

JUNIORS PRESENT PLAY FRIDAY NIGHT

Both Snow and Mercury Fall in First Zero Cold Snap of Season

CAST OF 11 WILL PRESENT HUMOROUS PLAY

Now Here's the Proposition

Sum people know what they want but they're more that just think they do.

Well, folks, the local theme song this week seems to be "Br-r-r-r-r!" We instructed beg pardon, we have been requesting, begging, not to say pleading with the back end to dig up our "sub-zero" headline which is supposed to be kept standing for such occasions, but it seems to have got snowed under.

Well, lets see. "The north wind sings his wintry songs, The eaves have whiskers ten feet long." Not bad for a start, eh? Let's see, what comes next? Can you think of anything? No?

Banquet Room Fantasy Oh, I went to Dee's Cafe for my daily oats and hay and I saw how they've painted the banquet walls in a most inspiring way. It's just like an animal fair, for the birds and beasts are all there, and a big baboon is wielding a spoon and eating a nut eclaire.

New Cheviac We just came back from seeing John Russell—you know John is sick—what, that big Indian ever get sick? Well it's so—the fact that he is big just makes that much more to be sick.

Lost—Mort Snyder We almost forgot the latest bulletin from Mort Snyder. Mort is in California, in case you've missed him.

MERCURY HITS ZERO HERE IN SEASON'S LOWEST

Snow Blanket 12 to 18 Inches Deep Covers Buchanan District.

Temperatures of zero have been unofficially reported in the Buchanan district in the storm which blanketed the city and community with snow ranging from 10 to 18 inches.

The condition here is prevalent over the entire eastern part of the United States according to press dispatches. Travel conditions were reported to be worse across the Indiana line and in Illinois, where road-closing operations are less efficient than in Michigan.

Papers Over 100 Years Old Found in Lining of Old Chest

A curious find was made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Al Flenan this week when they brought down from the attic an old chest which had been a family heirloom beyond memory, to fix over for a storage box.

WEAK AND SKINNY MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Saved by new Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil in tasteless tablets.

Pounds of firm healthy flesh instead of bare scraggy bones! New vigor, vim and energy instead of tired listlessness! Steady quiet nerves! That is what thousands of people are getting through scientists' latest discovery—the Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil concentrated in little sugar coated tablets without any of its horrid, fishy taste or smell. McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, they're called "Cod Liver Oil in Tablets", and they simply work wonders. A little boy of 3, seriously sick, got well and gained 10½ lbs. in just one month. A girl of thirteen after the same disease, gained 8 lbs. the first week and 2 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not eat or sleep after baby came got all her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month.

You simply must try McCoy's at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McCoy's—the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets—approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes—insist on the original McCoy's—there are none better.

Over Breakfast Coffee

(By A. C. Clapp)

On a recent trip to Chicago, this writer has witnessed again that the lake head metropolis is a city of vastly detailed and interesting organization. Everything from Sunday School teachers to gangsters are banded together for concerted action and the men residents of the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. have pushed organization to an interesting degree. Within that institution for the past 15 years the roomers have conducted and lived under a complete village government which promulgates and carries out their social and athletic past timing.

Each six months the young men 150 of them in the three floor dormitory, elect a mayor, a clerk and a treasurer, and the mayor in turn appoints commissioners for sports, social events and for publishing, etc. The weekly news sheet "Village Topics" is paid for by the "Y."

The mayor also appoints the aldermen, nine of them, three on each floor, and the corridors of each floor are neatly street signed "Hoover Road," "Messer Road" and so on.

The village council meets at 8:30 in one of the dining rooms and as announced dishes clatter at 7. Important councils of state then proceed and right now the boys are knee deep in the job of presenting gifts and a spread to 60 needy boys from all over Chicago on Christmas Day.

Prior to that on Dec. 8th, the boys hold a "splash party" which comes out head-lined in "Village Topics."

He
There are lovely purple shadows on the snow drifts
That slowly move about in silent play;
It seems to me that as I watch their pretty movement
God has put them there to ornament the day.
I understand quite well in all of nature
That where there's life there's also movement, too.
But when I notice all the lovely purple shadows—
And changing in the sun from gray to blue—
The waters of the ocean in their tumult
Or blowing winds that fan my heated face—
Or fearful wintry winds that blow around about me,
I think that God has well built up His case—
For only He can make the pretty shadows,
Only He can change the color of the sea
And 'tis His breath alone that makes the wind blow—
In all of which His voice doth speak to me.

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Clayburn E. Gooch and Zilla, Gooch, husband and wife, to the Industrial Building and Loan Association, a Michigan Corporation, dated the 19th day of October 1929, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Berrien County, Michigan, on the 26th day of November 1929, in Liber 185 of Mortgages, on page 153, by failure to make installment payments of principal and interest at maturity, and for four months thereafter, whereby the mortgagee elects and declares the whole of the principal and interest due and payable as provided by the terms of said mortgage.

The amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of $2483.75, of principal and interest and the further sum of $35.00, as an attorney's fee provided for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the Statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with six per cent interest from the date of this notice and all other legal costs together with said attorney's fee, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front outer door of the Court House in the City of St. Joseph, Berrien County, Michigan, on Monday, the 11th day of March 1935, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

The premises to be sold are situated in the City of Buchanan, Berrien County, Michigan, and are described in said mortgage as follows, to wit:

Lot four (4), Colonial Gardens Addition to the Village of Buchanan, (Now City of Buchanan.)

Dated December 12th, 1934.

Industrial Building and Loan Association, Mortgagee.

Frank R. Sanders, Attorney for Mortgagee, Business Address, Buchanan, Michigan.

Christian Science Churches
"God, the Preserver of Man" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, Dec. 16.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Acts 9:35, 34) "And there he found a certain man named Aeneas, which had kept his bed 8 years, and was sick of the palsy. And Peter said unto him, Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 99): "The calm, strong currents of true spirituality, the manifestations of which are health, purity, and self-immolation, must deepen human experience, until the beliefs of material existence are seen to be a bald imposition, and sin, disease, and death give everlasting place to the scientific demonstration of divine Spirit and God's spiritual, perfect man."

Lesson study, "The Unknown Becomes the Known."

Note: "In the Bible the inheritance of the saved is called a country. There the heavenly Shepherd leads his flock to fountains of living waters. The tree of life yields its fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree, are for the service of the nations. There are ever-flowing streams, clear as crystal, and beside them waving trees cast their shadows upon the paths prepared for the ransomed of the Lord. There the wide-spreading plains swell into hills of beauty, and the mountains of God rear their lofty summits. On those peaceful plains, beside those living streams, God's people, so long pilgrims and wanderers, shall find a home." Sunday evening at 7:30 the Youth Evangelist, Paul T. Jackson, will speak on the subject, "Man's Condition by Nature, Has Man Got An Immortal Soul?" Everybody welcome.

T. B. Death Rate Twice as High in Berrien as Cass

Pertinence is lent to the campaign for the sale of Christmas seals for the support of tuberculosis prevention work by a report issued by the state board of health placing the annual death rate from tuberculosis per thousand in Berrien county at 41.3, or only slightly lower than the state average of 43.6.

A wide variance is shown in the death rate from this disease in various counties of the state, ranging from 129.8 for Gogebic and 106 for Houghton down to zero for Kalamazoo, Oscoda and Roscommon. The rate in Cass county was 23.9 or only slightly half more than that of Berrien county. The following from a letter sent out by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association illustrates the aid given by small gifts.

Two dollars in tuberculosis Christmas Seals will buy an x-ray film, a wondrous thing that puts in black and white all the coyness of your chest. From it, tuberculosis cannot hide—with it, it will be found, and once found, can be treated.

Two dollars in Christmas Seals buys twenty tuberculin tests that seek out the tiny, tiny tuberculosis germs which may be present otherwise unnoticed, in your body.

Two dollars—Christmas Seal dollars—will pay for 200 pamphlets or 240 posters to spread the good news about good health and how to find it—and keep it.

Two dollars spent on these things may save a child's life.

The Christmas Seal Doctor asks: "Two dollars—is it too much to pay?"—Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

Legion National Commander States Policy of Order

Following is the text of the address of Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., National Commander, The American Legion, at the American Legion Appreciation Luncheon given by the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce at noon, Nov. 20, 1934.

The average business man, the average citizen, knows little about the extensive work of the Legion. Because it can be made to sound more sensational in headlines, you know that we recommend immediate payment of Adjusted Service certificates, commonly misnamed the bonus. You also know that we have demanded, and will continue to demand, the adoption of an adequate Federal program for the care of our World War comrades who sacrificed their health and their future in defense of our Country. But our vast Americanism program, our child welfare work and our contributions to high community service do not seem to make sensational news. And therefore the average citizen knows little about them.

It is not in my nature to dodge issues. Therefore, I shall speak first about the subject in our program which has excited the most controversy. It is the question of paying the Adjusted Service Certificates, or, if you prefer, the bonus. At our convention at Miami we adopted by an overwhelming vote a resolution which said that since the Federal government is embarked upon a program of spending tremendous sums, we recommend the immediate cash payment of these certificates as an effective relief measure and an effective means of further hastening recovery, without adding to the national debt.

I have said before, and I repeat it here, that I stand squarely behind that resolution, and in doing so I do not have to compromise with my business conscience. From the day we were mustered out of service, following that great conflict which history knows as the World War, the representatives of the people of these United States, in Congress assembled, determined that as a matter of common justice some adjustment in compensation had to be made to those who rendered service in the armed forces of the nation. Year after year, from that day on, this question was the subject for continuous debate in the halls of congress. Prolonged talk over the method for meeting this recognized obligation finally terminated when the Sixty-Eighth Congress in May, 1924, enacted the law known as the World War Compensation Act. To correct the injustices to service men during the World War, Congress decided not to pay us then but twenty years later. The World War Compensation Act authorized the issuance of certificates providing additional compensation of $1 for each day of service in the United States and $1.25 for each day of foreign service, with interest to date of maturity. These certificates became effective as of Jan. 1, 1925 and were payable at face value in 1945.

The majority of World War veterans never ceased to believe that Congress should have definitely settled this admitted debt at the time the law was enacted. But on numerous occasions in recent years of the Legion, declined to press our case in a patriotic effort to help the Federal government balance its budget. Times, however, have changed.

As an expedient for hastening recovery, for priming the machinery of business, and for meeting relief requirements, our government is spending billions of dollars. Under these circumstances, we of the Legion say that now, if ever, is the time to pay a debt. It will have to be paid, so why not now, when prodigious spending is the governmental policy? Why add to the national debt when the same purpose can be served by paying off a debt? I submit that thought to you as a matter of sound business.

Now right here I want to make one point very clear. Let no man misunderstand my position. I do not say that the government's spending policy is right or wrong! Politics will have no place in my administration as National Commander of The American Legion. My sole object is to present to you, as concisely as I can, the Legion's case in asking the government to discharge this debt immediately as part of its program for relief and economic reconstruction.

A better vehicle for this purpose can not be found. Does anyone think the veterans will put this money in a sock and keep it there? If they do, they know nothing of the desperate condition of hundreds of thousands of veterans. This money will be used to pay necessary bills past due, it will go to hard pressed merchants to discharge the accounts of harder pressed veterans, it will find its way quickly into every channel of business and trade. If you need new financial stimulus, here is a method of getting it without creating more debt. I am conscious that some business men will say we are not entitled to the interest on our certificates. Look back at the time these promissory notes were pledged. The dollar then was a hundred cents dollar. On the lowered dollar value of today we are asking no more than that to which we are entitled. This whole question is misunderstood because it has been a political football for years, and it is high time to take it out of politics permanently. I could discuss this subject further but I must leave it for the present to tell you about the other mandates of our program.

THE NARRATIVE

CHAPTER I.—David Ransdell, approaching New York on the liner Europa, receives a succession of radiograms offering him $100,000...

CHAPTER II.—New York newspapers publish a statement made by Hendron and concurred in by sixty of the world's greatest scientists...

CHAPTER III.—"It's going to be deadly," says Hendron. "I don't know how long it will last, but it's going to be deadly..."

CHAPTER IV.—Hendron tells Tony he is to be a member of the expedition crew on the project. He says that the ship which Hendron plans to build...

CHAPTER V.—Hendron has not been able to find a metal or alloy which will withstand the heat and pressure of atomic energy...

Tony escorted Eve to the women's dormitory. Eve bade him good night, then went inside. Tony walked with slow strides to the top of a neighboring hill...

Fears assailed him: "Suppose they don't complete the Ark successfully, and she never leaves the ground? Then all these people would have given their lives for nothing..."

On the night of the twenty-fifth, tides unprecedented in the world's history swept every seacoast. There were earthquakes of varying magnitude all over the world...

No complete record was ever made of the devastation. Eliot James, who made some tabulation of it in the succeeding months, could never believe all that he saw and heard, but it must have been true...

The eastern coast of the United States sustained a tidal wave seven hundred and fifty feet in height, which came in from the sea in relentless terraces and inundated the land to the very foot of the Appalachians...

It roared around South America, turning the Amazon basin into a vast inland sea which stretched from what had been the east coast to the Andes mountains on the west coast. The speed of this tide was beyond calculation. Every river became a channel for it. It spilled over Asia. It inundated the great plain of China...

Western Asia and Arabia, southern India, Africa and much of Australia remained dry land. More than half the population of the world died in the tides that rose and subsided during the proximity of the Bronson Bodies...

The earthquake which Tony had felt in Michigan was the first of a series of shocks which increased steadily in violence for the next forty-eight hours, and which never afterward wholly ceased...

As hour by hour the earth presented new surfaces to the awful gravitational pull of the Bronson Bodies, a series of stupendous cataclysms took place. Underneath the brittle slag which man considers both solid and enduring...

The center of the continent of Africa split in two as if a mighty cleaver had come down on it, and out of the cleft poured an unquenchable tumult of the hell that dwells within the earth...

There was no dawn, no daylight, only a diffused inadequate grayness. The people lay on the ground; each man wrapped in the terrors of his own soul, with fingers clutching the grass or buried in the earth...

Midday held no respite. It was impossible to bring up food against the gale, impossible even to stand. The sulphurous odors and the heat increased. The driven rain seemed hot. Toward what would have been afternoon, and in the absolute darkness, there was a sudden abatement...

Those human beings who survived the world's white-hot throes were survivors for the most part through good fortune. Few escaped through design—on the entire planet only a dozen places which had been picked by geologists as refuges remained habitable...

Upon millions poured oceans of seething magma carrying death more terrible than the death which rolled on the bosom of the great tides. The air which was breathed choked with sulphurous fumes, and they fell like gassed soldiers, struggling in the streets of their destroyed cities...

At Hendron's camp forty-eight hours in the Pit were experienced; and yet Hendron's camp was on one of the safest and least disturbed corners of the world. The first black clouds which Tony had observed marked the beginning of an electrical storm...

At Hendron's camp forty-eight hours in the Pit were experienced; and yet Hendron's camp was on one of the safest and least disturbed corners of the world. The first black clouds which Tony had observed marked the beginning of an electrical storm...

"The dormitories," Hendron said, "are presumably quake-proof. I don't think any force could knock over the buffets we have put around the projectile." Even as he spoke, the wind increased. Lightning stabbed the sky, the radiance of the Bronson Bodies was permanently extinguished, and the gusty wind was transformed to a steady tempest...

He was compelled to put Eve from his mind. It was necessary to think of all and not one. He found that his limbs would scarcely support him, but after he had staggered for some distance through the murk, his numbed circulation was restored, and his muscles responded...

Out of the subsiding maelstrom he collected some thirty or forty persons, most of them men. "Any of you men working on the power plant?" he shouted. "Right. You two come over here. Now who else here was in the machine shop? Good. You fellows get to work on starting up the lights..."

Shortly after eleven an extraordinarily violent shock lifted one end of the men's building so that bricks and cement cascaded from its wall. Tony had the floodlights thrown on the landing field, and every one migrated thither.

Before midnight some caprice of the seismic disturbance snapped off the power. At two o'clock the temperature of the wind dropped, and the wet multitude shivered and chattered with cold. Hail fell in place of rain.

Half an hour later the wind stopped abruptly; it puffed, veered, and came back from the southwest. It blew fifty miles an hour, a hundred, and then rose from that velocity to an immeasurable degree. Every man and woman was compelled to lie face down on the muddy earth, the undulations of which increased.

They lay for an hour or more, shivering, gasping for breath, hiding their faces. Then a particularly violent shock suddenly separated the landing field into two parts, one which rose eight or nine feet above the other, leaving a sharp precipice across the middle of the field.

Once again he went outdoors. It was a little lighter. His anxious gaze traveled to the tower that housed the Ark, and from its silhouette he deduced that it was at least superficially intact. The shouting he had done had already rendered him hoarse, for the air was sulphurous. Besides the irritating vapors in the air, there was heat, such heat as surrounds a blast furnace...

Tony went back alone to the flying field. It was a little lighter. The people were returning from what had been the flying field to the partial wreck at the camp, in twos and threes, many of them limping, some being carried. He found Eve at last, just as he reached the edge of the flying field. She was helping two other girls, who were trying to carry a third. She recognized him and called to him.

"Are you all right, Eve?" His soul was in his rasping voice. He came close to her. He looked into her eyes. She nodded, first to him and then toward the unconscious girl. She put her lips close to his ear, for she could speak only in a whisper: "Give us a hand, Tony. This girl has fainted."

He picked up the girl, and they followed him through the slough to the main hall of the women's dormitory. Beds were being carried there, and many of them were already filled. Some one had found candles and stuck them in window sills so that the room was lighted. Already two men who were doctors were examining the arrivals. Tony recognized one of the men as Dodson when he heard the boom of his voice: "Get hot water here, lots of it, boiling water. Don't anyone touch those bundles. Everything has to be sterilized. See if you can find anybody who knows anything about nursing. Get the rest of the doctors."

Somehow Dodson had already managed to wash, and his heavy-jawed face radiated power and confidence. Tony went outdoors again. A gong boomed in the kitchen, and he remembered his thirst and hunger. Around a cask of coffee and a heap of sandwiches, which were replenished as fast as they disappeared, were grouped at least two hundred people. Tony stood in the line which passed the cask...

Night came again. The sulphur in the air, the fumes and gases, the heat and smoke, and dust, the hot rain, almost extinguished their frantically defended lives. The dust and rain combined with the wind to make a diagonal downfall of foetid mud which blistered them and covered the earth. The respite, brought by the second morning, was comparative rather than real. The wind abated; the torrential rain became intermittent; and the visibility returned, though no one could have told whether it was early morning or twilight. Tony rose to his feet the instant the wind slackened. Through all the long and terrible hours he had been absent from Eve. It would have been utterly unthinkable to attempt to locate her in the midst of that sound and fury. He found, however, that there was no use in looking for her immediately. So heavy had been the downpour of rain and ashes from the sky, that it not only reduced the field to a quagmire, but it covered the human beings who had lain there with a thick chocolate-colored coating, so that as one by one the people arose to sitting and standing postures, he found it difficult even to distinguish him from woman.

CHAPTER VII TONY'S senses reasserted themselves. He was able for the first time to hear the conversation of people around him. He saw Peter Vanderbilt sitting pathetically on a log, a cup of coffee in one hand, a sandwich in the other, and his bedraggled head-chief spread over his knees for a napkin. The elegant Vanderbilt's mustache was clogged with mud. His hair was a cake of mud. His shoes were gobs of mud. One of his pants legs had been torn off at the knee. His shirt-tails had escaped his belt, and yet as Tony approached him, his urbanity was untroubled.

Vanderbilt rose. "Tony, my friend," he exclaimed. "What a masquerade! What a disguise! I recognized you only by the gauge in which heaven made your shoulders. Sit down. Join me in a spot of lunch." Tony sat on the log. "I'll have a snack with you," he replied. "Then I must go back to work."

The quondam Beau Brummel of Fifth avenue nodded understandingly. "Work! I never saw so many people who were so avid for work, and yet there's something exalting about it. And the storm was certainly impressive. I admit that I was impressed. In fact, I proclaim that I was impressed. Yet its whole moral was fulfilled."

"Futility?" "Oh, don't think that for a minute I was being philosophical. I was thinking of the many years I had spent as a lad in learning geography, and how useless all that knowledge was to me now. I should imagine that the geography that I learned at twelve was now completely out of date."

Tony nodded to the man on the log. "So I should imagine. You'll excuse me, but I'm needed." Peter Vanderbilt smiled and withdrew to a word rose and followed the younger man. They found Hendron emerging from the great hangar. He seized Tony's shoulder the minute his eyes lighted upon him. "Tony, son, have you seen Eve?"

"Yes, she's all right. She's working over at the emergency hospital." Behind Hendron stood a number of men. He turned to them. "You go ahead and inspect the machine shop. I'll join you in a minute."

He then noticed that Tony had a companion. "Hello, Vanderbilt. Glad to see you're safe. And again he spoke to Tony. "What was the extent of the injury to personnel?" Tony shook his head. "I don't know yet."

Vanderbilt spoke. "I just came from the field hospital before I had my coffee. So far as is known, no one here was killed. There are three cases of collapse that may develop into pneumonia, several minor cases of shock, two broken legs, one broken arm, a sprained ankle, and there are forty or fifty people with more or less minor scratches and abrasions. In all less than seventy-five were reported so far."

Hendron's head bobbed again. He sighed with relief. "Good, God, I'm thankful!" He rubbed his hand across his face. "Did you men say something about coffee?" "With brandy in it," Tony said. Vanderbilt took Hendron's arm. "May I escort you? You're a bit rocky, I guess."

"Just a bit. Brandy, eh? Good." Before he walked away, he spoke to Tony. "Listen, son—the use of that word 'rocked' Tony's heart. 'This was much more than I had anticipated. Much worse. But the ship is safe, although one side was dented against its cradle. That's about all. I've got to get some rest now. I'm just a few minutes away from unconsciousness. I want you to take over things, if you think you can stand up for another twelve hours."

"I'm in the pink," Tony answered. "Good. You're in charge, then. Have me waked in twelve hours." Tony began the rounds again. In the hall of the women's dormitory, Dodson and Smith were hard at work. Their patients sat or lay in bed. Eve, together with a dozen other women, was acting as nurse. She smiled at him across the room, and he told her that her father was asleep.

Tony went next to the machine shop. A shift of men was at work clearing away the infiltrated dust on the engines and the mud that had poured over the floors. Another group of men lay in deep sleep wherever there was room enough to recline. One of the workers explained: "Nobody around here can work for long without a little sleep, so we're going in one-hour shifts. Sleep an hour, clean an hour. Is that all right, Mr. Drake?"

"That's fine," Tony said. "At the power house a voice hailed him. "You're just in time, Mr. Drake." "What for?" "Come in." Tony entered the power house. The man conducted him to a walled panel and pointed to a switch. "Pull her down." Tony pulled. At once all over the canted obscenity was annihilated by the radiance of countless electric lights. The electrician who had summoned Tony grinned. "We're using a little emergency engine, and only about a quarter of the lights of the lines are operating. That's all we've had time to put in order, but it's better than this 'd—n' gloom."

Tony's hand came down firmly on the man's shoulder. "It's marvelous. You boys work in shifts now. All of you need sleep." The electrician nodded. "We will. Some of the big shots are inside. Shall I tell them to come out to see you?"

An idea suddenly struck Tony. "Look here. Why shouldn't I go and see them? I want to. Why is it you expect them to come out and see me?" The electrician nodded. "We will. Shall I tell them to come out to see you?"

That's all we've had time to put in order, but it's better than this 'd—n' gloom."

Tony's hand came down firmly on the man's shoulder. "It's marvelous. You boys work in shifts now. All of you need sleep." The electrician nodded. "We will. Some of the big shots are inside. Shall I tell them to come out to see you?"

An idea suddenly struck Tony. "Look here. Why shouldn't I go and see them? I want to. Why is it you expect them to come out and see me?" The electrician nodded. "We will. Shall I tell them to come out to see you?"

CHAPTER VIII TONY'S senses reasserted themselves. He was able for the first time to hear the conversation of people around him. He saw Peter Vanderbilt sitting pathetically on a log, a cup of coffee in one hand, a sandwich in the other, and his bedraggled head-

chief spread over his knees for a napkin. The elegant Vanderbilt's mustache was clogged with mud. His hair was a cake of mud. His shoes were gobs of mud. One of his pants legs had been torn off at the knee. His shirt-tails had escaped his belt, and yet as Tony approached him, his urbanity was untroubled.

Vanderbilt rose. "Tony, my friend," he exclaimed. "What a masquerade! What a disguise! I recognized you only by the gauge in which heaven made your shoulders. Sit down. Join me in a spot of lunch." Tony sat on the log. "I'll have a snack with you," he replied. "Then I must go back to work."

Tut! Tut! Girls, Why Not be a Man and Snowball Back

Whizz! Bang! Sock! Ouch! The annual reception awaited all the early students Thursday noon. When old man winter decides to fall, the snowballs begin to soar. Those who are fortunate enough to seek refuge in one of the automobiles usually get theirs when they make the final dash for safety at the sound of the one o'clock bell. The best idea is to wait until one o'clock and then go in the front door, girls.

Loss of Memory Helps Girls Keep Sylph-Like Forms

Have you noticed that the girls have quit complaining about gaining weight? Here is the reason. The new system of going into the library is accompanied by the loss of memory (or at least the habit of forgetting.) When the students come out of the library they forget to unhook the rings so they have to return to the library door and finish their library pledge.

If walking is a reducing exercise, the students have "it" now. A G. A. A. meeting was held Tuesday after school in the Jr. High study hall.

The meeting was devoted to the sale of candy at the local basketball games. Vivian Mogford, hiking master, divided the G. A. A. in two groups and gave each a name.

Caroline Hattenbach is captain of the Blue team and Phyllis DeNardo is captain of the Red team. The duty of the captains is to see that the members on her team are there to sell candy.

Each girl is to wear a maroon and white outfit with her letter on the sweater. Too Small They surely come in small parcels in the Buchanan high school. Little Harold Hittle, one of our midget boys, decided he would like to go in the library Tuesday afternoon; but, alas, when he got to the front of the room, he couldn't work the new ring system that we have to get into the library. Too small. One of the pupils in the front of the room finally aided him.

Harold looked at his helper with a large grin on his face, relieved from the strenuous effort, and proceeded into the library. Oh! by the way, Harold has become a privileged character. Now all he has to do is walk in and out of the library—no ring system for him.

So great was the reception of the motion picture, "Lady By Choice" shown on our screen last night, that we urge every lover of good pictures to see this genuinely human story sometime during its final showing tonight (Thursday). The grand acting of May Robson, plus that of Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly and Roger Pryor, proved an entertaining surprise and a revelation to last night's audience. "Lady By Choice," together with the almost equally good "There's Always Tomorrow" is one of the finest double feature programs we have ever presented.

AT THE THEATRE

DeMille Film, "Cleopatra," Breath-Taking in Grandeur

Cecil B. DeMille, motion picture director, and master of the spectacle, has turned to the pages of history for his newest Paramount film, which is entitled, "Cleopatra" and which makes its debut in Buchanan at the Hollywood theatre next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

With Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon playing the principal parts, "Cleopatra" brings to the screen all the talent of this pioneer director, who has come up from the beginning of motion pictures more than 20 years ago, with each new film topping his previous one.

Taking the exciting love affairs of Egypt's glamorous queen for his story basis, DeMille weaves his pattern on a background of Roman and Egyptian in all their glory and grandeur. More than 5000 people appear in the film, which tells in dramatic fashion how Cleopatra and Mark Anthony, Roman leader, linger at love while mighty Empires totter about their very feet.

The supporting cast is complete, with many of Hollywood's best players. Among those whom you will see are Ian Keith, Joseph Schildkraut, C. Aubrey Smith, Gertrude Michael, Irving Pichel, Wm. Frawley, Bryant Washburn and Robert Warwick.

It might be pointed out that DeMille has completely modernized his story and his people without losing any of the glamorous background.

Charlie Chan smoothest of modern sleuths, is on the trail again in "Charlie Chan in London," the thrilling Fox mystery which comes on the Hollywood tomorrow (Friday) and Saturday as feature number one of another giant double-feature bill. This time Charlie aids a young English girl whose brother is convicted of a crime. With only 65 hours to spare, before the brother mounts the gallows, Charlie sets out to prove the young man's innocence. Warner Oland is the canny Charlie Chan of this new film, with Drue Leyton, Mona Barrie, and Alan Mowbray in support.

Jack Holt, hero of 86 virile screen adventure dramas, dons the toga of the barrister for the first time in his long and notable career to present the leading character of "The Defense Rests," which is feature number two of this week Friday-Saturday program. Supporting the star in the leading feminine role is Jean Arthur. Others in the cast include Shirley Grey, Nat Pendleton, Arthur Hohl and Raymond Hatton. Chapter three of the serial, Buck Jones in "The Red Rider," shown once only between first and second shows, plus a Grantland Rice Spotlight completes the bill.

Joe E. Brown, the wide-mouthed comedian, comes to the Hollywood on Bargain Nights next week Wednesday and Thursday as a "Six Day Bike Rider," a first National production that is said to be the biggest rib tickler in which Joe has appeared since "You Said a Mouthful."

The story by Earl Baldwin, is crammed with hilarious situations, side-splitting gags, romance and heart throbs, and in addition carries enough thrills to make a melodrama.

Joe, as the village wise cracker and local Don Juan, becomes jealous of a professional trick bicycle rider, and tells the neighbors that he will "show" them by going to the big city and winning the great six-day race.

Frank McHugh plays the part of Joe's pal and team-mate, with Maxine Doyle, the feminine lead of the picture.

A million women released... through ELECTRIC COOKERY

Buy an Electric Range and make this Christmas last throughout the years.

READ me a Christmas story, Mother!

The pleas of children for more of mother's companionship will not be denied if she cooks electrically. A million women have solved the problem of greater leisure through electric cookery.

With old-fashioned cooking methods, the conscientious mother often had to neglect everything excepting the necessary housework duties. She spent endless hours in the kitchen preparing meals for her family. Now with electric cookery, she may be assured of the most healthful and palatable food for growing bodies, yet have leisure for herself and for her family.

What better Christmas gift than this? An Electric Range brings countless blessings to the whole family.

We sell Hotpoint, Westinghouse and Marion Electric Ranges
