

BONUS PAYMENTS TO ARRIVE MONDAY

To Hold Registration For 2d. Annual Church School 9 a. m. Friday P. O. To Open Monday Night

Now Here's the Proposition

Vacation The joyous day has come at last As though vacation irked— And, shorn of every worldly care, The teachers run and shout. The pupils go with dragging foot As though vacation irked— For nine gay months they played, but now For three months they must work. But not the teachers—from the door Behold them go fast, No work to do for three months more No tiresome checks to cash. The summer through they'll naught but play From evenside till dawn Or lay around upon the sand With very little on. But blame them not—it is a strain Behaving nine months through In fact, a miracle to us Who know them as we do. So let them run and kick their heels And frolic, so to speak, And have, if so it suits their whim, New boy friends every week. And let us not too closely watch What'er they do, for when The school bells ring again next fall They will be good again.

Enrolment to Be Held Friday

Paul Carpenter to be Director; Lois Watson Ass't. The second annual church school to be held in Buchanan will begin at the high school next Monday, with sessions from 9 a. m. to 11 a. m. from Monday to Friday inclusive for two weeks, with a staff of experienced teachers in charge. The school was held at the Church of Christ last year, with an attendance of 80, but it is anticipated that the attendance this year may require larger quarters, which have been secured at the high school building. Churches co-operating are the Church of Christ, Church of the Brethren, L. D. S., Presbyterian, Methodist and Evangelical. Paul Carpenter is again serving as director, with Mrs. Everett Watson as assistant director, the remainder of the staff being: Blanche Heim, Alma Fuller, Vada VanEvery, Lois Boyce, Leah Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Coonfar, Rev. and Mrs. Weybright, Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Rice and Rev. W. H. Brunelle. Children from 4 to 15 years inclusive will be enrolled from Buchanan and vicinity. Registration will be held at 9 a. m. Friday, June 12, at the high school. The courses will include handwork, dramatics, story telling, the life of Christ and play periods.

ORCHARD HILLS

Members of Orchard Hills Country Club are showing much interest in entering the Club Championship contest, the 36 hole qualifying rounds for which start Monday, June 15th, and end with the close of play Friday, July 3rd. Match play will start the following day, ample time being allowed for the playing of each flight. The championship contest for this year has been arranged according to a somewhat different plan than heretofore. The low 16 qualifiers will compose Class A and the next low Class B. Class C will include the 32 who remain after the playing of an elimination flight among the contestants who have the highest qualifying scores. The exact number who will take part in this elimination flight will depend upon the total of players who enter. Handled in this way after the elimination flight, which it is likely only a few will be required to play, there will be no bye in any class. The pairings in each class this year instead of being made by drawing names from a hat will be arranged according to the qualifying scores played and according to the system of numerical draw for match play as specified by the United States Golf association. This system makes practically certain that two top notch players in any class will not be paired against each other in an early flight. A plan has also been devised for this year which it is hoped will result in some additional revenue for the club as well as even more interest on the part of the entire club membership in the outcome of each match in each flight of all classes. This plan will be described in detail at a stag party to be held at the clubhouse Friday evening July 3rd at which time the name of each contestant will be auctioned to the highest bidder. Three beautiful trophies, one for the winner in each class, have already been purchased by the committee in charge. These will be on display at the stag that is to be held at the clubhouse Friday evening, June 12, and for which Funk is chairman. As usual these cups will be presented to the winners by the defeated finalists at the Windup dinner for ladies and gentlemen which will be held at the club Friday night, September 18. Open House Saturday Saturday, June 12, will be the occasion of the second open house of the season for members, from 6 p. m. until 7:30. Hostesses in charge will be Mrs. E. B. Ross, Mrs. Sig Desenberg and Mrs. R. J. Burrows. The hostesses will serve the main course at 10c per serving, with 5c charge for beverage and 5c for table service. Members are asked to bring all additional food for their own use.

Safer Than Going to Paris Anyway Included in our general assortment of offerings through the mail this week is an announcement that telephone rates to most foreign countries have been reduced, for instance you can talk to Paris three minutes at night now for $18 instead of $24, and if you want a hectic three minutes call up Paris central and ask them for their best number. Dirty Work Clarence Dunbar, well-known deputy sheriff of Buchanan area is reported to be the only local fisherman who had an entry in the big blue gill contest sponsored by the Berrien County Sportsmen's club this past spring, but for some unknown reason the awards were not made and it is reliably reported from a source that is very close to the board of judges that there has been crooked work on the part of one or more of the entrants which must be sifted out before any final decision can be made. The identity of the person or persons involved has not been announced. It seems to us that we remember that Dunbar did not have quite enough blue gills to make up an entry, and it was at first reported that he had not entered on that account. And another thing, the reason why Roots News Agency and Wilson's Dairy are leading the softball league, they both have such excellent delivery.

Brother Ernest Mangold Expires

Leo Mangold, brother of Ernest Mangold, of Buchanan, died Saturday in Pawating hospital, death being the result of injuries incurred when he fell from an electric light pole 12 years ago, injuring his spine so that he was obliged to walk with crutches since. He was born in Gallen township, Aug. 9, 1903. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mangold, Three Oaks; five sisters, Mrs. John Haack, Three Oaks, Mrs. Clyde DeMerkle, Three Oaks, Mrs. Mary Carr, New Buffalo, Mrs. Lillian, Three Oaks; and five brothers, Lemuel, Carl, George, Marvin, Three Oaks; and Ernest, Buchanan. Dr. and Mrs. John Butler of Chicago were guests last week of the former's sister, Mrs. Susan Curtis. How Buchanan's First Editor Tried To Stop Civil War Singlehanded

Alonzo Bennett Was Leader in S. W. Michigan for 45 Years.

In 1838 he was elected County Clerk and served three successive terms until 1844. During that period he served one term as county representative in the state legislature, without surrendering his court house job (then at Berrien Springs.) Henry Chamberlain, founder of Three Oaks, and at one time a member of the state legislature and a candidate for governor in the seventies, was a friend of Bennett and wrote a very appreciative biographical notice of his old associate. Bennett started his public career, he stated, by persuading him to run for supervisor from New Buffalo. Opponents (then of the Whig party) said that Bennett wanted to use Chamberlain, but the latter stated that his sponsor never asked a political favor of him.

After he left the office of county clerk, he returned to New Buffalo and went in business buying and shipping wood to Chicago. They would cut cord wood back up in the Gallen river and raft it down and load it on sail vessels just outside the "harbor," with a lighter, as no vessel could get over the bar and out again with a load. Then, in 1847, the company which had bought the incomplete Michigan Central railway from the state decided to make New Buffalo the terminal and started to run surveys. Bennett quit business and worked for the railway as surveyor and later in an office. When the railway arrived at New Buffalo in the spring of 1849, Bennett went back into the wood contracting business, buying wood for the Ward steamship line which operated for three years carrying passengers from the New Buffalo terminal until the railroad completed its Chicago connections in 1852.

In 1854 he bought a part of Sec. 31, T. 7, range 19, and in turn traded it to men on wood contracts. He built the schooner Ellen Pike, and for several years filled cord wood contracts in Chicago. He left this business in the vain attempt to "save the country" from the flames of war which we have noted above. So Bennett packed up his household goods, his type cases and George Washington hand press and moved up to Buchanan. He had his office and his residence on the second floor of the Tremont House. There a young gent by the name of John Dick started to work for him as a type setter.

Another Buchanan youth, then an urchin in short pants, George Black, came to the attention of Bennett, who was fond of boys. Bennett liked Black, partly because, possibly, the Blacks had originally come to New Buffalo, and they had been neighbors there. He got George up on a stool in the print shop and started him learning the type case. That lasted for a short time, until Mrs. Bennett, a harassed soul, objected to his staying to dinner one day, and George never went back.

Later Bennett went down in Illinois, where the fight between the slavery and anti-slavery forces was at white heat. There he set up his type cases and raised the cry of moderation and "constitutionalism." But the flames of war broke and printing a "copperhead sheet" became precarious. One day a body of recruits marched through en route south. Some of Bennett's enemies tipped them off on the "copperhead," and as they marched by his printing office they broke ranks, dashed in and mashed his equipment, throwing it in the street.

That ended Bennett's newspaper career. It also ended the typographical career of John Dick, his assistant, who returned to New Buffalo and thence went to war. Bennett went to Chicago and was a bookkeeper until 1870. Then he went back to New Buffalo where 35 years before he had gone as a young man. He went into the drug business, was agent of the American express company, and postmaster again, dying about 1890.

After Bennett left the next publisher "seen the light" and called his paper the "Buchanan Union." But before all of these events Bennett had had a long and honorable career in Michigan. He was born in Vermont, emigrated with his father's family to Erie Co., Penn., and later to Bertrand in 1834. In 1835 he joined Capt. Wessel Whittaker, founder of New Buffalo and a former neighbor in Erie, surveying the town and the lands around New Buffalo. He became a resident there, was elected justice of the peace and was the town's first postmaster.

Wagner Pioneers Celebrate 50th Anniversary of Wedding Last Week

They've Seen a Lot of History Since They Were Born Back in the Lumber Days.

Life was just one round of festivities and celebration last week for Mr. and Mrs. William Fletcher, residents for the past 20 years of the Wagner district, their neighbors insisting on celebrating the 50th anniversary of their wedding and making a week of it.

And what a week they had! "Our wedding wasn't nothing to this!" said Mrs. Fletcher. There were crepe paper bells hanging to the lamps of the dining room and drawing room and everywhere there were bouquets of fresh garden flowers. And on three evenings there were successive relays of old neighbors who came in with ice cream, cake, lemonade and presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher have an interesting story to tell, for both their parents were Berrien county pioneers, and they themselves date back to wild turkeys, deer in the woods, and troops of Pottawatomies that evaded removal in 1836 in the deep woods of western Berrien.

Mr. Fletcher's life specialty has been threshing. For 57 years, man and boy, he followed the machines, almost always an engineer. First he was an engineer on a horse power sweep where as a lad he sat on a seat while five teams, ten horses, pulled sweep arms in a circle about him while he cracked a whip at their tails and "gittapped" all day long. But when he was just growing a good crop of whiskers, back in 1878 he and his father, Christian Fletcher, bought the first steam thresher outfit in this part of Michigan. They threshed the Bridgman, Three Oaks and Avery sections. His father was a thresher, too, and his son, Albert, who lives on a part of his farm. Three generations of them.

Christian Fletcher died in 1922 at the age of 90 and the last year of his life he followed the machine the whole season, not only for grain threshing but for clover hulling and corn shredding as well. The first steam engine had to be hauled with oxen or horses; about 1855 traction engines began to come in. Fletcher's last outfit was a Rumley oil pull, which still stands in his yard, where he left it four years ago. There seemed to be nothing in the business, and there was no use threshing for the fun of it.

Pletcher was born in a house which stood right where the castle of the House of David now stands. He never belonged to the "House" he explains, although he wears a full beard, 1890 model. He is still able, at the age of 75, to do nearly all of the work on his 84 acre farm. His wife at 70 does all her own housework, milks four cows night and morning and takes care of a flock of chickens. They have two children, Albert, who lives across the road and Mrs. Henry Krieger, who also lives on a part of the home farm.

Mrs. Fletcher is the daughter of Solomon and Roseann McKean, her father being a blacksmith who was brought here from Maine as the blacksmith for the old Charlottesvill sawmill, a large lumber outfit which ran a wooden railway miles back from the lake shore through western Berrien. She attended the California school, which still stands a mile and a half south of Bridgman, with two additions erected since.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher talked most interestingly for an hour on the days in the woods. "If you want history," they said, "we've seen a lot of it."

Crooked Sewer Alters WPA Plans

Hand Excavation Crew Must Complete Remainder of Front Street.

Unexpected developments in the form of a meandering sewer which was planted back in the teens on Front street has led to a change of plans in the WPA work here, the trench machine going to North Detroit street and the hand excavating crew remaining to complete Front to Chippewa.

When the trenching crew started at Oak and Front, the old sewer was along the curb, but before they had gone far it swung out into the middle of the street, obstructing the digger. There are no manholes along its course and no records which indicate its location, the engineers state.

For that reason the hand crew will not be transferred to Days avenue this week, as had been planned. The government has now abolished the distinctions of three units in the Buchanan job and the whole installation is listed as one project. Bids for materials on 25 per cent of the project were received Tuesday and should arrive the first of the week.

June 1936 A June Madrigal

By Frank Dempster Sherman Here is an end of prose, Now for the joy of rhyme! Here is the crimson rose And the summer's prime! Dewey and fresh on the slender vine, Through the green curtains the blossoms shine Summer is here. And the wind sings clear—"Sweetheart, sweetheart, be mine."

Here not a doubt shall mar! Hopes that are set to tune! Here is the silver star In the skies of June! Deep in the dusk where the branches twine, Listen, the lilt of a lyric line: Summer is here, And the bird sings clear—"Sweetheart, sweetheart, be mine!"

Along McCoy's Crick

By Harrison Merrill

Seems that every place like the modern novels must have at least one unsolved mystery to maintain interest and Buchanan is not by any means an exception.

Old-timers will instantly recognize the above statement as a prelude to the strange disappearance of Sam Smith's wooden Indian which for years stood in front of the Smith cigar store at Front and Oak streets and then suddenly turned up missing.

There was no finer specimen of the wooden Indian maker's art than the solid oak old chieftain, which for years, in all kinds of weather, stood there facing the south, with hands extended and a kindly, peaceful look on his bronzed face.

The writer has always figured that when the long search for the chief is ended, the noble redskin, a member of the Cherokee tribe, will be found leaning up against a grandfather's clock, perhaps, in some one's attic along with the other antiques.

No one no matter how depressed, would ever consent to chop up a noble redskin for kindling. The chief is still alive, figuratively speaking, of course, and some day will be rescued to his rightful place on the main cornice.

The fact that the wooden horse in front of the harness shop on Main street disappeared at about the same time the chief turned up missing is not a suspicious circumstance by any means. The theory advanced by certain Crickites that the two might have ridden away in search of adventure is not worthy of consideration. However, one must admit that standing out in front of a cigar store would in time cause one's existence to grow somewhat humdrum.

Sam Smith's Indian was a familiar figure in Buchanan for years. The chief provided a meeting place for Crick people. "Meet me at Sam Smith's Indian" used to be a familiar phrase. The noble Cherokee always was a great promoter of conservation at parties and other social affairs. When the talk would start to dwindle some member of the group would say: "LOTP—life of the party—would say to some other person, no: a LOTP. "You know that Indian in front of Sam Smith's cigar store, don't you?" and the other would say, "You mean the one with all those Our-V's in his hand? Yes, I know him!" Then the original speaker would say, "Well, he won't hurt you" and right away the gathering would be back again on its feet and further yawning would cease.

No doubt present day Buchananites would attend parties regularly miss the noble redskin most for no matter how old the world gets there is always a dwindling of conversation encountered particularly among people socially inclined, soon as the talk about the Tiggers and who'll be the next President recedes.

Mr. Smith who in his youth had sailed the raging Susquehanna river came to Buchanan from Pennsylvania in the middle 80's. He brought the wooden Indian westward with him at the time.

In those days oak redskins were built solid without a hinge joint and it was quite a trick to bring an Indian such a distance inasmuch as the figure was obliged to stand up instead of sitting down or appearing a-tall at ease.

It seems safe to state that within a week after Mr. Smith, who was Buchanan's first and only cigar maker, had placed the Indian in front of his store, that at least 90 per cent of the boys of the village had carved their initials on the exterior of the noble redskin. Such strange fantastic carvings but add to the intrinsic value of the Indian and also will come in handy as a means of identification once the missing Cherokee is located.

It would be interesting at this time to know just how many small boys in Buchanan carry jack knives and go in heavy for initialing. Probably none! In the old Crick days there was a knife in every pocket. Merely tends to show what changes are constantly being wrought no matter how well governed a place may be.

The writer at this time wishes to clear up the mystery concerning the large iron safe in the Sam P. High dry goods store which caused certain parents to jump to the conclusion that their offsprings had suddenly developed into yeggs and were definitely headed for the underworld.

When the new safe, one of the finest money could buy, arrived in town it was allowed to stand out in front of the High store on Front street for several days before it could be installed. Attached to the knob, the one that worked the combination was a tag with full directions for opening the door. Mr. High evidently overlooked this or he never would have been so surprised when one of the small boys by giving the knob a few twists was able to open the safe. When other lads were able to do the same thing the proprietor of the store packed up the big safe and shipped it back to the manufacturer.

Mr. High and the parents did not know that the small boys of the village had copied and learned the combination to the safe from the tag and all within a comparatively short time.

Also it might be well at this time to clear up the mystery surrounding the sudden appearance of a large quantity of bull frogs in the baptismal tank under the pulpit at the Christian church. Numerous small boys transported numerous small frogs from the Crick and placed them in the tank by means of the drain pipe which extended out into the church yard. Needless to say all the youngsters were at church the following Sabbath and enjoyed immensely the chorus of somewhat lusty croaks that came from beneath the altar.

Your historian for weeks has spent considerable time and money trying to unravel the mystery of whatever became of the small brass cannon which the Democrats used to own and which played such an important part in the Fourth of July celebrations.

The cannon which was first used in the Mexican war was solid brass and worth almost its weight in gold. It was used to record Democratic victories at the polls, and therefore was nearly as good as new as in the old days only an occasional constable or drain commissioner ever edged in ahead. The big gun was used on the Fourth of July so the Democrats could keep in practice just in case anything worth celebrating ever did happen.

The cannon suddenly disappeared a number of years ago and while the opposition has been suspected no trace whatever of the missing gun has been found. Doubtless Buchanan Democrats are anxious to locate the cannon between now and the November election. Chances seem to be pretty good too, for finding it, as within a few weeks Harvey Sherwood, now teaching school at Kalamazoo, will be foot-loose and free to continue the search.

Then there was the mysterious disappearance of Looie Dan, the tailor, whose "Hello Kitt" was a familiar greeting along Front St. No one seems to know what happened to Looie. And what about Sime somebody-or-other whom the youngsters used to refer to as "cherry-picker"—what about him? The title came from the claim that his nose was so large that he could hang thereby from a limb which enabled him to gather twice as many cherries off the tree as the other fellow.

What ever did become of the fellow by the name of "Snakey" Thornton, who aided by a banjo and a gasoline light used to sell collar buttons on the bank corner? He's missing, too!

What happened to the fellow who used to be known as "Fish" Smith who weighed around 300 and sold whitefish and lake trout on the corner of the old alley leading back to the Crick before the theatre was built?

What was the name of the family living down along the banks of the St. Joe river at the end of the Michigan Central spur who woke up on Sunday morning to find a boxcar had crashed through the side of the house and was standing near them in the bed room?

What happened to Looie Hoffman the finest E-flat cornet player that ever pressed a valve in the Crick territory, the fellow who gave Charley "Pete" Fuller his final instructions in the art of "wind jamming," as trombone playing was known in those days, who dropped out of sight when he suddenly struck a blue note while in the midst of a cadenza one evening during a concert? He probably is now a new member of one of the hot bands heard nightly over the radio but if so which one?

Until these mysteries can be cleared away Buchanan historically at least will be slightly off color.

Letter just received from young George Noble in Chicago says it was Henry Spahr who gave him his first nip of fine cut. There must be others.

The complete history of the Buchanan Cornet band of the 90's has at last been completed and will appear fully in the next installment, let the chips fall where they may.

The Gardener's Lament
I thought I'd plant a garden,
And raise myself some eats—
Fine lettuce, leeks and cabbage,
Potatoes, corn and beets.
But birdsies sat upon the fence
And saw my lettuce seeds,
They flew right down and ate 'em
up,
And I grew only weeds.
The beetles rose at four a. m.
And feasted on my beans;
Potato bugs ate up my spuds,
And left disaster scenes.
The cut worms sawed my cabbage
off,
The chickens ate my corn,
And had I been a man of wrath,
I really might have sworn
To get revenge on all these pests,
And end their lives in May,
But I just dug that garden up,
And now I play croquet.
—C. E. Shuler, Newport, Pa.

Learning
There are at least two ways of earning things which in turn will develop a man to where he can serve himself and those around him best. One of these ways is the slow, expensive and sometimes ineffective one called "going it alone." By this method one must experiment and then construct a workable formula from his own limited—and perhaps mistaken—observations. The other and far better way lies in making many acquaintances and friendships with men who have been over all of that ground and in whose ripe experience may be found the solution for most of your problems.

Grand Rapids Furniture Pageant
Rehearsals of the 900 persons who will have roles in the Grand Rapids Centennial Furniture Festival Pageant, July 8, 9, and 10, have begun. A chorus of more than 1,000 voices is being recruited and in a few days begins rehearsing with the orchestra of 100.

This ensemble of 2,000 will take part in the gigantic panorama of the ages, "Romance of Furniture," which is to be presented on the nights of July 8, 9 and 10, in a vast outdoor theatre with three stages. The spectacle is expected to be the biggest West Michigan event of the summer season, and is expected to attract thousands of outstate visitors.

Plans are also being perfected for the parade on the night of July 7, of all persons engaged in the furniture and allied industries. With many floats, unique displays of products and processes of manufacture, this parade is expected to outdo anything the city has attempted in the past. Other West Michigan cities in which furniture is made, including Holland, Zeeland, Grand Ledge, Hastings and Charlotte, will take part in this colorful procession.

Michigan's Quota for CCC Increased

An opportunity for 300 more Michigan youths to attend the Citizens' Military Training camp at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, during the period of July 2nd to 31st has been provided for by another increase in appropriations by Congress, it was announced by Major Wharton G. Ingram, Cavalry, U. S. Army, Adjutant, Michigan Reserve District, 472 Federal Building, Detroit.

Additional information and application blanks may be obtained from the C. M. T. C. Officer, 472 Federal Bldg., Detroit, or from County Chairmen and Committees.

CCC Men Get Private Jobs
More than 300 enrollees of the 22 State Forestry CCC camps in Michigan have found jobs and positions in private employment since January 1st, according to a tabulation prepared here by G. A. Young, in charge of Michigan Emergency Conservation Work.

Mr. Young's report shows that upwards of 800 boys and world war veterans in the camps have been honorably discharged in the past five months. Camp Commanders, educational advisors and technical service personnel have received direct information that more than 300 of this number are now working. It is believed that a number of enrollees from whom no definite information has been forthcoming, are also working.

A number of enrollees left the camps at the end of the sixth enrollment period, April 1st, either because of statutory limitation of their enrollment or because they believed they might find work. It is these enrollees who are most difficult to trace and classify regarding their present employment status. These enrollees who were honorably discharged during the period had jobs waiting for them, almost without exception, since in practically all cases they presented letters to that effect to obtain their discharge.

Industrial employment was the largest single field which discharged enrollees entered, with farming second. Many enrollees succeeded in obtaining skilled employment because of experiences gained in CCC work and in the camp educational programs.

The 22 CCC camps under Michigan Emergency Conservation Work, 14 of which are in the lower peninsula, are located in State Forests and Game Refuges and on other state-owned property.

SOFTBALL

Roots-Poorman's
Roots News softball team won its second victory of the season on Thursday by defeating the Poorman grocery team 8-6. In addition to holding the Poorman batters to seven scattered hits, H. Rudloff aided his own team by cracking out two hits in three trips to the plate. Poorman was the big gun for his own team, getting two in three times up. Two sensational catches were made, one by Walters of Poorman's team and one by Rober of Roots, who turned a hard catch into an easy double play. There were ten walks and thirteen errors.

New Highway Map
Michigan's official 1936 highway map is just off the press and ready for general free distribution. Persons desiring one or more maps can obtain them at the state highway department or by writing to State Highway Commissioner Murray D. VanWagoner for them. Initial distribution of the first edition of the 1936 map started Monday, June 8. Later editions with trunkline corrections will be issued in July and September. The two principal changes made involve a vertical fold and the addition of much more county road mileage than usual. The map retains such former features as a mileage table, an index of more than 1,000 cities and villages and the trunkline system together with their population and a key to their location on the map, individual maps of principal cities, and location of state parks, state and national forests, state police posts, airports and state-operated ferry schedule.

Origin of Accordion
The accordion, invented by an Austrian named Damian in 1820, is a larger development of the mouth organ. The true accordion can be played in only one key, that in which it originally is pitched, and the brass keys in the tonic and dominant chords. This instrument never is used for music of serious character, although it is popular among the peasantry of some European countries. The so-called piano accordion is an improved and elaborate form of the instrument.

ACCURACY is the watch word

CASHIER'S job is a pleasant one—meeting so many people—making so many friends. Hundreds of customers come to the office to pay their bills. In receiving them as a cashier for the company, I am conscious of my responsibility as the representative of a great unseen force of employees each of whom performs a part in serving the public.

Many of these employees are engaged in the single item of handling customers' accounts. From the time the meter is installed down through its reading and billing, the watchword is accuracy. The meter readers' figures are checked and double-checked. The alert, clever girls who operate the billing machines "feed" the meter readers' figures into them and the calculations are made automatically. The fractional chance of a human error is again checked and cross-checked to see that everything is in balance before the bills go out.

The result is that 999 out of every thousand bills are correct to the penny. The chances are that the one incorrect bill among the thousand was due to an error in reading the meter which would automatically be corrected the following month.

The big family of men and women in this company who work untriflingly and accurately, make my job much easier. My endeavor is to give the final touch of good service as the link between the customer and those unseen employees.

Plans have just been completed for one of the most extensive Eagle Scout trips ever promoted by the Berrien-Cass Council of the Boy Scouts of America. The trip will take the Scouts out to the Atlantic coast, covering all the historical spots in that area. When the National Scout Jamboree was cancelled last fall plans were made to include the Scouts that were planning to go to the Jamboree on this Eagle trip.

The trip will start from Dowagiac in a steel safety bus which has a radio installed to provide entertainment en route. From Dowagiac the group will travel to Toledo, O., Cleveland, O., through Erie, Pa., on to Buffalo, N. Y., a short stay will be made there to see Niagara Falls. Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 62): "The divine Mind, which forms the bud and blossom, will care for the human body, even as it clothes the lily; but let no mortal interfere with God's government by trusting in the laws of erring, human concepts."

EYES OF THE WORLD

REPORTER-PHOTOGRAPHERS, hundreds of them, constantly scour the world for "shots" that will make a news highlight more real... more interesting... more understandable. The single, business-like click of a camera and a thousand-word story is captured, all in an instant, to be presented in a manner more graphic than the words themselves could ever attain.

The scenes these men photograph number into the thousands daily. From this great number a careful selection is made. The chosen pictures, designed to aid you in the visualization of important news events or "human-interest" occurrences and individuals, are regularly offered by this newspaper.

This is our answer to a modern public's demand upon a modern newspaper for pictures of places, persons and incidents of world-wide interest.

Three-Millionth Ford V-8 Produced

The 3,000,000th V-8 Ford came off the final assembly line at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor company May 26th under the eyes of Henry Ford and Edsel Ford and a group of his British cement manufacturers headed by Viscount Wolmer. The car, which marks another milestone in Ford production was immediately driven to the new Ford Rotunda after it had been inspected by the Fords and their guests. There it remained on display for a few days after which it was started overland to Dallas for exhibition during the summer in the Ford Exposition building at the Texas Centennial Exposition.

The 3,000,000th V-8 unit was the one-millionth Ford to be built since June 18th, 1925, a year less 18 days. Its production was hailed by Ford executives as further public justification of the new principles of motor car engineering introduced when the V-8 Ford was first presented to the public four years ago. It added one more unit to the more than 24,000,000 Fords which have been built since the Ford Motor Co. was established June 16, 1903. The 25,000,000th Ford will be built early in 1937.

Blues Will Play Oak Ridge Sunday

The Blues lost to the Granger Cardinals at the Liberty Heights diamond by a score of 12-3, the only alibi of the locals being the absence of the entire infield and a consequent transfer of position by players that seemed to demoralize the team, as seven errors indicate. Over and above those alibis, the Blues were lamentable in the hitting department. The absence of Leiter at first, Mangold at second and Dellinger at third, cut deeply into the hitting ability of the team. Jesse pitched good ball, striking out 8 men. Brock and Dixon alternated for the Cardinals, striking out 9.

When Milkmen Play The board of directors of the Southwestern Michigan Dairyman Association met Tuesday evening at Clear Lake at a dinner given by Wilson's Dairy and The Producer's Dairy of Niles. The event was held at the Clear Lake Woods hotel. Mr. Wilson stated yesterday morning that the report that a detail of state police, two ambulances and the county coroner also attended was a gross exaggeration. Very little milk was drunk. It was all in the greatest event in the dairy industry since the milk truck tangled with a painter's truck at the corner of Third and Lake recently and the driver of the former delivered 17 bottles of turpentine to his customers that morning.

Michigan Has Never Had a President And Only One Candidate—Cass

Appeared to Have G. O. P. Nomination for Alger in 1888.

Now that, on the eve of the 1936 Republican convention, it seems that Michigan has an outside chance to elect a presidential candidate in the party for the second time in its history.

For Michigan has never had a president, although Ohio has had seven. Only once did the Wolverine state come in striking distance and that was when Lewis Cass, territorial governor of Michigan for 20 years, was nominated by the Democrats. But Cass was impaled on one of the horns of the difficult slavery situation; he said the wrong thing, politically, on the extension of slavery into the new states.

While Cass was being groomed as the Democratic candidate in 1847 he wrote the famous Nicholson letter which was the first embodiment of the doctrine of "squatter sovereignty," holding that each territory should decide whether or not it would permit slavery within its own boundaries. The disposition of slavery in the new territories became the overshadowing issue of the campaign. The Whigs evaded the issue entirely and nominated General Taylor, hero of the Mexican war which was just over, and elected him with a vast tub-bub of tub-thumping. Cass was defeated primarily because he took a definite stand on a red hot issue.

Only once since did Michigan seem to be in striking distance of a candidacy and that was when Gen. Russell A. Alger of Detroit, was Michigan's "favorite" son in the Republican convention in Chicago in 1888, which finally resulted in the nomination and election of Benjamin Harrison. It seems likely that had Alger secured the nomination that year, the Wolverine state would have had a president, as national sentiment was temporarily ebbing from Cleveland.

Alger was leading Harrison on the fifth ballot, when suddenly, and unexpectedly to the great majority of the delegates a vote was taken over Sunday. Charles D. Depew and Quay, the leaders of the convention, selected dinner party Saturday. They received a telegram from James G. Blaine and the votes.

When the convention assembled Monday, Harrison's vote mounted rapidly while Alger began to lose. It seemed that Ohio, "Mother of Presidents" was destined to get another.

To date only twelve states have contributed to the list of 32 presidents. Virginia dominated at first with five out of the first eleven. During the Civil war and reconstruction era Illinois dominated with Lincoln and Grant. From the Reconstruction period to the end of the century Ohio took the lead with four presidents—every Republican elected to that office—from the Buckeye state. Ohio has had two since the turn of the century—Taft and Harding. It had one in pioneer days, William Henry Harrison.

The theory has been advanced that Ohio gained its ascendancy because the great pioneer roads to the west and southwest were the Ohio river and the National Road, and that a great majority of the western settlers went through Ohio or stopped there for a few years in a series of westward movements. It seems further likely that Ohio gained prestige while the northern anti-slavery faction dominated following the Civil War, and when the animosities that rose from that struggle still prevailed.

Anti-slavery as a leading political issue and the Republican party as the first great embodiment of that issue were mainly the contribution of the Old Northwest. Michigan and Wisconsin were rivals for the distinction of initiating the party and the movement; Illinois and Ohio as the more populous states, reaped the political rewards.

Michigan was doubtless too extreme in its stand to be a good rearing ground for politicians. Anti-slavery radicalism reached its height in Michigan in the fifties. Michigan was the child of New England; in the era immediately preceding the Civil War it was more Puritan in descent than New England, which had been received large increments of immigration. Its politics became that of Wendall Phillips and Garrison. Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, occupied more a middle ground which is necessarily the position of the successful politician.

The Michigan of Civil War days could hardly have produced a Lincoln. The genius of Michigan has apparently trended more to leadership in industry than politics. Henry Ford, the nation's outstanding industrialist, is a genuine Michigander.

Unemployed May Enrol at Niles

Registration Headquarters at ERA Office 9:30 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Unemployed residents of this vicinity distantly located from the National Re-employment Service district or branch offices may register at ERA office, Niles, June 9, and every other Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. to 3:30 p. m., according to Major Howard Starret, State Re-employment director.

A schedule extending the itinerant service throughout Michigan was announced today at the state office in Detroit.

There is a definite shortage of labor in certain lines of work, Major Starret states. Workers qualified as follows should register immediately: operators of cranes, paving machines, trench machines, ditching machines, rollers and scrapers, hoists; tank erectors and reinforced concrete rodmen.

Other labor needed include skilled automobile mechanics, wood pattern makers, die designers and wood model builders. Only Michigan men with experience in these lines need apply, according to Major Starret.

Nearly 50 itinerant offices under the jurisdiction of 13 district and 28 branch offices now serve Michigan's 83 counties.

"We established itinerant service because we know many persons cannot travel long distances to register," Major Starret says. "Many do not have the money not the means to visit our established offices. This endeavor to reach all of the people is part of our effort to give the best service."

"The National Re-employment Service registers men and women over 16 years of age who are seeking jobs and refers them to employers who have jobs to fill. Referrals are made both to private industry and to public works projects. Applications are taken from both non-relief and relief persons. We do not promise employment but do all we can to help the unemployed find work for which they are best qualified. There is no charge for this service."

During the last few months, according to Major Starret, the number of persons placed has exceeded the number of new applicants. This Federal job placement agency, a branch of the Department of Labor, has sent 144,000 persons on jobs throughout Michigan since Major Starret's appointment as State Reemployment Director last October.

More than 27,000 placements were made in private industry including contracting jobs and the balance on work relief and other governmental projects, he states.
