Fires is Reported in State Forests

More than six times as many acres have been burned over by forest fires in Michigan so far this year as were reported for the same period in 1930, the Division of Field Operations of the Department of Conservation reported recently.

According to the report, 165,239 acres have been burned over since April as compared with 25,723 that had been burned over June 25, 1930.

The increase in the number of fires reported this year as compared with the same period for 1930 was not in proportion to the number of acres burned over, indicating a greater average of acres burned over per fire this season.

The Division reported today, 1-778 fires occurring since April 1.
For the same period in 1930, the figure was 1,080. The upper peninsula suffered 787 fires and the lower peninsula 991 fires so far this year. Last season at this time it was 405 fires for the upper peninsula and 675 acres for the lower peninsula.

The Upper Peninsula has received the brunt of the dry weather.
Of the 165,239 acres burned over this year, 104,587 were in the upper peninsula and 61,302 acres in the lower peninsula.

Due to heavy rains during the month of June, the fire hazard situation is now about at normal, it was stated.

Most of the fires reported this season occurred from April 14 to May 10. Since that time the number of fires and the acres burned over has dropped materially.

Dickinson and Iron counties, where early fires destroyed one village and did considerable damage to second growth timber, report the largest number of fires for the state. Dickinson had 109 fires and Iron 110. Luce county which suffered heavy losses in 1930 had but 11 fires.

Farmers Day
Will Be a Home
Talent Event

Farmers Day at Michigan State College, Friday, July 31, will provide a homelike atmosphere for visitors as the economy which has been the farmer's household companion for several years will be apparent on the day's program which will use home talent for the afternoon talks and an inspection of the college herds and fields for the morning's entertainment.

Doubtless this year's program will be remembered long after some of the more pretentious ones preceding it have been forgotten because the college now has so many things of interest that anyone interested in agriculture can profitably employ more than one day in examining the work which is being done with crops and livestock.

Routes will be laid out and marked over the campus and the college farm so the visitors can select the particular work or stock which they wish to see. Full directions and an explanation of the numbered routes will be handed to each visitor as they enter the college grounds.

Each of the college departments will have members of their staffs stationed at the college buildings or at the experimental plots to explain how each experiment is being performed and the results which have been obtained. Some of the experiments have been carried on for a series of years and some have been recently started as new problems in farming have arisen.

writes and directs plays, composes poetry and uses a typewriter.

Queer Custom
"At a foreign wedding I attended," says a correspondent, "the bride was given a postgraduate to throw on the floor. What was the significance? It is an eastern symbol. The number of seeds is held to indicate the size of the family to be established."

Cloak of Feathers
In the year 1843 King Ramelame-ha III presented a gorgeous cloak, composed of the feathers of birds now extinct, to Commodore Lawrence Kearney of the United States fleet. This cloak is now on exhibition in the Bishop museum in Honolulu, and is valued at $100,000.

The Old Timer's Corner

John Holmes Writes of Lost Opportunity to Make Fortune

Editor Record,

About 1873 I, with another, went to look over a 600 acre tract in the east side of Terre Coupe prairie, which could be bought for $8 an acre. We found a large share of it covered with a heavy crop of cane grass about eight to ten feet tall and so thick that when we were a rod from the edge we could see out only straight up. The land had been ditched, as described in my fish story. Outside of that lot of cane we found a number of circular mounds, similar to an abandoned house cellar, and we were told they were buffalo wallows. A short time after we were there the state of Indiana ran a dredge through that section, drying it, and it took but a few years for the land to be worth $60 an acre. We were not foresight-ed enough to presage that ditch.

ON THE OLD ST. JOE

When the current was slow
It was pleasant to go, Drifting, just drifting,
On the river St. Joe.

Lost! In the strife of Kings.
Won! 'In the scheme of things' Harnessed in ebb and flow Transpassing old St. Joe.

Near the pebbled beach
At the island's reach Gleaming so gleaming Lurked the jinx of St. Joe.

The sprite bubbled and whirled, Its ripples uncurled
In an undertow Treason to old St. Joe.

Floating, once on a time,
Like a rhythmical rhyme, Just floating. Then a spin And the party went in,
Two lunging and plunging,
In the home of the jinx Although "drys" became "wets" In Moocassin ripples.

SEIGLE SYLVESTER STEVENS

Seigle Sylvester Stevens, son of William Stevens, Margaret Jane Ingelright Stevens was born in Weasaw township, Berrien County, Michigan, April 20, 1861, and departed this life in his home, Friday morning at 2 o'clock, July 10, 1931, aged 70 years, 2 months and 20 days.

He attended the Hills Corners school and his entire life was spent in and around this vicinity.
On Nov. 2, 1884, he was united in marriage with Margaret Merfert. To this union three children were born. A son, Jay, passed away July 26, 1909.

For over twenty years Mr. Stevens had been a prominent member of the Hills Corners Christian church and was an ardent and joyful worker in that organization.
He was a man much respected in his community for his upright christian character, and his jovial nature made him friends with all who knew him.

Surviving are the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Claude Blackmun of Glendora and Mrs. Lloyd Granger of Hartford; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Clayton Hartline, near Glen-dora; a brother, W. R. Stevens of St. Joseph, five grandchildren, day afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Christian church at Hills Corners with Rev. Ernest Harwood, pastor, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Marsh sang "The Old Rugged Cross" and "No Night There," accompanied by Miss Mildred Marsh. Interment was made in Weasaw cemetery, Glendora. The pall bearers were William Hess, Henry Hess, Wilbur Smith, Will Gardner, Dell Blackmun and Jim Paul.

Cottonseed Meal
is a Safe Feed
For the Dairy Cow

Cottonseed meal contains no substance which is injurious to the cow even when it is fed in quantities as large as six to eight pounds daily over long period if a proper amount of good roughage is fed to the cattle at the same time and anyone who doubts the statement can convince himself by examining the group of cattle which will be exhibited Farmers Day, Friday, July 31, at Michigan State College.

The cows and heifers which will be shown have been on the cottonseed meal diet long enough to determine that this concentrate is no more dangerous than any other protein feed. The difficulties that have been encountered in heavy feeding with concentrates are due to a lack of balance between the amounts of the concentrates and the roughage rather than to any poisonous substance in the protein food.

This group of animals is only one of the points of interest which the dairy department at the college offers the Farmers Day visitors. Then Holsteins will be shown to demonstrate the ratings given by the Holstein-Friesian association in grading the animals for type. Three excellent three year good three good plus and two good Holsteins are included in the group.

HISTORY OF
LOWELL READS
LIKE ROMANCE

Town Dates to Days of Fur Traders, and French Voyageurs.

On August 6, 7 and 8, the village of Lowell, Mich., will observe the one hundredth anniversary of its founding by staging a celebration that would do credit to a town far more pretentious in size.

Lowell has a wonderful background of romantic history and Indian lore. Here in this beautiful Grand River valley had dwelt for centuries the noble Red Man, following the pursuits of peace and war, happy in the life of the forest and stream with the abundant game afforded here came the early fur traders and French voyagers, followed by the white settlers and the gradual conquest of the forest and the making of homes. Later began the historic lumbering days when the streets of this pioneer town of Lowell were thronged with lumber jacks, gayly dressed in their Madriaws, colored sash and high-topped caulked boots—all came to this town in the valley "where the rivers meet."

This historical past with its romantic background will all be brought before the visitor to Lowell during this centennial celebration in a wonderful pageant in which more than 100 people will participate and which will be well worth coming many miles to see.

Other attractions will be so numerous and varied that space will not permit mention of all, but there will be one of the most magnificent parades of floats ever presented anywhere—and ball games and horse races and wonderful bands.

Lowell, Mich., invites the world to her doors on Aug. 6, 7 and 8.
Come and see one of the most unique and interesting celebrations ever staged. Come to Lowell, the "friendly town," enjoy its beautiful lakes and streams and its real hospitality.

Phone Operators
Are Drilled in Voice Technique

Your speech—is it an asset or a liability?

This is a question which many people do not stop to ask themselves, being intent on what they are saying rather than how they are saying it. This is not true however with telephone operators and throughout the Bell System voice classes are an important feature of the training which operators receive.

In the operator's contact with the public, a little rising inflection or gradual "curving" upward of the voice is an important point, for if she drops her voice she gives the impression of being curt and indifferent, while by raising her voice at the end, she makes one feel at once that she is interested and anxious to please. Rising inflection brings the tones to the front of the mouth and makes the final words more easily understood.

Proper enunciation brings greater accuracy and efficiency. A natural tone is a requisite. Resonance makes a voice carry. It is not necessary for the operator to talk loudly, provided she enunciates distinctly and places the tones to the front of her mouth and speaks directly into the transmitter. In this way she or anyone else using the telephone can talk very quietly and still be easily understood. Nor does the voice become tired quickly.

To speak correctly, however, is not enough. Operators are taught that the least bit of strain, but rather an easy flow from one sil-lable to another and from one word to another. While being trained they are given various drills in the use of syllables and words, and if a girl is unable to develop the technique of her voice with such training she does not qualify as an operator.

Game Department
Accumulates Large Collection of Guns

Many hunters today hunt with anything that will expel a bullet and many trappers will trap with anything that will catch an animal.

That is the way James Murray feels about it and "Jim" ought to know, for in his 20 years with the department of conservation, he has handled thousands of guns and thousands of traps, confiscated by officers in the field. He is official custodian of the department's confiscated property. He receives the property when it comes to the Lansing office. He sets saw traps on guns, traps, etc., and he does the selling.

Conservation officers were never particularly who they arrested and the richest and the poorest lost his gun if he had used it to break a game law. So Jim receives a wide variety of weapons.
Twenty years ago any hunter who was caught with a gun or carrying a gun that was not plain and well-oiled. Today many hunters fire guns that are patched with hay wire, or that are actually rusty inside the barrel, Jim said. He has received confiscated guns that he has refused to re-sell because he considered them their poor construction made them dangerous to use.

It is the same way with traps. A few years ago the trapper took pride in his equipment. Today many are satisfied if their traps will spring.

The only thing about it all that remains the same is the quality of the furs. Jim believes that Michigan produces the finest furs in the world. He said he was able to prove this by the fact that most Michigan furs are rated with the highest in the fur markets.

Vehicles Rebuilt
From Junked Autos
Must be Inspected

Secretary of State Frank D.
Fitzgerald has asked all branch offices issuing auto license plates to inspect carefully all cars which are being assembled from parts of one or more junked automobiles.
The branch offices were asked to make certain that the assembled cars were safe for use on the highways.

Records of the department of state show how that titles are being sought on about 10 rebuilt cars each week. In some cases the assembled cars contain parts from as many as five other automobiles. It is not the desire of the department to prevent any person from building an automobile, Mr. Fitzgerald said, but rather to make sure that the car, after being assembled, will not be a menace to the owner and other motorists.

Persistent Phone
Operator Finally
"Gets Her Man"

A long distance telephone call came from Chicago not so long ago to Valley City, N. D., for a man who was working with a threshing crew in a town somewhere near that place. This was all the information, aside from the man's name, that Miss Esther Davidson, the operator, had in order to complete the call, which was urgent.

First she tried the town of Sanborn, calling every farmer who might be threshing, but without success. She then used the same method at Oriskany, Rogers and Lea. Referring the call back to Chicago for additional information, all she could learn was that the young man drove an old red but with this added clue, she tried all the garages in a number of towns together with depots and post offices, but still without success.

Finally she located one farmer who said his neighbor was threshing that day and here the young man was found. This intensive search over a wide territory was accomplished by the telephone operator in just 45 minutes.

Pelt City
Addressing a financial editor, a mountaineer complains that he bought oil stock from a "slicker" and was "skunk" out of his money.
"Please what shall I do?" he begs.
"If you were 'skunk' brother," approaches the editor, "you're in a class by yourself. Be comforted in the thought that 'many are skunked, but few are skunk'."

Birds Seek Clock in Fog During a recent heavy and prolonged fog in Paisley, Scotland, flocks of birds were attracted to the illuminated clock dial at Sher-be seen seated on the hands and clinging to the numerals for hours.

with the new Model A-B-Gas Ranges for 1931

Broiling is, of course, one of the finest and quickest ways of preparing appetizing food, but up until the development of the Sani-Grill, the housewife has had no adequate equipment for doing this without extra effort.

The Sani-Grill may also be put to many other uses in connection with kitchen cooking.

It is easy to operate—the Sani-Grill can be slipped on by simply sliding it forward, the racks, drawing, and removing from the oven when desired.

Come in today and see it demonstrated on

Same Sound is Never Formed Twice Alike

Probably never in the history of the world has a given spoken sound been uttered twice exactly alike. This very great variation in the spoken word has been indicated by a new apparatus devised to detect and record the muscular action in speech, and which it is hoped will reveal the true nature of the muscular "tangles" which cause the stutterer to hesitate before getting out certain sounds.

This new technique for the study of normal and abnormal speech was developed in the psychological laboratories of the University of Michigan by Dr. Ray K. Immel, Dean of the School of Speech in the University of Southern California.

"Most stuttering is functional and not organic, that is, the organs of speech are intact, but do not act properly," says Dean Immel. In an automobile engine the many moving parts must always be in an exact position with relation to one another when the spark comes to fire the cylinder. If the spark comes too soon or too late we have an engine performing feebly and haltingly.

Stuttering may be compared with this behavior, according to Dean Immel. Every sound uttered involves an adjustment of lips, tongue and throat muscles which must be correct before the air can be allowed to pass up through the throat and mouth; if some of the muscles are out of time with the rest, the air expelled too soon, more or less stammering ensues.

In the living subject it is impossible to observe the workings of the interior muscles of mouth and throat used in producing sounds. The Immel apparatus attempts to study the external manifestations of this inner movement by means of tambours which teach the lips, the tongue, the throat and below the tongue. Each movement changes the air pressure in the tubes running from the skin to a small drum head arrangement, to which is attached a delicate pen which makes a record on a roll of smoked paper.

So far Dean Immel has registered the speech of normal persons only, but he hopes to give variations. Not only do different persons manipulate their muscles differently to make the same sound, but they may even use different muscles. Variations in manipulation as great as 100 per cent in some sounds are possible, with the result still being understandable. Every record varies slightly from every other, and if analysis were carried out to the furthest degree it would indicate that probably never in the history of man has the same sound been uttered twice exactly alike. The ear, however, is not critical, and if the sound is easily understandable it is regarded as normal.

Most surprising discovery that while the lips, tongue, throat and mouth are actually uttering one sound, other muscles of the throat and mouth are setting ready to form the next sound, so that speech is a continuous, interlocking physical and mental process. In uttering the sound "kt" for instance, the preparatory adjustments are going on during 95 per cent of the time that the preceding vowel is being sounded.

Although the timing of the speech muscles may have wide variation and still sound normal to the ear, there are limits beyond which faulty co-operation of the muscles results in unintelligible sounds, or one muscle or set of muscles may inhibit the action of another. The result is that no sound at all is uttered, a common occurrence with stammerers. By study of thousands of normal variations, Dean Immel hopes to set up pictures of normal muscle behavior, and then by comparing these, to find what error in coordination is responsible for various degrees and types of stuttering.

Knowledge English Language Required for Auto License

Motorists who cannot read or write the English language sufficiently well to determine the meaning of road warning and direction signs, cannot obtain auto driver's licenses under the new 1931 law. Records of the department of state show that since the new law has been effective, 7 licenses have been refused for one cause or another, six of these have appealed and that there are 200 applications now being held for further investigation before final rejection.

Five drivers in Detroit, who appealed after being denied licenses on the ground that they could not read or write were ordered by the license appeal board consisting of Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald, chairman, Attorney General Paul W. Wood, and Safety Commissioner Oscar Olander, to attend the Detroit public drivers' school for three days. Then they were given 30 days in which to acquire a sufficient knowledge of English to read any road sign. At the end of the 30 day period they will be re-examined and if they pass an examination to be given by the Detroit police department.

Timber Growth To Be Fostered By Rushton-Coates Act

Of great importance to forestry and conservation in the state is the Rushton-Coates Act, one of the final bills enacted by the state legislature and signed by Governor Brucker, which provides a special tax arrangement for timber growers, according to W. F. Ramsdell, Pack Professor of Forest Land Management at the University of Michigan.

The new act adds important amendments to the Commercial Forest Reserve Act of 1923. The owner of cut-over timber lands is now encouraged to hold them for future forest growth through the fixing of a low annual land tax of ten cents per acre. When timber products mature and are cut, an additional "yield" or "severance" tax is paid, amounting to ten per cent of the stumpage value of the products cut.

Mutual benefits to grower and state ensue from this arrangement in that the grower of a crop which takes years to mature is enabled to pay a large share of his taxes when he has the money to do so while on the other hand the landowner agrees to devote the favored lands to timber production only, and to permit the public to enter them for hunting and fishing. In principle, the new act resembles laws of other states aimed to encourage utilization of cut-over timber lands. The School of Forestry and Conservation in the University acted in a technical advisory capacity on the new act, in co-operation with the Department of Conservation and other interested agencies.

Game Department Issues Figures on Trout Fishermen

There are more trout fishermen in Oscoda County in proportion to population than in any other county of the state and the fewest number are found in Sanilac. Three out of every ten residents of Oscoda County take out trout licenses.

The Fish Division of the Conservation Department has issued figures showing relative importance of trout fishing in the various counties of the state. Those figures were based on a total resident trout license sales for 1930 of $7,880.

The largest number of licenses were sold in Kent County where agents reported $2,488. Marquette County was second with 5,878 licenses sold and Wayne was third with 4,109. Upper Peninsula residents purchased 26,718 trout licenses last year, and lower peninsula residents 60,962.

The figures show that the largest percentage of trout licenses, based on the total population of the county, were purchased in counties in which trout fishing is best. Cassia, Roscommon and Crawford counties, for instance, have noted trout streams, and it was in these three counties that the largest proportion of licenses were sold. In Oscoda county 303.5 licenses were sold for every 1,000 residents of the county. In Roscommon it was 300.4 licenses for every 1,000 people and in Crawford County it was 290.2. While a few fishermen from other counties might have purchased licenses in these counties, it is not believed that the number is high enough to make any appreciable difference in the figures.

St. Clair, Monroe and Sanilac counties trailed at the end of the list. In St. Clair, eight tenths of one license in Monroe and five tenths of one license in Sanilac, where but 14 licenses were disposed of during the year.

New Mich. Bldg. & Loan Transfers to New Quarters

Evidence of the steady growth of the building and loan movement in Michigan is seen in the expansion of the quarters in which the associations are operating. The movement started as a "back parlor" business with the founding of the Provident Loan and Savings association in Philadelphia 100 years ago, but in Michigan it has far outgrown this stage, particularly in the last few years. The association which most recently gave this proof of its growth is the New Michigan at Jackson, one of the largest in the state. This organization moved into a building formerly occupied by a bank and held its formal opening. It had previously occupied the entire second story of another downtown building.

The New Michigan is directed by Irving J. Rich, one of the oldest men in the business and known nationally. Miss Mabel Rich is secretary and actively manages the organization. The office staff is made up entirely of women. Another association which have expanded their quarters during the last few years are the Peoples at Saginaw, Muskegon at Muskegon, Mutual Home at Grand Rapids, Peoples at Monroe, Adrian at Adrian, Lansing at Lansing, Co-operative at Dowagiac, Mutual at Bay City and Three Rivers at Three Rivers. The most extensive new act has been that of the Peoples at Saginaw, which erected a six-story building. Others which have moved into new buildings are the Mutual Home at Grand Rapids and those listed in Muskegon, Monroe and Lansing.

Potato Growers Get Profit From Sprays

The proper spraying or dusting of potatoes to combat insect and diseases will increase the yield of U. S. No. 1 tubers enough to pay a good profit on the cost of time and materials used in protecting the crop, according to the farm crops department of Michigan State College.

The basic spray used in Michigan potato fields is Bordeaux mixture which is made by combining copper sulphate, lime and water. Either stone lime or chemical hydrated lime can be used. The lime commonly sold as agricultural hydrated lime is unsatisfactory for use in the spray.

Four pounds of stone lime or six pounds of hydrated lime, four pounds of copper sulphate, and 50 gallons of water are used to make the spray. Three to four pounds of calcium arsenate or five to six pounds of arsenate of lead are added to 100 gallons of the Bordeaux mixture which is used for the first two or three spray applications. The Bordeaux mixture will control flea beetles, leaf hoppers, and early and late blight. The arsenicals kill any chewing insects, such as common potato bugs, which may be working on the vines.

The first spray should be applied when the vines are from four to six inches high and subsequent applications should be made as frequently as insects attacks and weather conditions require. Five applications made from 10 to 14 days apart are usually needed. The certified seed potato growers normally spray at least seven times.

Yield tests made at the College indicate that an increase of 40 bushels of No. 1 potatoes per acre is the average profit secured from the use of sprays. There is an added yield of potatoes secured even when insects and plant diseases are not prevalent. The Bordeaux protects the vines in periods of hot dry weather.

Farmers who grow only a few acres can secure adequate spraying equipment by cooperating with neighbors in the purchase of sprayers. A power sprayer which applies the spray so that it strikes both sides of the potato leaves is required. Either traction or motor driven sprayers are satisfactory.

Dusts instead of sprays also give satisfactory control of insects and diseases, but the College experiments indicate that the increase in yield is not as great with the dusts as with the sprays. The grower with only a few acres can secure hand dusts that do good work and less time is needed to apply the dusts.

The dusts can be purchased ready mixed or the grower can buy monohydrated copper and hydrated lime and mix them in the proportion of two pounds of copper to eight pounds of hydrated lime. From one to one and one-half pounds of calcium arsenate should be added to each 10 pounds of the copper-lime mixture. The arsenate can be left out of the later applications. An acre of potatoes will require 25 pounds of dust for each application.

The dusts should be applied while the vines are covered with dew and while there is little wind. Early morning is usually the best time for dusting.

Extension bulletin No. 49, published by Michigan State College, gives complete directions for mixing sprays and will be sent to any one requesting it from the Bulletin Clerk, Lansing.

Alumni of Sixty Years Ago Form Emeritus Club

One of the most interesting developments of the annual return of old graduates to the University of Michigan at Commencement, was the organization among the older alumni of the Emeritus Club, composed of members of classes which matriculated in the University 60 years or more ago.

Seeking a means to bind together the older graduates and to furnish them with a rallying point, the Emeritus Club grew out of the reunion of alumni who attended the University during the time of President Haven and the early years of President Angell's administration. The plan was first advanced by Luther Conant, '62-'64, of Oak Park, Ill., and quickly gained favor among the old graduates. Because of varying graduation dates due to the differing lengths of courses it was decided to make the entrance date the basis for eligibility. All emeritus professors of the University are members of the club, whether alumni of the University or not.

During reunion times the Emeritus Club plans to furnish a congenial rallying place for all of graduates and will make a special effort to include in its activities all of the older alumni whose classes are not holding regular reunions. "Service to the student," ill or very old alumni, through correspondence, administration of bequests or other group matters, is also planned.

Members of the Emeritus Club will be held annually. At the first meeting Professor Emeritus Trueblood was elected president, and Levi D. Wines secretary, while Professor J. Raleigh Nelson acted as host on the part of the University.

The Army Worm Has Been Found in Michigan County

The last insect to declare war against Michigan farmers in 1931 has begun its invasion in Ingham county and, according to the entomology department at Michigan State College, this cutworm, which is called the army worm, is capable of seriously injuring crops if immediate measures are not taken to prevent its spread.

The army worm last appeared in the state 10 years ago and, at that time, damaged oat and corn fields. The College entomologists say that the worm is undoubtedly present in the potato sections of Michigan and farmers are advised to immediately examine their oat fields to find out if the worms are working in the low spots.

The examination should be made at night as the worms do their feeding at that time. If the worms are found, the farmer should prepare to confine their damage to the small areas where they are at work.

The worms can be prevented from migrating by plowing three parallel furrows, 10 to 12 feet apart to inclose the area where they are working. The soil from the furrow should be turned inward. The furrow should be clean, with a perpendicular side to prevent the worms from climbing out.

As the worms collect in the furrows, another furrow can be turned to bury the worms and to provide a new barrier. If the soil is muck or sand so the sides of the furrows crumble the worms can be killed as they collect by dragging a pole through the furrows.

Railroads Reduce Number of Fires on Right-of-Way

Regular safety inspections and close cooperation given by railway officials, which last year resulted in a reduction in the number of fires caused by railroads, is continuing through this season with the exception that the percentage of railroad fires will be still further decreased.

A few years ago the railroads were one of the chief causes of forest fires. Sparks from the locomotives, hot cinders falling down the rights of way, and burning tobacco thrown from the smoker cars started hundreds of fires annually. "Railroad fires" were considered inevitable.

To-day rigid regulations govern train equipment. Spark arrestors are compulsory accessories. Pans to catch falling cinders are necessary. Smoker car windows must be equipped with screens. The Forest Fire Division of the Conservation Department employs regular inspectors who make periodic inspection of all railroad equipment. Last year a thousand locomotives were inspected and checked.

The prevention of fires along the railroad right-of-way requires that they be kept clean and free from all rubbish, old ties, timber, brush and other inflammable material. It is the practice of the railroad companies to make a thorough cleaning of the right-of-way each spring as soon as the weather conditions permit. All burning is done under the burning permit law. The cooperation given the Department by section crews of the various railroads in their burning has reduced the fire loss from this source.

Police Dog Orders Own Dinner By Telephone

It would seem but natural that a police dog should know how to summon aid, and Pal, a puppy, who resides in the tailor and shoe shop at Chicago's House of Correction, certainly knew what to do in an emergency.

On Sundays the dog is left alone, but someone usually brings his food to him about one o'clock in the afternoon. As long as Pal was fed, this arrangement was entirely satisfactory to him, but there came a day when the food was not forthcoming. Growing hungry and hungry, he prowled about the place until he knocked the receiver off the telephone on his master's desk and barked loudly.

The operator at the private branch exchange telephone switchboard heard the barking, and it was not long until Pal was enjoying his plate of
