THE GROWING VACATION HABIT

It is likely that this week that Buchanan people will pile up more mileage on vacations than in any other week in the history of the town.

It would not mean much, even if it were possible, to ascertain the mileage totaled by the numerous vacation travelers, but it is quite safe to say that the total would mount into figures of impressive, not to say astronomical magnitude. The summer vacation has been a growing institution for several years back, but the trend has received an immense impetus with the return of easier times and at the same time the necessity of the curtailment of workmen's hours.

Not only is it the regular thing to have a vacation, but it is assumed that the vacationer will do something about it. That is, he will not hoe the garden, or slouch about home but will range a field for a new environment, new scenes, new ideas.

Even an estimate is obviously impossible, but we will risk a guess that in the current month, at least 500 Buchanan people have ranged afield on trips amounting anywhere from several hundred to several thousand miles. Twenty years and more ago a casual exodus of that magnitude would have been astounding. Now it is the ordinary thing. But a very admirable thing, on the whole.

ADVERTISE BUCHANAN

Residents of Buchanan and vicinity are again reminded that a handsome Buchanan booklet was recently issued under the auspices of the local Lions club, advertising the resources, the industries, and the residential, farming and recreational advantages of the community.

Headquarters for distribution is at the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance company with John Kobe in charge. It is the purpose of the club to get these booklets out where they will do the most good. The booklets are given free to anyone interested. If you want one or if you know of anyone else who might be interested, do not hesitate to call for as many as you can distribute to advantage.

The booklets are 8x9 inches in dimension and are intended to be doubled once and inserted as a folder in a large-size business envelope. Folded the long way they are 4x9 inches in dimension and fit very snugly into a No. 10 envelope.

The books are no good to anyone lying in bundles. They are handsomely illustrated and printed, and very creditably advertise the town. Help distribute them.

of them kept cows or sheep or hogs. In seasonal industries the workmen followed other occupations during the dull months. Many of them had small farms of their own, or they worked on other people's farms. They all had sidelines. Perhaps they were loggers in winter and factory hands in summer. Somehow they kept themselves profitably occupied through the year around. Industrial employment was to them in much the same position as a cash crop to the farmer who uses most of his produce for the subsistence of his family and live stock. Their wages paid for those necessities and luxuries which they were unable to produce for themselves.

Such a mode of living has not been made possible by the industrialization of our country. It only seems so because industry has tended to centralize manufacturing plants in large cities so that people have moved to town to earn factory wages. Uproot a man from the soil, move him into a great city, and he becomes wholly dependent upon others. He can earn a living in the city only when someone will give him a job at which he can earn wages. When general business conditions throw him out of a job, he is practically helpless. So he naturally gravitates to charity. He is used to depending on others for his living, he has lost his self-dependence. That is, he has lost all of the strong elements of character which built our nation. Our first natural wealth is men. It behooves us to consider what progress does to our people.

Now, the first big point that should interest you as citizens and home owners is an industrialized center such as this is that among the employes of the early American village there was no destitution. They had a double security, the shop and the land. The city dweller of today has only the shop.

If you as you visit the village will comprehend that we are not trying to show merely a fine collection of antiques to amuse the public, but rather are pointing how the population of this country lived and prospered during the days when we were building to our present scale of living, you will have our point of view. Once the perceiving visitor comprehends the basic idea, his or her mind will grasp the connection between the past and the present and project it into the future.

This is really the only reason Greenfield Village exists, to give us a sense of unity with our people through the generations, and to convey the inspiration of American genius to our young men and women. As a nation we have not depended so much on rare or occasional genius as on the general resourcefulness of our people. That is our true genius, and we are hoping that in the final purpose Greenfield Village will serve that.

When is a Laborer Worthy of His Hire?

A man may get the wages he thinks he ought to have, and enjoy short hours and the most ideal working conditions. But, unless he lays aside part of what he earns, for the future comfort and security of himself and his family, he must be classed as a laborer unworthy of his hire. In other words, the earnest efforts made through the years to better his conditions, will have been wasted upon him. For after all, there is no real substitute for individual thrift and common sense.

TIGHT-WADDING IT THRU EUROPE

There was no other work at Liverpool and they had to go to sea. It is a deadly monotonous life especially for a young fellow—long hours, low pay, no time for enjoyment, no girls or pleasant social contacts. Once they failed to grab the first ship job they could get, they landed "on the rates" as relief is known there—and then they are signed up by the authorities on the first ship out with no choice of job.

Seasickness
It's rather funny but the first question most people ask of one returned from an overseas trip is: "Did you get seasick?"

And they ask it with a sort of gleeful anticipation that leads you to think that they hope you were and it served you right.

Well, I was seasick one day, and speaking from the lofty heights of that experience I can say that being seasick is bad enough but it is nothing to stay home on account of. In fact as a peril of travel it is vastly overrated. According to my experience and the stories of the sailors it is really more of a mental than a physical hazard.

In other words, a lively anticipation of being seasick is quite likely to bring it on, while a determined effort to avoid it will either aid you in going free or at least enable you to get over it in short order.

Seasickness is only a violent order of nausea that attacks suddenly, usually in very rough weather. I was coming home, the first night out of Glasgow, when a violent gale struck off the north coast of Ireland. I will call it violent because the sailors said it was. On the trip over to Gothenberg, Sweden we struck some rough weather in the North sea but the sailors said it was only so-so.

But this time I got seasick I was down below watching the passengers dance to the strains of an improvised orchestra. I had just been on deck enjoying the sight of the big waves, which is in itself an invitation to seasickness. As the boat rocked harder some of the dancers began to falter.

The sailors laughed as they staggered off the scene, and I, as a hardy old seadog, was enjoying it too, when suddenly everything became terribly, terribly uncertain and in my turn I staggered off, or rather plunged, in a race for the rail, where I arrived in time. The sensation of seasickness is not like of ordinary nausea. Your diaphragm works upward with a collapsible effect that reminded me of the accordions or "dragspielas" which you see and hear everywhere in rural Scandinavia. In fact if I had had a musical attachment at the time I should doubtless have rendered "A Life on the Ocean Wave" with variations. You can feel your interior workings flapping against each other violently.

There are always a lot around, sympathetic or otherwise, who offer sure remedies. Among those offered me were:

Don't touch a drop of water. Drink all the water you can. Go to your berth and lie down. Stay on deck and on your feet and you will fight it off.

Don't eat much. Keep your stomach full. Get some medicine from the ship doctor to settle you. No medicine will do you any good.

Speaking again from the pedestal of experience, I will say that the advice to stay on deck and to eat and drink whether you retain it or not was the ship doctor's advice and it worked. Speaking of meals, I missed only one and lost only one. In 18 hours I was over it, while the passengers who went to bed remained there several days, in some cases until the boat docked at Montreal.

It would seem that observance of the following rules will help in avoiding the malady:

Don't think about it. If the weather is rough, remain on deck and get the air but keep your eyes off the water.

Keep eating but be careful what. The Swedish hardtack, or "knecke" bread, which may be bought in Buchanan stores, combined with the salt fish appetizers available on Scandinavian ships are an excellent diet.

If you show a tendency to get sick, keep on deck and move about. If you get too sick to move about, sit down, but stay on deck. If the other passengers don't like it let them go below.

I hope that satisfies every one's curiosity about seasickness. Any one that passes up a chance for a trip because of fear is foolish. One man reeled onto the boat from an operating table, having undergone his second operation in three weeks, but I saw him sitting on a deck chair in the roughest weather and he came off the boat greatly improved. Ocean travel in the summer months at least is far safer than automobile travel in Michigan. If I appeared indelicate

In any way in the above discussion of "Mal d' mere" I'm sorry. A lot of people asked for it.

CHANGES ARE MADE AT MOUNT VERNON

Alterations Result of Research Among Records.

Washington, D. C. — Mount Vernon, home of George Washington near the national capital, has a new superintendent, the fourth since the Mount Vernon Ladies' association took over the care and upkeep of the famous shrine in 1883. Following the recent death of Colonel Harrison H. Dodge, the Ladies' association elected Charles Cecil Wall, former assistant superintendent, to take charge.

"Numerous changes and restorations have taken place at Mount Vernon in recent years," says the National Geographic society.

"Many of the alterations, the new superintendent points out were made as a result of extensive research work among records, letters and other documents found both in this country and abroad. As a result the Mansion House and its adjacent buildings and gardens are today more nearly as they were in Washington's time than when the Ladies' association took over the neglected estate. This organization, founded 70 years ago, by Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham of South Carolina, is chartered by the state of Virginia. Its officers serve without pay.

"Because the vast proportion of Mt. Vernon's thousands of annual visitors come by motor car, the federal government and the state of Virginia have each constructed trunk highways to take care of the heavy tourist traffic.

Wall Protects Estate.
"Facing the circular plaza, but outside the gates, are lunch rooms, and souvenir shops, housed in buildings whose colonial architecture harmonizes with the rest of the estate. There is also an outdoor cafe. Parking spaces for cars and busses are partially concealed by shrubbery and trees.

"A high brick wall, which was not a feature of the plantation in Washington's day, but was erected to protect it today, encircles almost the entire estate.
"Perhaps the most conspicuous change in the Mansion House itself is the removal of the white railing above the roof of the portico on the east, or Potomac, front. Study of several ancient drawings and paintings of the mansion, some of which have only recently come to light, revealed that the railing did not appear on any pictures prior to 1839, and therefore the railing must not have been a feature of the house during Washington's lifetime. Consequently it has been taken down.

"Another restoration, of particular interest to landscape architects, is the kitchen garden along the south side of the bowling green. This sloping plot of land was laid out by Washington in terrace style, an interesting example of Eighteenth century design. Growing in the garden now are old herbs, vegetables and fruits mentioned in Washington's farm accounts.

"The old brick barn has a new roof, a shingling job completed this spring.

Relics Returned.

"Visitors may now peek into the tiny building at the west end of the flower garden believed to have been used by the Curtis children and their tutor as a school house. This red-roofed octagonal structure was, until recently, used as a tool house.

"Some authentic relics recently returned to the estate for display in the mansion or in the small museum near the spinning house are: Mrs. Washington's French writing desk, a knee-hole dressing table, a stool with Mrs. Washington's initials on it, the original bronze cannon used by George Washington to salute vessels sailing up the Potomac, and a quaint lacquer mirror.

"Entirely concealed from visitors' eyes is one of the most remarkable bits of restoration work undertaken in connection with the preservation of the mansion. Some time ago it was discovered that the heavy wooden beams supporting the roof and ceiling above the banquet hall were showing signs of sagging. From a narrow third floor trapdoor, workmen were able to brace the ancient timbers with iron plates and heavy bolts, so that they now are as strong as new. So carefully did they do their work that the brittle plaster of the wide ceiling below was not damaged in the least.

"Mount Vernon now is open every day in the year, but only in recent years has it been open on Sundays."

Popular Ballad

Undoubtedly America's most popular ballad was "Frankie and Johnnie." During the latter part of the Nineteenth century, says Collier's Weekly, this simple song, despite its theme, attained such widespread fame that more than 300 variations of it were sung from coast to coast. This number equals, possibly exceeds, the total of all extant original ballads in the English language.

Imperial Valley Rainfall

The Imperial valley has an annual rainfall of a little over 4 inches, so that it is a desert country. It is irrigated from the Colorado river.

DAM WILL SWALLOW EXPENSIVE BRIDGE

Concrete to Cover Span Built at Grand Coulee.

Washington. — Completion of a $500,000 steel bridge across the Columbia river at the site of the Grand Coulee dam, which will serve its purpose and disappear beneath tons of concrete within six months, was reported to Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the Interior, by John C. Page, commissioner of reclamation.

The bridge is 3,000 feet long and 175 feet high and contains 7,000 tons of steel. Three standard-gauge railroad tracks cross the bridge, which extends from the two great concrete mixing plants at the west and east abutments. It is one of the busiest bridges in the world, since a relay of trains are moving back and forth across it continuously, hauling concrete in four-cubic-yard buckets for placement in the dam. Already nearly 6,000,000 tons of concrete has been handled by cranes which move about on the bridge to serve the workmen far below.

Despite the fact that the bridge cost more than $500,000 and will be swallowed up in the concrete of the dam, its construction was justified with the explanation that it is the most efficient means devised, and less expensive than any other method proposed, for placing the enormous yardage of concrete required over the dam foundation area, which is 500 feet wide and 3,000 feet long.

From the high bridge, cranes swing buckets loaded with eleven tons of concrete to any point within a strip 125 feet wide across the river.

Try Kindness in Reform

School in Pennsylvania

Hunington, Pa. — John D. Pennington, Pennsylvania's welfare secretary, has announced that the experimental stage of his "philosophy of constructive friendship without indulgence" at the Pennsylvania Industrial School for Boys is completed and that the practice will be made permanent.

The plan, begun by Pennington, a retired naval officer and former federal prohibition administrator, included elimination of dungeons, where inmates were sent, often for petty offenses, solitary cells, "short" diets, long work periods and hard labor chores.

Inmates, instead, were prompted to reduce sentences and gain extra credits in merit ratings through study and conduct. Guards were instructed to promote friendship among the boys, act less harshly in criticism and permit more association of inmates among themselves.

The new system has attracted nationwide attention of crime students and penologists.

Mistake in Seed Wheat

Costs Matanuska's Crop

Palmer, Alaska.—Matanuska colonists, farming the government's most ambitious resettlement project, figured they had lost a year's work.

All seed wheat bought by the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation corporation, governing body of the colony, for re-sale to the Matanuska pioneers, was found to be winter instead of spring wheat.

Already planted, it will not produce until next year. A shortage of feed for an estimated 50,000 chickens and several large flocks of geese, ducks and turkeys was feared.

The situation was further complicated by the fact that much of the wheat was planted on land rented or this year only. Since the wheat will not produce until next year, some colonists raised the question of who will be entitled to the crop.

Virginia City Without

Taxes Keeps Costs Down

Bedford, Va.—This Virginia town of 4,000 population, which recently celebrated its eightieth birthday, has established a widespread reputation as a city without taxes.

Since early in 1935, citizens of Bedford have paid no local tax assessments whatever. Civic leaders attribute this to sustained good civic management.

Under its present budget, the municipally-owned light and water plants pay the cost of government, and in addition permit regular contributions toward retirement of the city's bonds, an obligation that has been cut almost in half during the past seven years.

Bedford's operating expenses have shown no increase during the last 10 years. The city is governed by a mayor and eight councilmen elected from among its citizens, most of whom are woolen mill or tin can factory workers. A city manager works directly under the mayor.

Reminders

Romeo, Mich.—In the barn at the home of William N. Gray here are a score or more of turkey feet. They are all that are left of the wild turkeys which Gray killed as a youth 70 years ago.

Cows Air-Cooled

Fremont, Neb. — Air-conditioned cow barns are being introduced in Nebraska, where 100-degree heat is common in summer.

White nurses moved quietly through the corridors, stretchers with human cargo were rolled in and out, and a new picture, "Between Two Women," was launched at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan and Virginia Bruce heading an important cast. OBITUARY—ELLIS CLARK
Ellis H. Clark, 87, a resident of Buchanan for over half a century, died Thursday morning, August 19, at 11:55 o'clock.

He was born January 29, 1850, in Michigan, the son of Charles and Fanny Weaver Clark. In his earlier life he was in the lumber business in Arkansas and Florida. He came to Buchanan about 60 years ago.

He was married to Lillie Elsie Roe on September 25, 1874. They had four children, two of whom died in early infancy. Mrs. Clark died in 1924.

Ellis Clark was a life member of the Buchanan Masonic lodge. His father, Charles, was a prominent Buchanan citizen and built the brick home on the corner of Clark and Front St. now occupied by the Swen Funeral Home. Clark Street was named after the senior Clark.

Surviving are the two sons, Arlin of Buchanan and John of Chicago. Services were held Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Hamilton Funeral Home, the Rev. Thomas Rice officiating. The Masons held a lodge ritualistic ceremonies at the grave. Burial was in a family lot in Oak Ridge cemetery.

See Quints and Papa Dionne
Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Strayer and sons, John, Robert and Bill, arrived home during the week-end from a two weeks vacation trip in Canada and the eastern States, having visited at the home of the famed Dionne quintuplets at Calender, Can., during the trip. "My men folks were terribly disgusted over going there to see the quintuplets," said Mrs. Strayer, "but before they got away they were as interested as I was."

Exhibit A is, of course, the quintuplets. Several thousand people visit them daily at the morning hours when visits are permitted. The sightseers arrive early to be in line, and when inspection starts they march five and six abreast around an oval walk where they can see the quintuplets in their play-ground. The wall between the visitors and the playgrounds is so admirably equipped with special glass and soundproof effects that the visitors can both see and hear the quintuplets and their nurses, but the latter cannot see or hear the visitors. Exhibit B is, of course, nobody but Papa Dionne, who spends his time autographing postcards at 25 cents a throw, signing hundreds daily. From being a poor backwoods Canadian Papa Dionne has attained an affluence which his appearance now plainly reflects. Mamma Dionne is much more retiring and remains in her home, refusing to appear for visitors.

WORLD'S GREATEST BARGAIN!

THE greatest bargain of all is the sight-saving, time-saving, labor-saving commodity we call electricity. Despite constantly increasing costs and the importance of higher and higher taxes our rates have steadily declined. The "light bill" of the average home on our lines is no longer that. It is an electric service bill for light, for washing and ironing, for radio entertainment, for house cleaning. In hundreds of homes it also includes automatic cooking and automatic hot water.

Today the average customer pays 45% less per unit (the kilowatt-hour) than he paid ten years ago. Ten years ago his bill was mainly for light—today he receives all these additional services and yet his total bill has not increased appreciably. Truly, Electricity is the World's Greatest Bargain.
