

PRIMARY ELECTION TO BE HELD SEPT. 15

Now Here's the Proposition

Trouble

Trouble is a reascal, a sort of meas-ly hum—Any time he happens you hate to see him come. Only one procedure, whenever he's about. Shack your duds for scrapping and try to throw him out. Anything he tells you, you are sure he's wrong. Seems like you and trouble never get along. Did you ever wonder just how things might end? If you'd ever chance to meet him like a friend? Meet him that way some time, lay your war club by; Don't you truckle to him—look him in the eye. Say: Hello, old timer, what's it all about? Maybe if we're honest we can talk it out. It won't get us no where just to fume and fizz; Maybe you know something—let's hear what it is. Let's lay all our cards down in an open way—Here is just what I think—let's hear what you say?"

So you got together, balance up the books, Add each side in toto, then see how she looks. There'll be time for fightin' if you want to still; Maybe you won't learn none, chances are you will. Chances are he'll tell you something you should know—Make you wish you'd listened long and long ago. Make you wish you'd learned this way back in your youth; Trouble's nothin' but a friend that tells the truth.

Politicless Swap Sides

The local political world was shaken by two major reverberations in the past week, two prominent members of either party having moved over into the opposite camp, leaving the net change to date exactly zero. Or anyway Paul Kane, who has in the past been a wheel horse of democracy locally received a large handsome sunflower this week from Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas thanking him for his services in his behalf. And last week City Clerk Harry Post went to Niles with a big sign for Charley Miller on his car and returned with the sign gone and the back of his car full of literature for Jimmie Miller.

But Try to Find Their Names On The Ballot

This paper has always advocated the cause of local loyalty in political matters, as an offset in part at least to the north-end creed that all candidates from north of the St. Joseph river should be elected and all from south of the same stream should jump in it. In line with that policy we wish to admonish Buchanan voters to look to the interest of the two local candidates, Dr. Kenneth Gamble for Coroner and Atty. Bill Desenberg for circuit court commissioner. These two young men are both standing on the threshold, not to say the front porch, of promising professional careers. Both are well deserving of election, and barring accident, should win through to the finals. Their prospects are materially aided by the fact that they have no opposition.

WPA Starts on Days Ave. Friday

Set Dec. 1 as Completion Date; Within City and Federal Appropriations

Work on the third and last leg of the Buchanan sanitary sewer project is slated to begin Friday morning, when the hand excavation force will begin digging on Days avenue at the intersection with Front, with good prospects of completing the entire project by Dec. 1, or before winter sets in for good, according to engineers in charge.

Within a week the trench digger will be through on Chicago street, which will conclude main installation on Units 1 and 2, comprising all the territory north of Main and west of Oak streets. South Oak street still remains, with work for the hand excavation crew from Front to the end of the shallow water table.

Engineers state that the program is now fully up to the time schedule set and is working within in both the government and city appropriations. The remaining work on Unit 3 comprises all the work east of Oak street and south of Front. Front street was completed last week and reinstallation of the pavement completed, the last barriers being removed Friday.

He secured a quantity of fertilizer from the mushroom farm near Niles, putting a bucketful below the root of each plant, and mulching the entire patch with straw.

He reports that on sunny days he has been harvesting five bushels a day from the patch, securing a choice, well-colored tomato and practically removing the hindrances of weeds and rot from contact with the ground. The varieties planted were the John Baer, Margold and Pritchard's Early.

Erect Stone Marker on Land Founder Donated to Mt. Tabor Grange

Descendants of Jesse and Elizabeth Helmick assembled in reunion at the Mt. Tabor Grange hall Sunday afternoon, the occasion being a special observance of the 100th anniversary of their settlement in a log cabin on their homestead in 1836.

Ninety-five were present from several states for the co-operative dinner and business meeting at the Mt. Tabor hall and the unveiling of the Helmick monument afterward. This monument consisted of a large field stone, which stood 3 1/2 feet high and which had been originally taken from the cellar of the old Helmick home. The grange hall premises where it was placed were donated by Jesse Helmick. On the stone was fitted a bronze marker setting forth its significance. In the absence of the vice president, Dean Clark, D. E. Helmick, Dixon, Ill., presided both at the business meeting at the hall and at the unveiling. An address was made by Dr. Ernest Burnham of Western State Teachers College. Rev. Rice spoke for the community. Miss Ruby Clark, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verl Clark, unveiled the memorial stone.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: president, Mrs. Maria Russell, Colvin district, as the oldest living grandchild of Jesse Helmick; vice president, Dean Clark; secretary, Mrs. Ione Palmer, Lombard, Ill.; treasurer, P. F. Shriver of Berrien Springs; historian, Mrs. Frank Hamilton of Dayton; assistant historian, Mrs. Jesse Russell, Buchanan, RR 1; program committee for 1937, Miss Betty Bragdon of Monroe, Mrs. Robert Gano of Niles, Verl Clark of Buchanan.

The historian, Mrs. Frank Hamilton, read letters from those unable to be present and also the obituaries of Jesse and Elizabeth Helmick which were printed at the time of their deaths. E. D. Sylvester, Edgerton, O., gave reminiscences concerning his grandfather, Jesse Helmick. Pictures of the two founders of the western branch of the family and of their homestead were placed under celluloid for permanent keeping.

The family founder, Jesse Helmick, came first to the Mt. Tabor district on horseback from Warren county, O., and selected his farm, bringing his family on the following year. He opened a blacksmith shop in the forest, was elected justice of the peace of Oronoko township on its organization in 1837, and also served as one of the first board of school inspectors. He later served two terms as county supervisor and was associate judge of the county court.

B. H. S. Points To St. Joe Game

To Play Friday Evening Under The Lights

Coach John Miller has been hastily rounding a squad of promising but green material into shape for the opening game to be played with the St. Joseph High School football team on the lighted grounds of the latter school at 8 p. m. Friday, Sept. 11.

Coach Miller states that his team should be larger than last year and that with time should be an improved aggregation. However the state of its progress by Friday is problematical. St. Joseph has a new coach this year and little is known to date about its material or its prospective style of play.

Coach Miller has no definite lineup yet but states that the following players will play at some time in the game: ends, Vergil, Beck, Simpson, Jerue; tackles, Bachman, Bob Stevens, Hansen, Griffith; guards, Kuntz, Bainton, Boyce, Hamilton, Rotzine; centers, Harvel, Banke; backfield positions, Smith, Earl Stevens, A. Trapp, M. Trapp, Leiter, Jesse, Donley, Lyon, Morris.

Chief Moccasin Comes to Life

Whose shell is a traveling autobiography of the pioneers of Moccasin bluff, was seen again two weeks ago, his reappearance coinciding rather strangely with the passing of one of the signers on his shell.

The Chief was seen again on the old Montague farm, now the E. W. Clark farm, by C. J. Sult, near the place where the old Indian trail emerges from the woods at the top of Moccasin bluff. He is readily identified by four initials on his shell. To the front, or the head end, of the bottom of his shell are the initials C. M. '95, placed there by Clinton Montague when he was a boy of 16, 41 years ago. In the center is inscribed "R. D. 1860," the initials of Richard DeMont, who carved them the year before he left for the Civil War, to rise to a captaincy and later become a sacrifice of Berrien County. A generation later Montague carved his. The turtle must have been grown when the first initials were carved in 1860, but has survived both generations, indicative of the durability of the tribe of turtles.

Near him at the time he was found was another turtle bearing the initials "E. M.," carved there twenty years ago by Clinton Montague's son, Elmo, when he was a boy of eight. When Elmo Montague was here last week he recalled the incident of carving the initials and said that in former years it had usually been easy to find Chief Moccasin any time some where near the top of the trail through the woods on Moccasin bluff. Tradition that is quite well founded holds that this trail was the one the Indians used traveling between the mouth of the St. Joseph river and the Carey Mission and Bertrand. Very likely before either of those places had been established it led to old Fort St. Joseph and to the confluence of Indian trails in the vicinity of Niles. On the maps of the old trails made by Professor Hinsdale of the Department of Archeology of the University of Michigan, this trail is indicated, following almost the route of the Redbud trail to its junction with US-31 and thence to the mouth of the river. Old pioneers stated that it originally traversed the low ground, now a marsh between the main Clark plant and the River street plant, and thence under the edge of the Bainton hill and across the ravine north of the Sampson Dairy.

Just below the foot of Moccasin bluff it contacted the old village of Chief Cog-Moccasin, or Moccasin Shoe, known now to tradition as Chief Moccasin.

Until his reappearance last week the old turtle had not been seen for several years, and it had been feared that he might have been killed on the Redbud trail which had been carved across the face of the bluff in the intervening time. In addition to the two initials described above, he bears the letters H. A. and L. W. T., whose carvers are not known, and which have no accompanying date.

Parties Open Headquarters

Increased Registration Indicates Public Interest

Indications of rising temperatures politically were indicated by opening of headquarters by both major parties, the Republicans leasing quarters in the Nelson Transfer office on Main street and the Democrats in the Redden building on East Front st.

City Clerk Harry Post reports that the total registered list closely approximated 2,000. The primary ballots will contain only names of contesting candidates, offices where there is no opposition being omitted.

The precinct voting places will be as follows: Prec. 1, 120 South Oak street; Prec. 2, 11 North Oak street. The polls will be open at 7 a. m. and will close at 6 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Solution—A Park Board

This paper has asserted several times that Buchanan has been favored by nature over and above the generality of towns, but that for the most part it has been willing to thank nature and let it go at that—or perhaps it would be nearer the truth to say most people just let it go at that.

The approaches to the city are more attractive than those of any other town in this section, but it was not a matter of arrangement—it just happened so. The Chamberlain hills on the south, Moccasin bluff on the north are not man-made. People with an eye for these things have at various times commented that much might be done to improve this natural advantage of setting, but nothing ever has been done. So what?

It is the idea of some people here that we need a park board. The city commission has its hands full administering the general affairs of the city. But many towns have park boards, in which various interests may be represented. Such a board should be of use here. Some streets have no trees, other streets have a lot too many. There should be some program of thinning and planting. There is the case of Athletic park. It has a lot of possibilities but nothing has been done in any consistent, long-range way. Look at the football diamond for instance. The turf has not been consistently cared for. The property belongs to the city, the diamond was built for the schools, and it seems, in a general way, it is in the situation of the fellow who had two stools and fell between them when he sat down.

A park board could take over such responsibility. It would not necessarily be a matter for additional expense; it might in many cases mean a conservation of resources, a saving of outlay. Anyway there's too many possibilities about this town to permit things to go on in the old haphazard way.

Is The American A Safety?

That there are certain factors in the American way of living that do not build up durability and constitutional toughness is evidenced by the poor showing of American athletes in the distance races in the Olympics, or anyway there is considerable basis for the story.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stracke, who came here recently from the continent, commented in a talk with the writer on the fact that people in the "old country" seemed to have more strength and endurance than in the United States. They ascribed it to the greater luxury of American life and the universal use of automobiles. In Europe the great mass of people have no other means of locomotion for the daily travels at least than the feet. They walk constantly. And according to Emerson, "the rule is, do the thing and you will have the power."

They walk everywhere, all the time, and they develop the wind and strength that is needed in long distance footwork. After all, the excessive use of the automobile is not all to the black side of the ledger of living.

Then again, they eat, of necessity, simpler food. The mainstay of their diet is "black" rye bread, strong and, according to our thinking, very stale. No such rye bread is obtainable here. No water with the meals, no pie or any other desert for the common people. Not so far from the way we lived in America back in the recent depression, and it was a matter of universal comment that health standards were higher than in prosperity. In the "old" country, there is always depression. And even it has its uses.

Meeting the Housing Situation

Depressions develop ingenuity as well as caution which is why the pressing need for more housing facilities is being met now in a different way than it was when a similar situation prevailed about ten years ago.

At that time there was much promotion work to encourage people to build new houses, as a matter of investment, for rent or sale. Several local people were persuaded by the ballyhoo to go into the house construction business, usually to their regret. Their experience, its results still fresh in the public mind, was not such as to encourage anyone to rush headlong into the building game again. There will doubtless be a revival of home building, probably for the most part for the use of the builder. There may be a new type of construction developed which will reduce costs and which can be more safely undertaken on a large scale.

But for the present the chief move to meet the housing deficiency is the reconditioning of old houses. Oldtime houses were too large for present day use as a rule, and several resourceful local people have conceived the idea of cutting them up into two or more apartments. They buy them cheaply, and with a comparatively small investment they have two renting propositions for much less than the price of one new home of the type built back in the free and easy twenties.

Another ingenious way of coping with the housing situation is illustrated by the achievement of William Burgoyne. Mr. Burgoyne came from Chicago a few weeks ago, mainly to be near his mother. Although his experience had been that of a banker, he had nevertheless enjoyed unusual opportunities in learning reconditioning of houses. When he was a boy his father, the late William Burgoyne, Sr., was in charge of construction for the Marshall Field company, and young Burgoyne went all over Chicago with him, as he superintended the maintenance of numerous properties. Later he went into the banking business and rose to be in charge of the real estate department for Chas. C. Dawes' bank, the Central Trust Company. It was part of his work to inspect properties which were constantly reverting to the bank, and to devise ways and means of reconditioning them.

He could find no house in Buchanan and finally conceived the idea of reconditioning an old house which was supposed to be beyond redemption. He bargained to renovate the old Bank home on North Main street, once one of the better homes of the town, but badly racked from being moved several years ago. He took possession and went to work himself. Few practical builders had his breadth of experience in such work. He knew how to install a number of jackscrews at the right places and lift a wall back into plumb without damage. He put screws under the foundations of the house and straightened sagging walls, slanting ceilings. He got under the base of a fireplace and lifted it without damage. In the three months he has been in the house the change he has effected has been educational to watch.

AT THE THEATRE

"Green Pastures" Here Sunday

Declared to be "America's Best Loved Play," a title earned by a continuous run of more than five years during which more than 2,000,000 people in 39 states witnessed it. "The Green Pastures" has been filmed by Warner Bros. and will have its local premiere at the Hollywood Theatre starting Sunday.

Directed by the author, Marc Connelly, who in 1932 won the coveted Pulitzer prize with the play, "The Green Pastures" is said to be the most pretentious production ever attempted by Warner Bros., or any other studio.

There are 111 speaking parts in the screen version, besides the famous Hall Johnson Choir of 60 voices, and hundreds of extras. In all, there are 120 scenic settings, some of them of gigantic proportions. One of these is the famous "fish fry," in which 600 characters attend a picnic in a sunlit glade. There is a Southern community, with a full sized church, gambling halls and night clubs. Scenes of spectacular beauty are shown, including barbaric revels set in ancient Babylon, in one of which four score of shapely dancers entertain the guests.

"Spectacles we could only talk about on the stage we now actually bring to the eyes of the audience," said Mr. Connelly, who collaborated with Sheridan Gibney in writing the screen version of his play.

Exceptional music sets off this production. Twenty-five spirituals, two more than in the stage production, are sung in the film version by the Hall Johnson Choir who appear in the cast. Most of them are familiar and beloved old tunes, and a few are new.

Why Experiment?

Two years ago, after a vigorous campaign during which I wrote and spoke repeatedly throughout the district for economy in government and in opposition to the New Deal policies, you elected me by a majority of 13,000 and naturally I assumed that you desired that the promises made during the campaign be kept, and this was done.

So far, no particular fault has been found nor criticism offered except by that group which was displeased because I could not disregard my promise to you, accept the orders of Dr. Townsend, and agree to vote for a two per cent transaction tax which, in effect, meant a sales tax of from ten to thirty per cent imposed upon all the necessities of life, thus increasing your cost of living.

Advantage is being taken of this dissatisfaction. Although Governor Brucker, Senator Couzens, and the Democratic candidates for United States Senator are opposed to this plan, no organized criticism is made of any, but I am now being opposed by a candidate who promises a $200 per month pension, a promise which he should know can never be fulfilled. He is using this organization for his own political advancement. Do you want a rubber stamp Congressman and the rubber stamp in the control of a man who does not even live in the state?

Another candidate, who is the present head of the House of David, a pleasant gentleman, a former California county judge, and a man of business experience has entered the field, but, and the thought which I wish to convey to you is this:

You have a representative who has kept the faith. I am sure that you will concede that I have been conscientious, that I have been industrious, and no one doubts my sincerity or frankness. So, if you believe in economy in government, in a return to Congress of the power to coin money and to fix its value; if you believe that monopoly should be prohibited, that we should once more return to those principles of government enunciated by our forefathers and embodied in the Declaration of Independence and in the Constitution, let me have your support.

If you believe in what has been the American form of government under which our Nation has grown in spite of all abuses, notwithstanding the selfishness and greed of powerful politicians, into a land where has been the home of the oppressed and the persecuted and which once again, freed of the New Deal experimenters, will become the land of opportunity, give me your support, not only on election day, but from now until the primary on September 15 and then on to November 3.

The New Deal has given you experiments. Result—an overwhelming debt and a disregard of your rights. You need not experiment. You know what I represent and what I will do. The present is no time for you to experiment when selecting a representative. Let me at the primary have a vote which will encourage our party workers and make the November task easier. From now until primary day take the message to your friends and acquaintances, for upon you depends the result.

Sincerely,
CLARE E. HOFFMAN,
Republican Candidate for Congress, Fourth District of Michigan.

Veteran Urges

Support of Hoffman

Three Rivers, Mich.
Sept. 3, 1936.

Editor,
Three Rivers Commercial,
City.

Dear Sir:
I hope that every voter in this district will support Congressman Clare E. Hoffman for reelection, as he is competent, humane and considerate.

He introduced a bill in Congress to repay me for surgical and hospital bills which I paid personally in order to obtain relief from a direct war-connected injury which I received in France.

This bill was passed unanimously by both the House and the Senate. It was sent to the President and he vetoed it, although he had billions of dollars given to him to spend and he has spent billions of dollars in promoting the various New Deal alphabetical branches and experiments and all sorts of boondoggling projects.

It is just too bad that a Veteran's just claim should be denied in order that some politician might be given the taxpayers' money.

I hope that the Congressman will be reelected and that he will continue to serve the people in the future as he has in the past. Certainly every Veteran should support him.

Leon Frederick Ruggles,
World War Veteran.

Death of Chief Weesaw 100 Years Ago Is Recited in Old Document

Beau Brummel of Pottawatomies Slain at Feast of Moon of Blue Fruits

In the year 1836 there was in Niles a young gentleman by the name of W. M. Nevins, who taught Greek, Latin and mathematics in the Academy which had recently been opened there, and little else is known about him except that he got about some what in the wild and primitive surroundings of 100 years ago and left some quite readable accounts of what he heard and saw.

In one of these accounts he tells of the death of Weesaw, war chief of the Pottawatomies, whose village stood on the four section corners on the southern edge of the St. Joseph river about two miles north of the Carey Mission Memorial on the Niles-Buchanan road. The village site was a few hundred feet southeast of the home of George Smith, and the Indian cemetery was on his farm, which includes about a mile of beautiful river front in the north bend of the St. Joseph. Here was held the fatal feast of the Moon of Blue Fruits (July) which resulted in the death of Weesaw. The chief was buried standing, with the upper part of the body out of the ground, as was customary with the bodies of chiefs. Mrs. Irene Hagel, Berkeley, Calif., told the writer when she attended the Buchanan centennial here three years ago, that as a little girl she had been shown the grave of Weesaw, with the remains yet visible above the ground, surrounded by a rude picket fence of staves. She said that the grave was on the low ground in the bend of the river. Local Indians state that Weesaw's remains were taken up by Pottawatomies many years ago and buried under the corner of the Catholic church at the Pottawatomie settlement near Hartford, Van Buren county.

Weesaw township was named after Chief Weesaw. It is believed that he was a leader of the Pottawatomie bands under Tecumseh at the battle of Fallen Timbers about twenty years before his death, and his name appears on a number of the treaties of the tribes with the United States following their defeat.

The recital by Nevins follows: Died near this village on Saturday, July 2, 1836 in the 57th year of his age, Weesaw, an Indian chief of that part of the Indian nation, residing on the reservation on the western side of the river St. Joseph opposite to this village, called in distinction from other parts of the same tribe the Indians of the Wood.

He had for a long time been their war chief, an honor conferred only on the bravest and the best and his name will be long revered among them. In our own village the loss of none of them could have been more lamented.

He was an Indian of the old school such as are still met beyond the Rocky Mountains and such as Catlin, their enthusiastic traveler, would have chosen for any subject. He had not, like many others, debased himself with the use of ardent spirits, for though he took his glass occasionally he never indulged to excess. If he had borrowed anything from the whites it was perhaps rather an urbanity of manner which, added to his former nobleness, rendered him more sociable and agreeable; and it was a treat, as many of us remember, merely to meet him in the woods, so pleasing was his figure and so hearty was his salutation. His form was tall, erect and commanding. His high Grecian forehead and Roman nose gave to his countenance, set off with the jet black hair and dark eyes of his tribe, an intellectual cast which no paintings of his own could cover; and whether in full costume with the dark ostrich feather over his head, his blue capote belted around with a red sash that sustained his tomahawk; his breast ornamented with a broad silver moon—the badge of his office—his arms with glittering crescents or bracelets and his legs with tinkling bells; or covered only with the simple blankets and plain vestments of an Indian, without any decorations, he was still the true gentleman of the woods.

He has always been remembered as the friend of the whites. In fact, so familiar had he become with some of them and so attached was he to his native woods along the St. Joseph that he was accustomed to say it was not his intention to depart in the coming fall with the rest of his tribe to their new destination west of the Mississippi. "I remain with you," he was accustomed to say to an old settler in his neighborhood whom he called Kok-Kok-She, the Raven, "and should Kok-Kok-She die first Weesaw will weep for him and should Weesaw die first Kok-Kok-She will weep for him."

As the feast waxed enthusiastic, liquor flowed and most of the Indians except Weesaw became intoxicated. The old chiefs told warlike tales of their feats of prowess in battle under Tecumseh, about twenty years before. The young Indians, who had never had similar opportunities to distinguish themselves, became excited and began to deal blows among themselves indiscriminately. One of them, the 17-year-old son of Weesaw, drunk perhaps for the first time, was struck a hard blow in the forehead from an unknown hand. Enraged he ran to a neighboring lodge, got a gun and fired into the group of revellers. The bullet struck his father in the head killing him instantly.

As a wild yell arose from the tribe over the body of their slain chief, the young man became suddenly sober, and tried to kill himself, but was prevented. It was tribal custom that if one Indian killed another, he was turned over for execution at the hands of the family of the victim. Since this punishment was not applicable, the young Indian was permitted to live, with the understanding that he desist from strong drink and spend his life in the service of the bereaved family.

Effects of Alcoholism To Be Studied

Course to be Incorporated in Curriculum of Rural Schools.

The effects of alcohol on the human system, and its effects in relation to the social system, will be instructed to Berrien county rural students the coming school year under a new plan sponsored by the state department of public instruction. Two hundred school teachers, meeting at the court house Friday afternoon for their annual instruction meeting, were addressed by Mrs. Dora B. Whitney, Benton Harbor, who explained the new teaching methods to them.

Mrs. Whitney, Michigan president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, was one of a committee of 12 prominent Michigan people who compiled the book of instruction, printed by the department of public instruction as a guide to teachers in their work.

The study of temperance is not to be a part of the physiology course, as it was for many years. Rather, it will become a part of the general school curriculum, and is to be brought into class work by the teacher as opportunities present themselves. The handbook of instruction suggests that as students ask questions, the teacher should take advantage of them for assigning independent research work to her pupils. Investigation of the effects of alcohol on automobile drivers, on efficiency in industry and other topics are offered as possible subjects.

The handbook contains a chapter on the physiological effects of alcohol on the human body, and another chapter on the social effects resulting from the use of alcohol and narcotics.

The principal departure of the new system of instruction is that it is not brought up as a routine subject, every day of the week, but has a more subtle approach to the student.

Teachers also were told by Mrs. Jennie Burton Meacham, county school commissioner, of the new general science textbook that is to be used in the rural schools. The general science course will take the place of agriculture, formerly taught during the last half of the eighth grade, and physiology, formerly taught in the second semester of the seventh grade.

The suggestion to drop agriculture was made by the state, Mrs. Meacham said. In Berrien county, it has been particularly difficult to find an agricultural text book that will apply to the farm conditions with which the students must deal when they are out of school.

Desert Island of Fiction

Nothing about the Pacific captures the imagination so readily as the desert island of fiction, which is an atoll in actual fact, and equally nothing is more disappointing in the reality of closer acquaintance. No more monotonous life or restricted outlook can be imagined than that on those sandy shelves just above the level of the surf.

States Use Many Odd Designs on License Plates.

One of the primary attractions in the basement of the state capitol, so far as tourist interest is concerned, is the display of Michigan's automobile license plates from 1908 to the present day, recently mounted in a glass case by direction of Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State.

The first "plate," that of 1908, was a mere metal disc, or seal, the smallest license "plate" ever issued by the state. In that year, only about 3,150 motor vehicles were registered in Michigan; the discs cost but 50c each.

In 1909, a comparatively enormous plate of heavy leather, with tin "house numbers" nailed to it, was fashioned. There was no indication on the plates of the year issued, but it was so distinctive, there was hardly much need for that.

The state's seal was first used on plates in 1910, when an enameled plate was formed from heavy metal. The seal appeared either enameled or riveted, each year thereafter including 1919, when it was last issued. The biggest license tag was issued in 1926. Letters were first used in 1933. Twenty-nine tags are contained in the display.

Near this case is one containing 1936 license plates from other states. Michigan's is almost prosaic compared with that of some states, notably that of Tennessee, the only state in the union to shape its plates to follow its geographical outlines.

The outline of Montana appears in the background of its plate, however. Wyoming divides its plate numerals with the figure of a "broncho buster" astride a pony. A pelican divides the Louisiana numerals into halves. Pennsylvania, "The Keystone State," displays a small keystone on its plate.

Maine's plates carry the word "Vacationland" across the bottom. Rhode Island calls attention to its "300th anniversary" of statehood this year on its plates, while Texas similarly remembers its "centennial" with that word displayed.

Arizona achieves distinction by making its plates from copper, reminding people that this is "The Copper State."

BROADCASTS POLL

Because of the unusual interest in the Presidential campaign this year, F. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber company, has completed arrangements to broadcast three times weekly the result of the Literary Digest Presidential poll. "Of course, we are not in politics," Mr. Litchfield said in announcing the series of broadcasts. "However, we believe people will be greatly interested in getting information on the progress of the poll more frequently than it has been available in the past. So far the results themselves are not completely impartial and based entirely on the Digest's own tabulation of returns."

Oldest Known of Bible Manuscripts Are Found

London.—An Old Testament manuscript said to be 300 years older than the oldest biblical fragment previously known to exist has been discovered in John Ryland's library in Manchester, it was announced.

The manuscript consists of four fragments of the book of Deuteronomy in Greek, written in the Second century B. C. The book of Deuteronomy probably was written in Hebrew in the Seventh century B. C.

Fragments of papyrus which had been gummed together and used as wrapping for a mummy case were discovered on an Egyptian rubbish heap and brought to England by Dr. Rendel Harris in 1917.

They remained uninvestigated until C. H. Roberts of Oxford, an authority on papyrology, recently undertook the delicate task of separating and piecing them together. In announcing the results of the research, Roberts revealed the mummy case wrappings yielded four fragments of the book of Deuteronomy; six fragments of the Iliad, book one; two pieces of a tragedy; part of a historical work; a piece of verse, and part of an account.

"The biblical papyri," Roberts added, "are earlier by some 300 years than any other manuscript of any part of the Bible."

"First Water" diamond

You've heard it often—a diamond of the first water. Would you like to know what it means? The expression is used because when a perfect diamond is submerged in water, it is invisible. A second-water stone has some slight imperfection—flawless, but ringed with color, or colorless with some slight flaw. Some people prefer a stone with color. The important thing is, of course, to know that the stone you buy is what it is said to be. Come in and look over our selection of diamonds and other gems.
