LANDS 6 1/2 POUNDS OF LIVE DYNAMITE

A fishing party comprising A. B. McClure of the Record, Bob Franklin and Carl Remington returned Sunday evening from a week-end at Charlevoix with a prize collection of piscatorial beauties, the chief of which was a 6 1/2 pound steel head trout, one of the finest caught in the lake this year, landed by McClure.

"I was using a live minnow as bait. I used a 7-ounce fly rod, and 18-lb. casting line and a conventional casting reel. He was sure 6 1/2 pounds of 'silversided dynamite.' Are you really going to print this?"

"We chased him all around that part of the lake in a motor boat, and when he would dive straight down and sink there was no use trying to pull him up, so we would circle. Remington was handling the motor boat. We knew we had a big one. You should have seen Bob Franklin. He was so excited that his knees rattled. Me excited? I was never calmer in my life. How much of this are you going to print?"

Wants Mules to Fit Color Scheme

Anybody that has a team of mules colored black with a white mark around the body can get a fancy price from Richard Schwartz, who wants them to complete the live stock color scheme on his farm. The mules can be any color, Schwartz states, just so they are black with a white band around the body. He specializes in Dutch Belted cattle and Hampshire hogs, both black with white bands. He is adding Lakenvelder chickens this year. They are black with white bands. He has a dog also that is black with white markings around the body. If he could just find a team of mules so marked the color scheme of the farm would be 100%. "Seems like there ought to be one somewhere," stated Mr. Schwartz, who would like to wear a black shirt with a white band around it, if his wife would let him.

Student Parade Ends in Injury

Elsie Herman Has Injured Foot as Result Of Belling of Instructors

What was otherwise a most enjoyable occasion for all had an unfortunate sequel when Miss Elsie Herman, daughter of Arthur Herman, incurred a painfully injured foot in an automobile collision at the conclusion of the parade staged by the high school students Monday morning in celebration of the marriage of Principal Paul J. Moore and Miss Judith Bulla, instructor in English.

The procession of students was breaking up at the high school, having turned east along Chicago street from Detroit. Miss Herman was riding on the running board of a car driven by Don Jerue, Miss Mayme Proseus and Miss Allegra Henry, physical instructor, riding beside her. Jerue turned off to the right on Phelps and in the excitement and confusion of the occasion a car driven by Bob Hamilton sidestepped the car driven by Jerue, the bumper catching Miss Herman's foot and severely crushing the flesh of the heel. She was taken to Pawling hospital, Niles, where an X-ray examination showed that the bones were not affected. It is not believed that there will be any permanent effects.

Miss Mayme Proseus also incurred a leg cut. Buddy Ruth, who was in the procession on a bicycle, was knocked off his wheel while down town, and his machine was demolished. He escaped with a bruised leg.

77-Year Old Pottawatomie Will Not Open Up for WPA Historians

Thomas Topash, from Kansas Reservation, Holds Out for Wampum

WPA alleged historians and information gatherers who get paid for assembling "history," most of which will be and should be shoveled into furnaces in the end, will not get anything for nothing from Thomas Topash, 77-year-old Pottawatomie Indian who is spending three months in this vicinity, visiting his son, Levi Topash and other relatives while on a three months vacation from the reservation at Mayetta, Kas.

"They get paid money and they don't know what they are doing," asserted Mr. Topash to the writer. "They expect the people, like myself, who really know the facts, to give them the information. I have been employed by college men with doctor's degrees to look up matters on Indian affairs. There are Indians who could use these jobs who really know about Indian lore and history. But they turn these WPA 'historians' loose on us who don't know anything about it. Why should I tell them anything? In fact why should I tell you anything? Who are you and why are you asking all these questions?"

It helped considerably that Mr. Topash arrived at this conclusion some fifteen minutes after he had talked very interestingly on Indian lore and customs. He says he is not an educated man but he shows evidences of a good native mind and of being quite certain about his facts.

He was born in the Indian community of Silverbrook Creek, near Dowagiac, and went to the Pottawatomie reservation at Mayetta about thirty years ago. As a boy he had wandered over southwestern Michigan and had heard first hand the lore of the Pottawatomies.

The Pottawatomies of the Mayetta reservation still maintain many of the tribal religious customs, he stated. Soon it will be the feast of the Moon of Strawberries at the reservation, only the Indians call them "heart berries." They venerate the strawberry because it is shaped like a heart—"like the heart of the Good Spirit," they say. The good Spirit is the giver of all things, and all thanks is given him. His name is No Manitou, the "Manitou" of the Schoolcraft legends and of Longfellow's poems Manitou is pronounced with the accent on the second or middle syllable.

Out in Mayetta soon they will be gathering the first ripe strawberries but they will not eat a single one, until the crop is blessed at a ceremony handed down from the far past. Indians will dress in ceremonial costumes still kept. The head Indian will pronounce the ceremonial talk, which is handed down by word of mouth. The Good Spirit will be thanked for the fruit. After that the Indians will eat their first strawberries. It is so with all the fruits of the field. They are the gift of the Good Spirit and he must receive credit due in a ceremony of thanksgiving before the fruits may be touched.

The older Pottawatomies, some of them at least, still use the primitive bark house of the Pottawatomies. Topash stated. This is about 10 or 12 feet in diameter, and the structure is oval, something like the shape of an Eskimo's igloo. It is usually made of elm bark. There is a frame of oak poles with the bark peeled off. They are bent over to a junction in the center, where they are tied together with basswood bark. These older Indians never farmed, he stated, but lived on the rental they got from the whites who rented their allotments. Each Indian had an allotment from the government, 80 acres of agricultural land or 160 acres of grazing land. The younger Indians tend to farm their allotments, Topash said.

He has with him a Pottawatomie ceremonial costume, covered with flowers and intricate patterns, all with a meaning. The symbol of the star, signifying to the Pottawatomie as to the Caucasian, the thought of honor and of aspiration, is prominent on the costume. But Mr. Topash would not tell the significance of these symbols or anything else about the Pottawatomies. He had got to thinking how the WPA gets paid assembling such facts, even if they don't know anything about them.

Clarks Change Payment System

Announcement has been made by the Clark Equipment company that, effective June 4, employees will be paid in cash by the Brinks Express company instead of by checks, payment to be made on alternate Fridays, instead of on the 9th and 24th of each month as hitherto. Exceptions to the cash payment will be made in case of members of night crews and office employees who might not find it convenient to meet the hours of payment by the express company. It is expected that this will be a convenience to local merchants, who have been required to carry large amounts of cash on paydays to cash checks.

Suggests Warning For Traffic Light

A local business man suggests that in connection with the current traffic safety campaign, it would be well to have a sign a block south of the light at the intersection of Front and Portage warning the traffic. Drivers who do not know of the light have narrowly averted collision from the fact that the light is not plainly visible from the south.

Lands 2,000 Lb. Shark On Pirate Island—Yo Ho! And a Bottle of Rum!

G. Thumm Tells of Catching Ton Fish in Florida

Catching a ton fish may sound like a fish story but it's not so far out of the ordinary in Florida, according to Gottlieb Thumm who returned recently from several months at his winter home on Captiva Island off the west coast of Florida.

The 2,000 pound or thereabout fish was a shark, which Thumm landed from the pier in front of his home. He did not land it alone either, having several husky negroes to help haul it in. Also as a matter of fact they had to shoot the fish several times before they could do a thing with it. After several steel bullets had been pumped into Mr. Shark from a rifle he was still alive but less energetic. Still he put up quite a scrap. While he was in a fighting mood there was no particular need in disputing matters with him. They just moored him to the pier and for a while it was a question whether he would not take the pier out to sea. Many times he shook it with his lunges.

Finally he tired himself out and then with a half dozen men helping Thumm reeled him in. He was caught on a heavy steel hook, about eight inches long, which Carl Remington had forged for Thumm before he left. The line was more like a small cable, made to hold sharks.

When they hauled him on shore, they thought he was dead and the negroes started slicing off steaks which they greatly prize. They also cut his eyes, which the negroes claim contain pearls. While this was in progress, Mr. Shark gave one last swish of his tail and knocked one of the negroes down.

After they had taken what they wanted from the carcass, they towed it out to sea and sunk it.

The sharks of this species are not man eaters, Thumm stated. At the bathing beach near his home they may frequently be seen swimming about but no one fears them. He used 2 and 3 pound bass and sheep heads for bait.

The catching of the ton fish, Thumm said, caused more excitement on the island than they have had since Bill Miller caught a pelican while he was visiting there a while back. The island gets its name from the fact that the old pirates of the Spanish Main once used it for a prison.

Johan Verschuyl Likes America—But Not On Account of Streets

Hollander Expects to Pay Big Taxes But He Expects Best of Improvements

If the streets of Buchanan, and for that matter the roads surrounding it, were in Holland they would not be in such condition, in the opinion of Johan Verschuyl, young Hollander in the employ of the drill department of the Clark Equipment company.

Unusual conditions following the installation of a sanitary sewer and the delay awaiting the WPA are really pretty lame explanations, according to Verschuyl, who merely remarks to all such explanations: "You needn't try to tell me that they are trying to keep their streets and roads in condition in this country."

Finally you learn that the criticism is not so much a special one against Buchanan's streets as a general one against street and road management in the United States. In the first place Verschuyl says he likes the United States very much—but not on account of its streets. He likes it rather on account of the easiness in the atmosphere, the lack of tension due to the freedom of fear from war.

"What I like best here," says Verschuyl, "is that everywhere you do not see soldiers, soldiers, soldiers. Even in Holland new we have to go in for soldiering because if we have no defense, then if Germany marches in to us to strike England or France, then those countries will not help us.

But in Holland people are used to paying much higher taxes than in the United States, and as a result they have better public improvements. The citizen does not insist that he spend little on the government and lavishly on himself; rather he is used to the opposite. Automobile taxes are so high that the working man simply does not think of running a car; instead he rides to his work in the cheese factory or the tulip field on a bicycle. In the morning, instead of cars you see throngs of bicycles, but the workmen are pedaling over smooth modern concrete pavements. After all, they help a lot in riding a bicycle, and it is some solace to know that the rich fellow driving the car has to pay well to keep them up.

Verschuyl worked for four years in Holland as a salesman for the Chrysler Corporation; he knows all the objections to owning cars in Holland. In the first place there are no automobile factories in Holland; there is an import duty of 21% on imported cars. Wages are about half as high in Holland in terms of money. In terms of food, clothing and rent they are as good as they are in the United States, but when it comes to operating imported cars or imported gas and oil, they go for more than half as far. A $900 Chrysler in Holland would cost him the equivalent of $1800 in his wages plus an import duty of 21% or $378.

Before he started operating it he would have to pay a weight tax of $60, or the equivalent of $120 in his wages. He would pay another tax of $15 which you can multiply by two and then he would be ready to start driving. That is after he had paid the sales tax of $27, the equivalent to him of $54. That is, after he had filled his car with gas at 30 cents a gallon and oil at 60 cents a gallon, the equivalent of 60 cents for gas and $1.20 for oil in our wages. There are only three oil companies selling gasoline and oil in Holland, the Texaco, Shell and American Petroleum, all American.

The automobile taxes of Holland go in large part to keep up the highways and as a result you see them everywhere, the best modern concrete roads.

The Holland workingman no more complains that he does not have a car than you complain that you don't have an airplane. But he would not live in the sort of houses that most American workingman live in. Holland is a modern country in housing—just as modern as America and the homes are for the most part far better built. Such a thing as having a car and no home or a car that cost as much as your home—a Hollander could not understand that. Verschuyl's father is an architect. Johan has with him here a handsomely-printed booklet showing samples of Dutch home architecture and two of the homes in the book were designed by his father. They are beautiful houses combining the quaint beauty of the antique with the best features of modernism.

Hollanders think in rather different terms about many things. For instance, young Verschuyl has no idea how many people there were in his home town. What does it matter? Hollanders don't care much about statistics. It never came into his mind to inquire how many people there were in his town. Holland is a very free country, and the Hollander can lambast his government openly if he wants to as freely as in America, but the chances are that he wouldn't be as likely to. If the automobile taxes are so high they keep him from owning one—well, the rich fellow that wants to show

The 70th Memorial Day program for Buchanan will be staged on Monday, May 31, because of the fact that the day falls on Sunday this year, with Civil War veterans absent from the parade for the first time.

Arthur Johnston, Berrien county commander, will be in charge of the program, according to Commander John Elbers of the local Legion post. The Clark Equipment company will close for the day to release the employes and the schools will be closed for the morning events. A new feature arranged by Commander Elbers is a parade of the entire school body. All pupils will form in line at 9:45 a. m. in front of the high school building and will march down Chicago to Oak, thence to Front street.

Rev. Thomas Rice and Rev. Karl Keefe of Watervliet will be on the program at the cemetery, the latter having been secured for the address of the day. He is a Deputy Grand Master of the Odd Fellow Lodge of Michigan and is widely known as a very effective speaker. Music will be furnished by the high school, directed by Ralph Robinson.

Plans are being made to install a public address system so that there will be no difficulty in audition. Nevertheless it is urged that all co-operate by attention to the program.

All veterans of past wars and their auxiliaries will meet at the American Legion hall at 9:30 a. m. Transportation will be furnished for those who cannot march. M. L. McKinnon will be in charge of the firing squad.

ETIQUETTE FOR THE RECEPTION OF A TRAFFIC TICKET.

Buchanan is entering a period of transition in city traffic regulation, and there is very likely to be some occasions for complaint and criticism on the part of some people who happen to run afoul of new regulations.

It might not be untimely at this juncture to put in a plea for courtesy and consideration on the part of the public toward the traffic officer. There is only one way to enforce a traffic code—and that is to enforce it. At a recent national traffic conference, representatives of the cities that had made the best record in the reduction of accidents agreed on one primary consideration: enforcement tells the story.

Enforcement means that some time some body is going to get a ticket. What should be the proper etiquette for the reception of traffic ticket? Emily Post and Dorothea Dix say nothing on the subject, but there is an etiquette. The first thing is to remember that the traffic officer is merely trying to do his duty for the protection of the public, and not to take the matter personally. The second consideration is that it usually pays in time and money to be good natured. It never makes the fine any lighter to cuss the officer or the judge. On the other hand many a fine might have been avoided and time and trouble saved for all had the receiver of the ticket viewed the matter philosophically.

It is not a disgrace to get a ticket. In fact it's very easy for the average person to get one that he may not have exactly deserved. He may in a moment of preoccupation break an ordinance that he never broke before in his life, and get picked up, whereas to his own knowledge habitual offenders may have escaped.

But that, too, may have been no fault of the officer. He can't be all places at once; many offenders are shrewd and never break an ordinance when there is an officer in sight.

So it pays to be courteous to the officer, to talk it out courteously or to go to the court if he requires it, without acrimonious argument. It is all in the interest of public safety. And the fellow that gets mad usually gets more fine and more publicity than if he had kept his temper. Officers and judges don't want to fight or to argue. They want to do their duty in public protection. But, being human they sometimes react to offensive criticism in rather human ways.

LIKES AMERICA BUT NOT STRATEGY

(Continued from page 1) off has to pay them, and as a result it makes his bicycling much easier. Holland is like America used to be in its emigration laws—it is free to the world. As a result there has been a large Jewish migration from Germany as a result of Nazi persecution. The Jews from Germany are not really as high class as the Jews we know in America, Verschuyll says, and it has caused some grumbling against the open door.

When young Hollanders look abroad for a change they are most likely to look to the United States or to South Africa. It is hard to get into the United States. It took Verschuyll 2 1/2 months to make arrangements. He had to give a financial assurance that he would not get employment. A few years ago it took his brother three years to arrange to come here. That was before the depression.

There are many things in favor of going to South Africa, the country that never had a depression, because of its great gold deposits. The big industry there seems to be housing. An architect like Verschuyll's father, or a plumber or a builder of any kind can get employment instantly and get big wages. One of Verschuyll's friends went there. The day he arrived in the town of his destination he was the only unemployed man in town, and he was unemployed only the day of his arrival. In America on the other hand it is all automobile. It was possibly his connection with Chrysler in Holland that turned Verschuyll's eyes towards America. But it is queer that they do not build better houses in America. And keep up their streets.

FRIDAY IS PROM NIGHT

SENIOR FAREWELL PARTY

"TIME MARCHES ON," AND IT IS PROM TIME

The prom is always looked forward to, weeks in advance by those who expect to attend because it is such a rare occasion. The gymnasium, scene of the prom, should look like a flirtation garden, and the girls' many lovely dresses along with the boys' combinations of dark coats and light pants should make a very picturesque picture. All in all it will be a gay, hilarious evening. The prom itself is a farewell party for the seniors, and they should certainly be eager to attend, for, as the lights go off announcing the end of the prom, so goes out the lights on twelve years of active school life for fifty-three seniors.

SCHOOL SLANTS

Whoever conceived the idea of the Chicago trip certainly had a brilliant idea. While a great majority of the seniors are doubtless familiar with Chicago and visit it many times throughout the year, it presents a golden opportunity for those individuals who have only been there a few times to browse around the city for a day. The school exhibit was open to the public last Thursday afternoon and evening, closing with a fashion show presented by girls in the home economics department. Now that the boys have a class, why didn't they, too, model the latest styles or perhaps demonstrate their candy-making ability? The new metal-work department in manual arts provided one of the best displays in the entire exhibit. This field of work is very new, and some truly remarkable articles have been turned out by several of the more advanced students.

Here and There—Marshall Doak has a "gorgeous" track medal; May Britt Malmborg's new boy friend graduated from B. H. S. in '34; Did Margaret Miller give back George Lauver's locket? Has George Riley found a girl friend yet?

THROUGH THE KEY HOLE

Marjorie and John like to ride in Buicks. Dates for the prom are few and far between. Max Beadle is working on a date for the prom.

"Imo" Russell does not like concited fellows. "Jerry" Reamer makes frequent Sunday afternoon trips to the Penwell farm. The band is considering new uniforms.

Mabel Bennett is quite enthused over her prom date. Jesse and Crothers will be seen together at the prom. Daisy and Dale are quite fond of the mineral water at Bear Cave.

EDWARD PASCOE AND ROBERT REAMER PRESENT GIFT TO ATHLETIC DEPT.

The athletic department of Buchanan High School wishes to express its gratitude to Edward Pascoe and to Robert Reamer, prominent men of this city. Mr. Pascoe presented the school last week with an excellent starting pistol. This will be used by the track team, and it is certainly a welcome donation, for the team had no suitable starting gun. Mr. Reamer gave the baseball team six new baseballs, four bats, twelve practice balls, bases, and the use of a breast protector, shin guards, and mask for the catcher.

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN—

Dean Criffield wasn't bashful? Emeline Delibac always played with dolls? Evelyn Proud used to go riding in a blue V-8? Eugene Kelley blushed if girls looked at him?

In the third grade Rose Zachman weighed only thirty-nine pounds? LeRoy Williams was seen in the big village of Dayton every Saturday evening? Mary Jane Heiermann moved to Buchanan from South Bend? Robert Squier made frequent visits to the country club? Kathryn Morgenthau started her senior year at B. H. S.?

EDITORIAL

By Keith Dalrymple
There are only fifteen more days of school, and those days should be memorable ones for you individual seniors. After graduation, gay party days will soon fade out of your lives, and the first taste of life will be your unfortunate fate if you choose to make it so. In contrast, however, we hope that you seniors will strive towards happiness, instead of aiming everything at the moon, for happiness is the biggest of life's fortunes.

Happiness is attained either by love or by some success, and the two may work together in harmony. The right kind of activity then makes gained happiness a continued success, and if you seniors can fight your way through to this end, you have everything on earth that you could wish for.

Many Die in Zeppelin Hindenburg Explosion

This remarkable picture was made just as the giant German dirigible Hindenburg burst into flames and exploded as it was preparing to land at Lakehurst, N. J., following a flight from Germany. Ninety-eight persons aboard were plunged to earth in the flaming wreckage. Thirty-four died almost instantly and of the 64 rescued, many were horribly injured. An explosion of a gas cell in the stern was blamed for the disaster.

598,445 first-quarter payment from weight tax revenues.

In addition to the McNitt law payment of $4,000,000 a year from the gas tax, the counties receive all the weight tax collections, and an additional $2,550,000 from the gasoline levy. The latter was voted by the legislature in 1934 when it reduced the weight tax 36 per cent.

How are a Bank's Investments Made?

The most important function of a soundly-managed bank is to keep most of its deposited funds employed at the best rates of interest consistent with safety. A considerable portion is, of course, put to work in local loans. Other investments are made depending upon legal requirements, local conditions and business conditions generally.

All investments of this bank are made under the directions of our officers and investment committee. From a variety of sources—files, business and statistical services, industrial, state and municipal reports, information developed by correspondent banks—we constantly collect investment information.

We diversify our investments according to rules of sound banking, and give proper consideration to long and short term maturities, to marketability, fair yield and—above all—to soundness.

Red Letter Day At W. C. T. U.

The usual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union last Friday afternoon was unusual in that a gift shower was given the president, Mrs. Mae Mills in honor of her faithful service and devotion to the Union. It was held at the home of Mrs. W. F. Runner and the guests from out of town were Mesdames Westervelt, Raschey, Spencer, Karrack and Miller from Benton Harbor, Mrs. Belle Mead from Hillsdale, and Mrs. Haggerty from Chicago. After a business session and a program Mrs. Pangborn gave a presentation talk and the gifts and cards were presented. Among the gifts was a large Weller Pottery vase with wild rose design, cookie jar, silver plate, 4 pairs silk hose, large cake from Mrs. Harry Hartline and many other gifts.

It will be 100 years in 1939 since the W. C. T. U. was founded by Miss Frances Willard and the Society wishes to celebrate this event by raising $2,000,000 for temperance education. This education will be through motion pictures, radio broadcasts, road signs and posters, exhibits and demonstrations, education in schools and in a great many other ways. Eva L. Explanation for Fairy Rings
Nature Magazine says that the circular formation of fairy rings is assumed by a number of different varieties of fungus. A single spore may start the ring. The spore spreads outward in all directions under the soil. The center eventually dies from lack of nutriment and the circle continues to widen on the outer side, as fresh soil nourishes the plants.

Reporter Telephoned First Newspaper 'Scoop' About Telephone 60 Years Ago.

When Alexander Graham Bell, in Salem, Mass., on February 12, 1877, lectured about and demonstrated the telephone, which he had invented the year before, the first newspaper "scoop" by telephone was a direct consequence. For as part of the demonstration, a telephone line ran between Salem and Boston and Henry M. Batchelder, a young reporter, used the line to telephone an account of the lecture to the Boston

The first newspaper "scoop" or "news beat" by telephone took place just 60 years ago; and the telephone itself was the subject of the scoop. The time was 1877, one year after Alexander Graham Bell had invented the telephone. The place was Salem, Mass., where Bell was well known. The occasion was a lecture and demonstration of the telephone in Lyceum Hall, in that city, before the Essex Institute. The chief figures were Bell and Henry M. Batchelder, a young reporter. As a means of obtaining a little immediate though moderate financial return from his newly invented telephone, Alexander Graham Bell had arranged to lecture about it, and to demonstrate it, before the Essex Institute. Young Batchelder, who was a clerk in a Salem bank by day and the Essex County correspondent of the Boston Globe by night, "covered" the affair. Among the many interesting documents which may be found in the American Telephone Historical Library, at the headquarters of the Bell Telephone System in New York, is Mr. Batchelder's own story of how he translated a happy inspiration into an important piece of journalistic history. "Old Lyceum Hall, on Church Street," he writes, "was crowded with an audience attracted by the novelty of the new invention, and to greet Prof. Bell, who was well known in Salem, where he had been engaged to teach a little son of Thomas Sanders, who was born deaf. Prof. Bell was living at the house of Mrs. George Sanders, mother of Thomas Sanders, and it was here that he carried on his early experiments which led to the development of the telephone. "After the conclusion of the lecture, the writer of these recollections asked Prof. Bell if he would be accorded the privilege of 'talking' a message to the Boston Globe. This was readily granted, and in the presence of a small number of persons, about twenty, the message was sent. It appeared in the Globe the next morning.

The Boston end of the circuit over which this first telephone news dispatch was transmitted was in Bell's workshop at 5 Exeter Place, where Thomas A. Watson, Bell's assistant, was in charge, and where a number of guests were assembled for the demonstration. One of these was A. B. Fletcher, of the Globe staff, and to him fell the honor of receiving the message and carrying it to the news room—one of the great "scoops" of journalistic history, although he doubtless did not realize its importance at the time. So dependent is modern journalism upon the telephone for the swift gathering of news, for obtaining interviews, for checking facts, and for covering the many angles of an important "story," that it is probably not too much to say that without the telephone, daily newspapers as produced today could not exist. Both newspapers and telephony have come a long way since that night, 60 years ago, when they first worked together to speed a news report to press.

Signs of the Zodiac Guide Joe Brown

Lid you know that every act of your life is influenced by the planet under which you were born?

You didn't? Well, that is the claim advanced by astrologists, and there are millions of people who consult their charts before they even venture so far as the front porch in the morning for a breath of fresh air. This may be one of the days when they are warned to stay in bed!

The subject of astrology forms the hilarious background for "When's Your Birthday?", the rollicking David L. Loew comedy which comes to the screen with Joe E. Brown in the starring role Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Shots of the Hindenburg Disaster will be shown on Sunday, May 30th. These shots were taken by Movietone News and is a part of News Real No. 68.

Architects rank the Place de la Concorde, Paris, as among the handsomest squares in the world, although the casual visitor may regard it as very rather than beautiful. It was here that King Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, Mme. Roland, Danton and Robespierre were guillotined—along with 2,800 others.

deceased; and closed the estates of Earle DeGroot Baker, Mollie Krieger and Clarence W. Chaddock, deceased.

Peculiarities of Tortoise

If animals were historians, tortoises would be our best informants. For they outlive all other creatures and are the most intelligent of reptiles, according to a writer in the Washington Post. The giants of the South Sea Islands generally carry on for about 150 years, although many celebrate their two hundredth birthdays. They don't need all that time to get so big, however. They are fully grown in about 20 years. Their perfect health and huge size are the results of diet which includes no meat. Lettuce, celery, grass, clover are the main items of their meal and for dessert they go in heavily for berries.

Termite Damage Sign For Repairs

Termites may have given beneficial engineering service to Michigan pioneers by boring through fallen trees and returning them to the soil. Dwellers in cities and subdivisions today have yet to discover anything beneficial in having linoleum, furniture, floors and foundations crumbled by insect workings.

The termite worked willingly for the pioneer with the cutting away and removal of most of the trees. Now the pests have moved into the cities of north central and north eastern United States where they work just as enthusiastically. Depreciations of termite have not been serious in Michigan farther north than Bay City, but below this point termite damage runs into untold thousands of dollars.

Adult termites establish themselves by flying into a knot hole and removing their wings. There the mother lays a few dozen eggs. There are not many at the start and it sometimes takes from five to ten years to build a colony.

Termites, according to Professor E. I. McDaniel at Michigan State College, may be ousted by breaking their contact between their workings in the wood and the moisture of their homes in the ground. All foundations and up-rights in new buildings should be capped with non-corrosive metal plates. High grade cement should be used for foundations. Fill under buildings should be clear earth rather than scraps of wood. The presence of termites in stumps near buildings should be the signal for their eradication by kerosene. Circular bulletin No. 150, "Michigan Termites or White Ants" can be obtained by writing Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Fingerprints in Babylon Taking of a criminal's fingerprints by peace officers is recorded on an ancient Babylonian clay tablet.

No Profit in Lost Money The government does not actually realize any profit from paper money which is lost, even though theoretically it does. The money is still held in the treasury vaults against outstanding paper currency and unless congress passed such a bill that this money might be taken out of the reserve fund, no actual profit would be derived.

Arch Bridges Old Arch bridges date back beyond the Christian era. The oldest arch, at Nippur, was built about 4000 B. C. by the Assyrians. The Pont du Gard, at Nîmes, France, was erected by the Romans in 15 B. C. This three-span arch bridge carried an aqueduct which brought spring water from the hills to the baths of Nemausus. It was 880 feet long and 160 feet high. The original London bridge was built over the Thames some time between the years 1000 and 1200. It consisted of 20 stone arches, and on it were built houses and shops. Although it was in almost constant need of repair, it managed to last until less than 100 years ago.

Pooh, Said the Peacock

By D. ALLOWAY MCVICKER © McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

"DARLING," Jack had said when he brought her to their new little cottage, "I hope the peacocks won't keep you awake."

She had been the most starchy eyed small blonde wife in the world. "Imagine," he had said, "being so happily married that your one worry is being kept awake by peacocks. It's the most romantic thing I ever heard of."

That was six months ago. Then, being Patsy Popplioff—Jack had added to her list of worries "and being named Popplioff"—had been delight untold.

But peacocks screamed all night. They said "Pooh, pooh!" in a great lusty shriek that brought you sitting up stark and terrified and all alone, because Jack was so busy selling advertising that he had to spend night after night in town.

She had tried so hard. When Jack called up from town, all excited, to say that the boss was playing golf at the club and he had told him to stop over at their house for dinner, she had bounced with exuberance.

"Feed the brute, honey," Jack told her eagerly. "Feed him and vamp him—in a perfectly nice way, understand—and win him over and show him that your spouse is the one man in the world who should have the managorship of the agency."

Mr. Smith. She hadn't met him but she had heard about him until she could picture his every feature. Portly and pink and beaming when he was pleased and steaming when he was peeved. She rolled out but-terfly hisquits, and put curls of butter to ice and opened a jar of black, rich, olives. She roasted two tiny crackling chickens and basted them with thick brown gravy.

When the doorbell sounded, she jumped. Had Jack by any possibility meant dinner at noon? Well—everything was ready.

Her heart sank when she saw that Jack was not with the portly, ruddy man at the door. But she showed her brightest dimples and her blue lawn dress matched her eager eyes.

"I must apologize," the man began, "for this intrusion—"

"It isn't an intrusion at all," Patsy said. "If you only knew how lonely I get, eating here alone every day."

He looked somewhat "harmed." "Oh, but I couldn't think—I took the wrong turn out at the last town, I think—"

"How dreadful," sympathized Patsy. "If you'll wait two tiny shakes, I'll have food on the table."

The somewhat prominent eyes looked wistful. And the odor that came from the open oven broke down his resistance.

They had had a very good time, and Patsy gave him explicit directions and saw him off toward the club with a feeling of triumph.

That lasted until five o'clock when Jack came in followed by the Mr. Smith who, portly and pink enough, looked not one bit like the man who had just eaten up every scrap of food in the house.

Patsy was a good trooper. She offered no apologies. She served some cold food from cans in moderate quantities and did manage to produce some good soup and some hot biscuits.

But Jack was furious. When the real boss had departed he had listened stormily to her explanation, had shouted unforgetable things and stamped out of the house.

Suddenly Patsy stooped. There were two peacocks across the fence, one of them small and dark and unassuming, the other with great fan-spread tail, strutting—

Dimples ran riot. Patsy stood very still, her eyes deep and sweet and maternal.

"He struts up and down," she said. "He shows you all his finest feathers when he's getting you. Later he'll get plain and mad and stamp around." But that will be when he's sure of you. When he doesn't need to strut because he has you. And you and I—we don't mind, do we?"

She turned and ran back to the house, straight into the arms of a repentant young man who was dashing toward her.

"Patsy, darling," he said, "I've been such an oaf. I'm so sorry, sweet. It's just because I wanted you to have things. And what a break! That man you fed—he is a client of the company's—we have a system of circularizing Smiths hard because of the boss' name."

"He was wobbling about a big contract and he heard my name. There aren't any more of those, you know; so he said, 'Was that charming girl who was so hospitable to a stuffy old stranger, my wife?' And the boss said Mrs. Popplioff was charming—so fresh and unassuming—that he's always being fed by prospective job hunters and they ruin his digestion. And you gave him good plain food such as we'd have ourselves. My gal, you are now addressing the new manager of the agency."

"Addressing him in his finest feathers," murmured Patsy, before all alarms were forgotten in a familiar close embrace.

Despised English Language
Francis Bacon, the famous philosopher, politician, scientist, and writer, who lived under Queen Elizabeth and James I, despised the English language, although his own clear, strong prose is perhaps the finest to which Elizabethan English ever reached. He wrote his most important books in Latin because he wanted them to be read by future generations, and he believed that the English language would die out and be forgotten. He even had some of his English writings translated into Latin for that reason.

Where Columbus Once Lived
One of the famous ancient monuments of Savona, Italy, is the Pancaldo tower, which overlooks the harbor and was built to guard it at night. In 1684 the tower was ornamented by a clock and a statue of the Madonna, the latter facing the sea. Close by one encounters a small square, the Piazza Colombo. On the right-hand side of this square, as one faces the harbor, stands a tall, narrow dwelling, with a tablet on its wall stating that Columbus lived here for many years.

Certain drugs are used to repair the heart; they dilate it, stretch fibers and restore efficiency.

Artesian Wells
Artesian wells are the ones in which the water rises above the point at which it is encountered. If the rise is enough to cause the water to flow over the top of the pipe a flowing well is the result. All flowing wells are artesian but not all artesian wells are flowing wells. Artesian water is usually good water although it is apt to be rather hard. Water from deep wells, unless they happen to be in limestone, is as pure as any ground water can be. Pure water is a relative term for all ground water naturally contains some foreign material which it has picked up in its passage through the soil and earth formations.

Philosophy and Religion
A little philosophy inclineth a man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion.—Francis Bacon.

Softball

ROOT'S VS. GNODTKE'S
(By John Schultz)
The softball season got under way Tuesday, May 24. The game started out to be a walk-away, but turned out to be a slugfest, the score being 12-11 in favor of Root's.

Gnodtke's put on a desperate rally in the last half of the seventh inning but it was stayed off with one run to tie. Root's led 12-4, going into the seventh inning, but Gnodtke's team thought it had gone far enough, so they combined hits, walks and errors to get seven runs. There was a man on third base when the last man to bat struck out.

Sherburn started on the mound for Root's, but was replaced by H. Rudlaff, who went until the seventh inning uprising. Sherburn then returned to the mound.

The game was featured by both teams combined scoring twenty-three runs and twenty hits. Each team had a big inning, Root's coming in the third, in which they got six runs, while Gnodtke's came in the seventh as mentioned above. Dunkleberg and Rudowski were new faces in Root's lineup.

J. Ellis twirled for the Gnodtke team, scattering twelve hits, but due to some bad support, he got into trouble.

Summary:
Root's 061 031 1 12 12 3
Gnodtke's 010 201 7 11 8 6
J. Sherburn, Rudlaff, and Stelter; J. Ellis and Penwell.

City Levy Set at 10 Mills Again

The annual tax levy was set at 10 mills at the annual budget meeting which was begun Thursday and concluded Monday evening. No action was taken on the petition for library support, but it was suggested by commission members that the project might receive attention in the form of an appropriation later. This will be the third successive year that the levy has stood at 10 mills.

Ancestry of Chow Dogs

Is Traced to Far North
The ancestry of the chow or chow-chow dog is traced to the dogs of the Far North and is said that this particular breed was kept by the Buddhist priests in Northern China. Stories are told of their edible qualities but from Chinese, states a writer in the Los Angeles Times, we have heard how this type of dog was kept as guard dogs, that the red specimens were classed as ordinary, the black as rare and allowed special privileges. They were fed a diet of rice and vegetables as the priests were noted vegetarians and as meat is the natural food for dogs it is believed that they would form bands and swoop down on the live stock of the near-by farms.

Naturally this created ill feeling toward all dogs and a certain number of them were destroyed. The scarcity of food in China and dire necessity no doubt forced many a native sacrifice a pet for the sake of his family but the Chinese do not eat dogs, this or any other breed.

In many parts of China they were used as a sled dog, also as a hunting dog, and as a result of some early training or instinct they have an uncanny ability of always finding their way. You never see a chow out alone with a lost look. Rather he trots along paying strictly to his own business (expecting you to do likewise) and they are master hands in crossing a street amid busy traffic. They have many peculiar characteristics unlike other breeds which extend to their physical conformation.
