGreal. Two points emphasized by Mr. MacGreal were: (1) the value of debating and (2) what it will do for one when one is out of school.

Velmarian Lit. Party Has Many Original Features

After the ball was over and everybody had successfully "hashed" the minute details here and there, it was generally believed that the Velmarian Literary Club's party was a big success.

The orchestra, "The Villagers", under the leadership of Mr. Robinson, opened with the popular number, "Just a Gigolo." Dancing was continued throughout the evening.

Tables were provided for those who did not dance and many an exciting game of bridge, I-Doubt-It, checkers and pinocle ensued throughout the evening.

The gym was decorated in an attractive manner. Colored lights, many floor lamps and a spotlight contributed mainly to the decorations. The orchestra was placed in an entirely new position, being situated in the middle of the dance floor. Blue was the key in the color scheme.

Intermission was held at 10:30, and refreshments were served at that time, consisting of fruit punch and sugar cookies.

After intermission, dancing was continued until eleven o'clock.

KNOBLAUCH OKES PROJECT REPORTS

All project reports have been corrected by Mr. Knoblauch and are ready for state inspection. The project reports cover calves, corn, chickens, potatoes, flowers, hogs, pig corn, strawberries and beans.

Two members of the agriculture class taking more than one project are Clell Sult and Clarence Huff, who carried four projects last summer.

Other members are Lyle Bachman, Bobbie Bowers, George Cooper, Paul DeWitt, Bruce Ernst, Joe Heim, Garman Houswether, Richard Koeninghoff, Joe Letherer, Paul Letherer, Marjorie Mitchell, Harry Fenwell, Maynard Walker, Ralph Whittaker, Tom Zerbe, Dwight Marrs, and Carl Linsenmier.

DO YOU RECOGNIZE: Now as I was saying... Mr. Moore. That's right! Ruth Pierce. Oh! Well! Think of that. Ruby Roe. Well! I wish Bill would come home. Elizabeth Hess. Curfew out of the library. Curly Bradford. My word! Marjorie Campbell. Please pick up all the paper. Everyone. Miss Hanlin. That reminds me of a story. Mr. Moore. You big bum! Vivian Wissler. Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! Mr. Robinson. Don't judge other people by yourself. Dorothea Rothfuchs. Let's have some pep. Miss Rothenbach. Such popularity must be deserved. Marie Post. Oh! My gosh! How I wish I could find that ring. Vivian Wissler.

Appreciative Crowd Hears Program by Symphony Orchestra. The concert given last Sunday afternoon by the Buchanan Symphony Orchestra was attended by a small but appreciative audience of music lovers.

The next concert, The Magic Carpet, will be held on or about the twenty-second of February.

The new Ford is an economical car to own and drive

Low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation mean a distinct saving to every purchaser

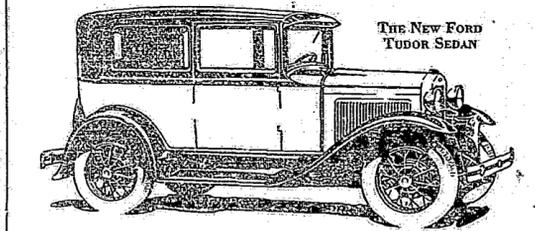

THE NEW FORD is a splendid car to own and drive because of its attractive lines and colors, safety, comfort, speed, reliability and long life.

There are, in addition, three other features of importance to every far-seeing automobile owner... low first cost, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

During the life of the car, the day-by-day economy of owning a Ford will amount to considerably more than the saving on the first cost. You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.

The reasons for this economy are simplicity of design, high quality of materials and care in manufacturing and assembling. Many vital parts are made to limits of one one-thousandth of an inch. Some to three ten-thousandths of an inch. Throughout, the new Ford is an outstanding example of fine craftsmanship in automobile engineering.

The more you see of the new Ford—the more you talk to Ford owners and experienced mechanics—the more certain you become of this fact... It brings you everything you want or need in a motor car at an unusually low price.

LOW PRICES OF FORD CARS $430 to $630

F. O. B. Detroit, plus freight and delivery. Dumpers and spare tire extra at small cost. You can purchase a Ford on economical terms through the authorized Ford Finance Plans of the National Credit Company.

What Do You Need...

to gain access to your valuables? Is it virtually a chart and a spade—or merely the key to your private Safe Deposit Box? Which indicates greater safety for those things you can't afford to lose and could never, perhaps, replace? Which keeps your valuables more readily available?

Isn't the convenience and security of a Safe Deposit Box worth many times the trivial, less-than-a-cent-a-day rental fee? Why not come in and select your box now?
