E. B. Storms of Niles Gets Needed Names on Petition.

The reconstruction is to be part of the 10 mile per year rebuilding program of the county, carried over under the terms of the Covert Act which provides for the following division of expense: 75 per cent of the county at large; 20 per cent of the district, which in this case consists of the City of Niles, the city of Buchanan, and the district between, with the north line of Bertrand township as the southern boundary and the St. Joseph river as the north boundary; 3 1/2 per cent on Niles Township and 1 1/2 per cent on Buchanan township.

COINCIDES WITH CURRENT RATE FOR LIGHTING

New Rate Effective With Bills Payable on May 10th

The Indiana & Michigan Electric Company will file with the Public Service Commission of Indiana and the Michigan Public Utilities Commission, an additional rate for residential service.

The new rate will permit those customers who are now using ranges, refrigerators and certain other electrical appliances, on a rate classified as D. U. R. to combine the current used by these appliances with the current used for lighting.

Under the old rate the customer received two bills, while under the new rate, the customer will receive one bill covering all current consumed by appliances and lighting.

Customers receiving service under the new rate will effect a substantial reduction in the amount of their monthly bills.

The Indiana & Michigan Electric Company will also file a modification of tariff C. L. Commercial Lighting, which modification will make a reduction in the first 2,000 kilowatt hours consumed per month.

These rates will become effective on bills rendered on and after May 1, 1931.

In making these reductions, the company is following their policy of periodic adjustment in rates for various classes of service.

During the past 36 months the company has made a revision of their schedules which has effected a considerable saving to all classes of customers.

Customers affected by the new rates, will effect a saving of approximately $150,000 per annum.

Now Here's the Proposition

AMBITION

Hi Haws

I'd like to be so prominent

That, as I ambed down the street, I'd get a greeting resonant

From every kid I chanced to meet.

No matter what their elders did it would be sweeter than applause

To hear some tousle headed kid sing out to me, "Hello Hi Haws."

I'd count it more in line of luck Than greetings from one so profound

He'd almost seemed to need a truck

To haul his dignity around.

Although they reek with dignity And rattle round in swanky cars,

It matters not a darn to me How prominent they think they are.

Though winning cheers and getting votes

Might seem to some a source of pride,

To get a greeting from a boy Would make me feel more warm inside.

Printing Money

Arthur Brisbane, admitting that "it is financial anarchy and worse to suggest it," submits this proposition as a substitute for the proposed veterans' cash bonus payments from the federal treasury:

"Why must the government print bonds and sell them at prices acceptable to investors and thus cheapen the value of all existing bonds?"

"Why not let the federal reserve print money, perfectly good currency, hand it to the soldiers, and say: 'Go ahead and spend it, and increase prosperity.' We need more chips in our national game, and those chips are money."

"The government would have no interest to pay on such currency. Prosperity undoubtedly would feel better. Soldiers would have their money and the government certainly is good for three and a half billions or 10 times that. It could cut down the amount of currency outstanding when convenient."

"Mr. Brisbane seems to have suddenly gone populist. That is the way they were arguing 40 years ago."

"Bankers and economists will not admit that all you need to make money is a printing press. Any economist will make some such reply as this, based on long observation:

"Dumping $3,500,000,000 in new currency suddenly into the money market, no matter who got it, would not increase the amount of wealth. Our real wealth—property and goods—would merely be figured as worth that much more. Prices would rise. The dollar would be cheapened."

"The veterans would be benefitted for the moment because cheap dollars are better than no dollars at all. But all values would be upset. Every dollar in pocket or bank would buy less. The rest of the nation would lose immediately what the veterans gained. Later the veterans, too, would lose."

"Doubtless there would be a short period of spacious prosperity, with money circulating faster and millions imagining they were better off. It would be fine while the spree lasted. Then would come the economic headache which always follows currency inflation."

Intelligent Entertainment

Another star of legitimate drama has come around to the view that talkies and stage have been mutually helpful and can exist side by side without injuring each other. Miss Katherine Cornell, one of America's gifted actresses, sums up the situation this way:

"They've found out the limitations of the talkies, and they've seen the worth of the stage. Plays will have to be better, actors better, theatres cheaper, but there ought to be no real competition between the stage and the talkies."

Miss Cornell speaks from the viewpoint of the stage actress. Some one speaking from the other side might say, "Talkies will have to do better, actors better." The talkies resemble the stage drama just enough to make it essential that they contain real plot and good acting to succeed.

From still a third viewpoint, that of the public, the outlook is most agreeable. Instead of the decline of the theatre—gloomily prophesied in recent years—and the conquest of movies of the moron level, there appears to be coming better, more intelligent entertainment in each of these mediums.

Doctors of Matrimony

A physician comes forward with the suggestion that "marriage doctors" would be more valuable than divorce lawyers.

The ensuing discussion needn't be cluttered up with inquiries as to how the divorce lawyers would make a living if their chosen practice were destroyed. Presumably they would find a way. We might keep the lawyers entirely out of the debate—as we would have to do, if we wanted to get anywhere with it—and simply focus attention on the constructive proposal of a new profession, "doctors of matrimony."

The idea rather grows on you as you think it over. A start has been made already, in the "domestic relations courts" established in some cities. In those clinics many an ailing marriage is successfully treated.

Such doctoring, come to think of it, is usually done by lawyers. Now, why shouldn't divorce lawyers take the hint, and concentrate on holding husbands and wives together instead of prying them apart?

Baby Golf in England

Midlet golf invaded England, and looked at first like another triumph, then failed. The game never became really more than a curiosity. Promoters have lost a great deal of money in it.

Americans naturally want to know why. One reason, perhaps, is that the British are more phlegmatic than we are, and not so easily swept off their feet by novelties and ephemeral fads. They were interested in the fact that their inexplicable American cousins were interested in the thing, but the game was to them a mere curiosity.

Another thing that is said to have made the English shy off in this case was the billyhood that accompanied the baby golf. They don't like circus methods so well as we do.

See Your Own City

The convention board of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, seeking to attract more conventions to its city, has got out some folders entitled "Have You Seen Cleveland Lately?" It is a question that chambers of commerce in many cities might well adapt to local use.

An English woman, writing about England, remarks that few Londoners have visited the famous old tower of London, a group of historical buildings from which tourists derive immense thrills. New Yorkers, one is told, don't go up in the Woolworth building or visit the art gallery. So it goes, almost everywhere.

The attractions of our home city we take for granted. There they are, we can visit them any time. So the visit is put off indefinitely. It is a mistake.

Citizens ought to look over new school buildings, new business buildings, new bridges, and so on. If there are museums of art or natural history or local historical collections, the wise citizen ought to know about them. Instead of following a beaten trail from home to work and around to favorite places of entertainment and the homes of friends, why not explore the unfamiliar sections of the city? There might grow out of this a much more intelligent interest in city government, in education, taxes and the rest. Have you seen your own city lately?

A Dumb Race

Civilization, we are told, is at a higher level than ever before. Education and intelligence are beyond anything previously known in this world. America stands at the top of our industrial civilization, the most skilled and competent of nations in producing and distributing the things that people need for comfort and progress.

We grant these facts. And then, looking around, we see such further facts as the following:

Millions of men and women eager to work, have no work to do.

Millions of costly machines stand idle in the factories.

Billions of dollars lie idle in the banks. Raw materials in limitless quantities rest idle in the ground.

People, machines, factories, materials, dollars, all need employment. Yet skilled shoemakers lack shoes. Skilled weavers and garment-workers lack clothing. People capable of farm work lack food. Manufacturing plants and mines are "eating their heads off" in overhead expense. Money is an expense to itself. And nobody seems to know what to do. We just stall along and hope for improvement.

To tell the plain truth, isn't civilized man, "the sum and crown of things," pretty dumb?

Mobs Against Beauty

John Erskine, an author and musician who is also by way of being, a psychologist, tells an audience that "this country suffers more than any other from inhibitions."

He doesn't refer to what you may be thinking of, if you've been reading modern psychology. He doesn't mean inhibitions against primitive desires and that sort of thing. He means that we simply won't let ourselves "do the beautiful or delightful things." We are unwilling to satisfy our craving for fineness and beauty because we're afraid of being laughed at. And music is one thing that suffers from this strange attitude.

You realize exactly what he is driving at when you discover that a boy with a natural taste and talent for piano or violin is getting bad grades in his school music, and will not improve them because "it's sissy stuff and the other kids would laugh at me."

Such mob psychology warps the minds of grown-ups, too, though less than it did a few years ago. It is one of the things that interferes with the cultivation of musical music, sometimes called "classic," as distinguished from the tin-pan and tom-tom kind.

Egg Day

Two business clubs in Turlock, Calif., have been arranging an "egg day." It is a sort of tournament fought with eggs. The city hall and the chamber of commerce cooperate.

The eggs are thrown at targets, not at rival marksmen. The club making the best record is expected to challenge out-of-town clubs. In the first tournament the promoters figured that 100 cases of eggs would be used.

That is the main idea—to use up eggs, thereby reducing the local surplus and improving the market.

An outsider naturally wonders whether, instead of smashing those eggs, it couldn't be arranged to send a carload of them to the famine-stricken people of the southwest. What do you suppose they think of such tournaments?

Foreign Loans

American investors lent more money to foreign corporations and foreign governments last year than in 1929. The biggest part of these loans were made in the first half of the year, with a marked falling off in the last half.

According to a department of commerce announcement we lent $1,085,613,000 in 1930 compared with $705,767,000 the year before.

Apparently we haven't been too poor to lend a lot of money. And we haven't considered other countries too poor to be safe debtors. Our words have been gloomy. Our acts have been optimistic and constructive.

A clever automobile salesman is urging people to buy new cars as a public duty, because "when the automobile business prospers, everybody prospers."

John G. Holmes
 Tells of Old Tax
 Laws in Michigan

Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The publication of the tax list brings to mind: Previous to 1880 the tax law in Michigan was such that no tax title would give possession, for any inequality in the assessment would set aside the tax title, and there was not a roll in the state, in which inequalities might not be found. As I remember it was the legislature of 1882 that passed a new law which provided for a hearing in court, and a judgment correcting all errors before sale. After two cases taken to the supreme court that law was called good so the sale of 1883 including tax for 1881 gave perfect title.

The old law left the books at the Auditor General's office filled with old good-for-nothing tax titles, and arrangement was made to dispose of them by sale so far as possible for one year and all left over that time were to be sold at auction. That list of left-overs came to the Record for publication and contained over 1200 descriptions. In the copy from Lansing, the list for Lake township was given as T, G, N, R, 20, W, which took it 72 miles too far North, so far as I can guess, out in the lake about directly west of Holland. After correcting that error we double proofed and copy read the matter. The list for the next year went to St. Joseph Herald, and soon after that I met the publisher, who asked me how much I had been charged for errors. He said he was charged $16. Mine was forty cents.

When the sale was held in Berrien Springs, Buchanan was represented by myself and John Mansfield, and we bought all in Buchanan, at the uniform price of five cents per lot. I took none outside Buchanan, but John got some in New Buffalo, one whole town block for one cent. The lots, with but two cases, were quieted for the taxes. One of the two was $484, five years taxes against the home of widow Foster, the two-story home directly across in front of the present Record office, the other the home of Mrs. Julia Murphy, a widow with a family. The two were cleared with no charge. Mansfield used to go to New Buffalo each Thursday for dental work and one day he went out to find his block and found some men building a house on it. He sold it to them for the taxes, amounting to $40. I have not since been able to figure the per cent of profit on that deal, but it is certainly the highest real estate percentage commission that has come under my observation. In that same sale W. J. Gilbert, attorney in Niles, bought the Reading hotel in Niles, for $3.60. I never knew what disposal he made of it.

 Gives Democrats
 the Other Barrel

Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The story in the last Record about the method on which the governor of Mississippi handled the universities and schools sounds perfectly typical. Education has never been popular in all of that section of the country where slavery was located. No public schools allowed these until after the war, and then because a lot of New England women started the fashion, by establishing schools for the education of the freed negroes and to do that much they were subjected to all kinds of inconveniences and insults known to man. The rich planter's children were all who had a chance at schooling and that by private tutors in the home and these tutors were brought from the North.

During the winter of 1904-5 I was in the south but not as far as Mississippi, in a county seat. The county clerk, Joe Johnson, could not read or write. His son-in-law, Albert Norman, could and was deputy. He attended to the county business and Johnson attended to the hotel. Johnson was a democrat and Norman was a republican. Johnson had a son, 23 years old, who was a barber. He could not read or write. Another son, 14, the same, another son, 8, started to school, got into a discussion with the teacher before noon, and did not return, and he will never read or write. I have not the acquaintance with this governor but think a safe guess is that he does not know enough to read and write. His actions indicate as much.

The picture of the Remington blacksmith shop looks familiar even when the recollection is carried back to when Mr. Remington's step-father, Hiram Mowrey, was operating the shop and Elmer was a small lad. At that time Mr. Mowrey had Stephen Wood or Joseph Burch or George Merrill for partner. I am not so sure of Mr. Merrill but he was one of the old-time "smithies."

Houghton Lake Declared Largest Lake in Michigan

Despite arguments to the contrary, Houghton Lake is recognized officially as the largest inland lake in Michigan. Its area of 30.8 square miles is not closely approached by any of the larger lakes of the state.

A report on the inland lakes of Michigan prepared by I. D. Scott for the Geological Survey Division of the Department of Conservation shows relative areas of the larger upper and lower peninsula lakes.

Torch Lake ranks second in size in the state with an area of 28.5 square miles. Mullet Lake is third with 26.8 square miles and Charlevoix (Pine) Lake, fourth with 26.7 square miles. Burt Lake is fifth in size with an area of 26.5 square miles.

There's Only One Real Place

TO FLY KITES

IN AN OPEN FIELD

Johnny Brown found that out last year. He had spent hours building his kite only to lose it when he tried to send it up from the street.

No more of that for Johnny! His mother suggested an open field away from all buildings and electric wires. She knew he would be safe from accidents there and could indulge in his favorite sport to his heart's content.

'Course Johnny knew that the Trouble Man from the Indiana & Michigan Electric Company would recover his kite for him if it became entangled in the electric wires, but bet your life, he wasn't going to have HIS kites all torn up taking chances!

Also Johnny never uses wire in his kite flying equipment. We urge all our young friends to follow Johnny's example

"Unreality" will be the subject of the Lesson Sermon in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday, April 5.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon are the following taken from the Bible: "All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." (John 1:3).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Everything good or worthy, God made. Whatever is valueless or baneful, He did not make; hence its unreality. In the Science of Genesis we read that He saw every thing which He had made, 'and behold, it was very good.'" p. 525.
