Maroons Trample South Bend 11

Will Undergo Acid Test in Clash with South Haven Saturday

The Buchanan "Fighting Bucks" defeated the Central Catholic eleven from South Bend, Friday afternoon, 28-0. The Bucks now have run their winning streak to four games. After tying Water-vliet, they have waded through Cassopolis, Paw Paw, Niles and Central Catholic of South Bend. This week they meet the strong South Haven eleven on the home field.

The Bucks used the first quarter Friday to warm up for the rest of the game. In the second quarter they cut loose with two touchdowns. A 60 yard drive netted them their first touchdown, climaxed by a forward-lateral pass going for Letter to Simpson to Smith. This play netted them 23 yards and a touchdown. Smith's kick from placement was good. Score Buchanan 7 Central Catholic 0.

They scored again in this quarter when "Pep" Trapp, snake-hipped Senior halfback, ran 48 yards for a touchdown. After an exchange of punts Smith called a double reverse to the left; this gave the ball to Trapp who went through a hole at tackle, cut for the sidelines and raced to the score. Three men dove for him at the 16 yard line, but he ducked and they came up with only the helmet belonging to Mr. Trapp. Smith's place kick again sailed through the uprights. The score was then Buchanan 14, Central Catholic 0. The half ended with the score 14-0 in the Bucks' favor.

A Buck march was stopped at the start of the second half. They lost the ball when Beck punted. Central Catholic tried three times to get the Maroon line but they ended back further than they were when they started their series of plays, so they punted to their own 45 yard line where Donley returned it to the opponent's 35 yard line. A march of 35 yards to the goal gave the Bucks their third touchdown. Stevens went over from the one foot line. Smith's kick again was good making the score; Buchanan 21, Central Catholic 0.

In the last quarter the Bucks started a drive from their own 45 yard line that ended when Lyons, sub halfback, scored from the two yard line. Smith again booted the ball from placement for the extra point. The score was then Buchanan 28, Central Catholic 0. The Bucks were again knocking at the door of the goal line when the game ended. They were on the Catholic's 3 yard line when the gun went off.

Kuminez, Central right half, bore the brunt of the Hoosier attack with his sparkling offensive and defensive play.

Bucks to Meet South Haven The Bucks, undefeated eleven will meet the strong South Haven Saturday, October 30. The game will be played on the home field at 2:30 o'clock. Comparing scores the Havenites defeated Paw Paw 19-0, and the Bucks beat them 35-0. That shows that we're in for a real test Saturday. They have a great defense and should give Buchanan a good game. The Bucks will be out for victory number 5, while the Havenites will be out to break the winning streak of the Bucks.

As reporters we wish to make a correction. We put in last week Record that the Bucks would play St. Hedwig Saturday, October (Continued on Page 6)

Fish, Rizer, Carter Knew All Answers

The Buchanan Lions club celebrated the initiation of Cubs E. C. Fish, Earl Rizer and Claude Carter in one of the wildest and most wild sessions in the annals of the club at D's Cafe a week ago Wednesday. The initiates were placed in a woven wire cage in a corner of the banquet room and received their nutrition through the wires. After their release they were put through searching examination by A. J. George of the committee in charge, and proved that they knew all the answers. Last night the sole surviving charter members of the organization tottered to the meeting and gave reminiscences of pioneer days.

John I. Rough Has 81st Birthday

John I. Rough, pioneer of Portage Prairie, was 81 years old Oct. 20 and that makes him old enough to remember the days when there were elephants on Portage Prairie. At least he can remember when the old road shows used to travel by wagon along the old Chicago trail, the smaller and fiercer animals in cages and the elephants and camels on foot, while he and the other small fry of that day lined up along the rail fences on the opposite side. That was in the days when the old road was thick with the white-topped prairie schooners. He is also old enough to have spanned complete the days from wagon to automobile, and clear through the whole of the horse and buggy days of Portage Prairie.

The games will be different, including a scavenger hunt if enough participants will enter. The refreshments will be different, consisting of—better let you find out for yourselves. The finances are different, too. Mr. Moore will advance the expense money, so, you see, it is an intended social success.

Tight-Wadding It Through Europe

By HAWES CHAPTER IX As I fared along through strange lands it was my custom to collect hotel and restaurant menus, receipts, railway folders, tourist literature, newspapers and such items with the idea that they would be nice mementoes and convenient to refer to. But as a result it would be harder and harder to get my one and only alligator bag shut, when it became necessary to get on it with both knees to shut it, I would take out my various souvenirs and shuck them. In the course of several sessions of souvenir-shucking I discarded a lot of papers that would come in handy in writing this article. Then there was that matter I previously referred to—the notebook I lost on the Berlin-Paris train. In it were a number of notes descriptive of old Norwegian houses. So it's mainly a matter of touring Down Memory Lane in writing this article. But to the end of my life, few days will be etched more deeply on my memory than this one day in Norway, rolling up the Gudbrandsdal Valley and on the side railway from Dombas to Andalsnes and back. Nobody could tell me why it was that the Norwegians were able to farm steep hillsides from year to year without the erosion we have in America. Yet there were entire farms which lay on what we would call mountain sides, and they would have great houses and barns that would do credit to the richest lands of America. I remember distinctly one farm perched hundreds of feet up the mountain, which had a great barn with ten windows on a side. I estimated that each window and the space between it and the window took up from 12 to 15 feet, which would make a structure from 120 to 150 feet long. The house was of proportioning Down Memory Lane in writing this article. (Continued on page 6.)

To Open Library During Nov. 15-20

State Worker Advises on Set-Up in Commission Room

If plans set in motion in the past week are carried out on schedule Buchanan will celebrate National Book Week, Nov. 15-20 inclusive, in a most unique way with the opening of the renovated library and reading room during that time.

Mrs. Constance Bement, head of the extension department of the state library, was here Wednesday and Thursday, conferring with the library board and checking the old books. At the request of the board she checked the old library, culling out the books which were considered not worth shelf room in point of use. She also recommended an economical investment in equipment, including a five-tray card catalogue cabinet and the requisite card equipment for adequate filing.

The shelves and books were transferred from the clerk's office to the commission room, which is to be fitted as the reading room. Plans were also made for submission of magazine lists to organizations which pledged subscriptions. It is planned to use borrowed tables until the manual training department has time to make the furniture.

DRIFTING BACK

There's an old saying to the effect that "you can take the boy out of the country but you can't take the country out of the boy" which is illustrated by the interest of city people in buying farms and country places in the Buchanan district.

Although the demand for farm properties by city people is rather quiet right now, a man in a good position to know counted 40 farms which had changed hands in the past two or three years, mostly going to Chicago buyers. It may be that the changes have been on the whole good for the district. For the city man who buys usually has a genuine interest in the place, while the seller may be some one who wishes to change his work. The drift on the part of many farmers has been to the factory, exchanging the uncertain rewards of agriculture for the comparative regularity of a pay check. This may have benefited the worker but it has been a very distinct liability to the farm.

Many of the city buyers have had an eye to the development of their places as a home where they will ultimately retire. In many cases they have had means to develop them handsomely. Such development has provided quite a local market for labor and materials. It points to a major future possibility in this community.

FOR LIBRARY SUPPORT

The advocates of a modernized library for Buchanan have been working lately in high hopes of building up an institution which might fill a real need in the lives not only of young people but eventually of the entire community.

The funds available are limited but, everything considered, there is enough for the backers of the project to demonstrate what they can do in the way of arousing public interest. It seems likely at this juncture that the city commission allowed a just appropriation for a project which has perhaps a tinge of the experimental. The sole uncertainty in the venture is that of a unified public support. It is very necessary that all who are interested in any way good naturedly bridge over any differences that may arise and sink themselves for the good of the work.

While the appropriation was sufficient, it is hardly a burdensome one for the community. It approximates roughly a quarter of a mill. The tax burden on you will approximate 25 cents for every $1,000 of property assessment.

No one in the city will be ruined by the library tax. On the other hand it may be one of the factors that will tend to divert youth into wholesome channels of thought and endeavor.

126 NEW LAWS

The Michigan Legislature enacted considerably more than 100 new laws affecting the people of the state, and 126 of these will go into effect during October.

Going on the statute books October 29th, is the Fair Trade Act, which permits contracts between buyers and sellers of merchandise for maintaining resale prices. This is not a "must" law, but a "may" law—that is, manufacturers may make such contracts with their distributors, but they do not have to do so.

Automobile license plates will hereafter be renewable on March 1st instead of January 1st, and the time may not be extended.

Truck drivers may work no more than twelve hours consecutively.

Pre-Nuptial Physical examination for venereal diseases, becomes compulsory.

Basic Science Law requires all medical healers to pass a state examination in basic sciences.

Workmen's Compensation is extended to workers having so-called occupational diseases.

Secret primary ballots are now specified, so that voters do not have to divulge their party affiliations.

Civil Rights Law enforces equal rights of all persons regardless of race, in public places such as restaurants, hotels, theatres.

Acts becoming effective January 1st, include State Civil Service, and State Welfare Reorganization.

Trick aviation over populated sections is prohibited.

A "Use Tax" is designed to catch merchandise shipped in from out of state, which escapes state sales tax.

Tax title buyers are limited to 10% profit.

Exemption from jury service is further restricted.

The fee for non-resident hunters is increased.

Bombing or placing explosives with intent to destroy, becomes a felony.

Municipal judges may solemnize marriage anywhere in their own counties.

Boards of education may furnish free text books to needy pupils.

Uniform state highway traffic signs provided for.

Many other acts go on the books, but this list touches the high spots of most of those which affect the public most directly.

Suggestion To You

Perhaps you have certain financial obligations which you are well able to meet within the course of a year, but the inconvenient dates on which some of them fall due make it hard for you to systematize your affairs.

If you are a responsible person with a steady income, a Personal Loan might be the best answer to your problem. You could then pay off at once your various small obligations, and repay us on a simple orderly monthly schedule which would cause you no inconvenience whatsoever. Central West Is Represented In Cast of "Stan"

The tractor plowing contest and other farm and rural scenes featured in the new Hollywood movie "Stan," are familiar to many of the actors and actresses who take leading roles in this film.

Robert Armstrong, who plays the part of "Stan," an agent of the Standard Oil Company in the town of "Prairie View," hails from Saginaw, Michigan.

Kermit Maynard, who plays the part of "Burt" in the picture, is well known as a "tough guy" of the films and is the brother of Ken Maynard, noted actor in "Westerns." He was born in Mission, Texas, but spent his school days in Indiana and won his letter on the State University football team.

"Sally" Is From Arkansas Peggy Shannon, who plays opposite Robert Armstrong as "Sally" in the motion picture is a native of Jine Bluff, Arkansas, and spent her girlhood there before being "discovered" by the "Great Ziegfeld" and given a place in the "Follies."

Marshall Ruth, the hero of the tractor plowing contest in "Stan," comes from Marshalltown, Iowa, where his father was for many years in the petroleum business, at one time being associated with the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

The story upon which "Stan" was based was written by Homer Croly, the well known novelist, who is a native of Maryville, Missouri. While the author ordinarily does his work in New York and Hollywood, he spent some weeks in the Central West gathering material for "Stan," during which time he visited several communities similar to "Prairie View," which is to be shown at the Clark Theatre in Buchanan on the evening of Monday, Nov. 1, starting at 8 p. m.

Boy Scout Council Sponsors Halloween Overnight at Camp

Announcement is made this morning by the Area headquarters that the Council sponsor a Halloween overnight party to be held at Camp Madron on October 29th and 30th. The plans call for troop registration at the camp at 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon. Immediately after the camp is set up the boys will prepare their supper. In the evening many stunts pertaining to the Halloween set-up will be participated in. It is understood that the rope hike through the woods will take them past the places where ghosts, etc. are holding forth. A big camp fire later in the evening will also bring out many of the Halloween traditions.

On Saturday morning the plans call for an inspection of the troop camp, a rating of the food cooked for breakfast, and proper recognition of the winners. Immediately after the morning meal Scouting stunts, as well as athletic events will be held on the athletic field. Sea Scouts attending will have sailing races on the lake, and for those who do not take part in the special activity, will have the pleasure of taking a real treasure hunt through the woods. At 11 o'clock all Scouts will compete in the biscuit baking contest, and those who complete the process and exhibit "eatable biscuits" will use these biscuits as a ticket for a big bean feed in the dining hall. Those who cannot bake the proper biscuits will have to pay for their dinner. Enthusiasm is running high already on this event, and the Council no doubt will have to furnish plenty of beans to make good its promise. In the afternoon final sailing races will be held and sports will be competitive. The program will close at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Carl Wood, Field Executive of Berrien County and Mr. H. J. Hunt, Field Executive of Cass County, will be in charge of this program. They will be assisted by the different commissioners of the Area.

The boys attending this particular outing will be taught the art of camping at this time of the year so that they will be most comfortable—if for any reason the weather is not suitable for the outdoor program the Upton hall will be opened for sleeping quarters as well as the program. This spacious hall, together with its large fireplace and many side rooms, will be adequate to take care of the group. It is hoped, however, that everything can be handled outside so that the "out" in Scouting may be practiced.

Pewter Candle Molds Pewter candle molds came into use about 1760 or 1770 and continued to be used extensively until about 50 years ago. Previously the common method of making candles was by dipping the tallow-coated wick until successive layers had brought the candle to the desired thickness.

All set? listen: HERE'S THE ENGINEERING MUST STORY OF THE YEAR!

Featuring the DYNAFLASH ENGINE and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING — in the Most Modern Chassis in the World

You won't drive a hundred yards in a new Buick without realizing that something marvelously new and different is happening here. It's something that happens in no other car, in no other engine. Speeding through the intake manifold, the fuel charge hurries into the cylinder at something like 250 miles an hour. Leaping to meet it is the piston, with a unique device called a Turbulator built into its face. Then occurs something more than high compression—literally cyclompression—as swirling gasoline vapor is compacted about the spark plug. The spark sets off a fist-size hurricane—and gasoline gives up more performance than it ever gave up in a commercial engine before! This livelier, smarter power might seem enough for engineers to lavish on a car in a single year. But matching DYNAFLASH power in importance is Buick TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING and its arrolite ride. Take a Buick over a railroad crossing—around a curve—over bumps. There's no thud and chatter, no tail-swing or roll; you cover rough going with the silk-smoothness of a panther on the prowl.

All because old-type leaf springs are gone! In their place, each wheel has a soft, shock-smothering cushion of stout coiled steel. Skid risks are blessedly reduced. Rear tires last longer. The whole car handles more easily! That's TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING at work! If it's power you're after, you'll want Buick's DYNAFLASH engine. If it's comfort, you'll choose the TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING ride. With either you get the other—plus half a score of features your Buick dealer is waiting to describe. See him now—for the engineering "must" story of the year!

"Better buy Buick!"

TIGHTWADDING IT THROUGH EUROPE

had sod roofs with grass, even shrubs, growing on top. Later in the evening I had some time to spend at Dombas and examined several inches of earth laid on birch bark, and the grass grew surface, Queerest of all to alien eyes are those store houses set several feet above the ground on sort of still-like legs, with wide eaves, and sometimes an inset in the log sides—the upper story projecting beyond the lower. I received varying explanations of these stilted buildings—that they were set that way to be free from incursions of bears and mountain animals, and that they were that way to protect them from mice.

Even more interesting than the buildings were the people. That day I passed through the friendliest country side I ever saw. If they were stiff in Oslo they were decidedly the opposite in the heart of old Norway, from my observation. Everywhere the people came out on the porch, into the yard, or paused at their work to watch the train go by and everywhere they waved their hands. On both sides of the car everybody waved back. It was a sort of ceremony generally observed. We made a number of stops at the larger towns, of sufficient length to get lunches at the counters in the railway stations, and there I came to appreciate the sandwiches perhaps because of the smiling Norwegian women who served them. There was a cheerful friendliness at these lunch counters that warmed your heart as much as the excellent Scandinavian coffee warmed other parts of the interior. I threw economy to the winds and had a pot of coffee and a new sort of sandwich at every stop.

From the train windows I watched the hillsides, farmed where not too steep, and clothed elsewhere with green-black pines. Everywhere it seemed, where the hillside leveled off to permit any sort of foothold, there would be a patch of cultivation or more likely a mountain pasture.

When I was not talking to my now social and friendly train companions I had one ear open for their talk between themselves. If the stress on consonants and r's makes the Norwegian tongue seem sometimes rather guttural from the lips of a man, it becomes the most musical language I have ever heard from a good-quality soprano voice. It was a source of never-failing pleasure to hear the two Norwegian girls talk their own tongue to each other. They chirped their r's and consonants until their talk resembled nothing else so much as a pleasant sound of sparrows twittering under the eaves, that sort of conversation you hear birds holding half talk and half song.

Along afternoon we came to the junction, Dombas, where according to the instructions of my young interpreter I would "have to place myself in another wagon." But if I did not understand my itinerary there was no longer any danger of my getting lost. There was a stir of interest in the compartment as we slowed down and the man across the aisle who spoke the best English motioned me to follow him. He took my ticket, instructed the station agent, and put me on my car. And much to my pleasure, most of the other passengers in the compartment got on the little fish railway train, in the same compartment again.

Anyway there was the middle-aged hiker, my interpreter and his wife, the two girls and the woman who gave me her sandwiches, and her mother. The last two were to get off a couple of stations or so above Dombas on the side railway. Through interpreters the younger woman told me that their home section was in a very high altitude and there was not much rainfall in the summer. As a result they had built rows of snowfences at short distances apart through the fields to catch the winter snows driven by the hard winds. Soon we entered this region, laying high toward the top of the main peninsula range, with almost timber-line vegetation. I would estimate now that the rows of snow fences in the fields were often as close as 75 to 100 feet together.

The train slowed down at their station—I cannot remember the name of it—and the lady and her mother got off, not without friendly hand-shakes and hand-waves from the platform. On we went higher and higher and then we started down the other side of the hills toward the western coast, through the mountain valley and fjord which were our scenic destination. I want to say that nothing I will write hereafter will convey anything like an adequate description of the immemorial beauty of that ride. Afterward I checked on the description which experienced travelers gave of that valley and their descriptions were replete with such phrases as "the most beautiful valley in Europe," "more waterfalls in a given distance than in any other known place," and the like.

As we started down the divide, we dropped of course into a canyon the train running down beside a constantly-growing river, that boiled in green-white caissons below us, now close below the track, now several hundred feet below. We swung over a great stone bridge, with an immense arch, 190 feet, if I remember, above the boiling river below. Then the waterfalls began. I remember that the others in the car were as eager and enthusiastic as I—but never so enthusiastic that they forgot to see that I had a preferred position to watch from. As the canyon walls closed in beside us and the walls towered higher and higher above, one waterfall after another tumbled from great heights into the narrow valley.

These Norwegian cars must be well-balanced for in our compartment we all rushed first to one side of the car and then to the other, as new scenes appeared each one more lovely than the last. We would have our faces glued to one side of the car when there would be an exclamation from the other side and every one would rush across. But each time some one drew back and motioned me into a place next to a window. It was courtesy par excellence, de-lux, and ne ultra plus. But I think perhaps that a little of it was due to the fact that I demonstrated a lively interest in their loved hills.

For the Norwegian is in a way, the proudest, the most patriotic individual I ever saw. Though he no longer has an opportunity to demonstrate his patriotism by jingoism and sword rattling, he nevertheless loves his country, bleak, and barren for the most part but beautiful, and warm and friendly in the valleys. Almost every home had a tall flag pole and many of them bore flags that day. It was my impression that the Norwegian would flunk to no nation or nationality—and that he does not care whether tourists come or not—very much at least. But if the tourist shows a proper appreciation of Norway he will receive a royal courtesy. I should add that Norwegian cars I saw in Sweden flew the Norwegian flag. Although there were doubtless caacs of many nationalities there, including Americans, only Norwegian automobiles flew the colors, as far as I noticed.

But this is getting off the track. I'm still in a railway coach reeling dizzily along ledges through "the most beautiful valley in Europe" and, I have no doubt through one of the most beautiful in the world. We went through a tunnel which I was told later made a complete circle inside of the hill and came out near the point of entrance. We passed Verma falls, which divides in three parts on the way down, the train passing on a trestle across the rapids at the base of one division. After that there was waterfall after waterfall.

There's the old jest to the effect that the automobile tourist is not content these days to drive all day to see a waterfall—he wants about 15 waterfalls to the gallon. Well, he could see a lot more in this valley. On one great mountain that "reared its awful head," 4,000 feet at an estimate above the valley floor, a face of rock perhaps mile and a half or so long, I counted 14 waterfalls. I say 4,000 feet because we were approaching the fjord which runs back in the hills from sea level and the mountains rose sheer from sea level there 5,000 and 6,000 feet high. The tourist guide I had gotten in Oslo said the highest of the large falls was 2,700 feet in descent.

But a part of these fourteen falls plunged from far greater heights, dashing in mists of spray and many of them finally disappearing in the air, with no trace of water at the base.

Most beautiful perhaps was Bridal Veil falls. As we approached the fjord inlet the rock walls had closed together until they almost seemed to touch over our heads. I could not have picked a better time to see the canyon for the westerling sun, still several hours from sunset at about 6 p. m. (18 o'clock by Norwegian computation) shone up the narrow canyon and turned the milky-white falls to a pearly silver. Bridal Veil falls occurs where a considerable stream plunges perhaps 2,000 feet over a sheer rock wall. It is on the right-hand or north side of the canyon and it seems to me that it is seen just after the train emerges from a narrow gap and the hills circle back. Anyway it can be seen for some distance after we passed it.

The stream fell in mid-air like a column of liquid mercury, withing, swinging, weaving it seemed—sometimes the column of water was not continuous but fell in pulsations of misty silver. The sun shone directly on the canyon wall. I strained my eyes as long as I could see it. It was—well, it was—I sure had seen something.

The greatest of the mountains were near the fjord. There was Romsdahlorn, a great spur of rock that pierced the air (I think the translation is Ram's Horn) 5,104 feet high. It has been called the Matterhorn of all are the Witches, sheer pinnacles that soar precipitously 6,010 feet from almost sea level. And that, friends and neighbors, is a mountain in any man's country. These hills have the sheer precipitancy of a Gothic cathedral. The name is connected with some legend of a mythical battle between the Trolls and the Gnomes. In fact the Norwegian name for the peaks is "Trollinder." There is also the "Royal Procession," three great hills, the King, Queen and Bishop.

AROUND ABOUT BUCHANAN

Making Apple Butter A Buchanan woman was recalling apple butter making back in the days on Portage Prairie.

Pa used to make apple butter, put it in gallon crocks and take it to South Bend, where he sold it all to one merchant. We had a 30-gallon copper kettle and we would boil several times in the fall. When it came apple butter making time pa would get out the apple pater and he would pare and throw them in a tub and the rest of us would slice them into schnitz. It would take two or three tubs of schnitz for a kettle of butter. Of course we would boil the cider down first—I think it was boiled down to one third the amount, three times the thickness, until it poured like syrup. Then we would first put in the sweet apples and boil and boil over the wood fire out doors. We would start one day and never quit until we were through which might be 10 o'clock next morning. Brother would sleep in his clothes ready to get up and put on more wood and watch every now and then. Long after the sour apples were started we would dump in the sweet apples which cooked quicker. We used to use those great big yellow sweet apples. From time to time pa would add fresh cider. I don't understand now why he boiled cider down thick and then added fresh cider while he was cooking.

When the whole kettle was about done, we would add the sugar the amount depending on the proportion of sweet apples we had put in. We didn't dare to put the sugar in before because that is when it started sticking to the kettle. When it was boiled enough, pa would line up a row of gallon crocks on a board and ladle the apple butter out with a dipper. Some times we would put in stick cinnamon and whole cloves, but most of the time we just made it plain, but it was fine. Pa's apple butter used to be so smooth with nary a grain. Apple butter making was quite an event on the farm. Boy, we kids used to think we were some pumpkins when they let us make schnitz!

Editorial

This year Buchanan has twenty-two battling bucks who are out there to fight and win; a group of girls formed a Booster Club whose purpose it is to create and promote pep among the girls; the school band has been practicing marching formation and several school songs; Mr. Moore sold many season tickets both to adults and to students. Mr. Hyink is kept busy getting rid of single tickets. The conversation between classes, in locker rooms and on street corners is always about the forthcoming game.

What Buchanan High School needs isn't a talk on school spirit, we need a good speech on cooperation.

Remember the little story about the seven boys with the seven sticks? They could be broken when bent one at a time, but when all were put together the bundle didn't even crack.

So is it with football. Send a man out on the field alone and he'll come back in pieces. Send a full team out there and the result would be changed. So is it with cheering. One person yells and it sounds like a policeman's whistle, but have all the students yell and it has as much effect as a motorcyclist's squad.

If we work together as a school body and not as individual students we, like the bundle of sticks, will not even crack.

WHILE THE SCHOOL SLEEPS--

The seniors plan the annual.

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES

On Friday, October 15, B. H. S. went out of her way quite a bit and had two assemblies.
In the forenoon at 11:40 we had a rip-roaring pep meeting for the game with Niles on the following Saturday. Gregory, Blainey, and Briney led the yells. Two new eighth grade cheer leaders, Shirley Erskine and Gwen Irlie, were introduced.
In the afternoon at 2:25 we had a demonstration by Maher's Business College at Kalamazoo.

Exchange Column

An item which attracted our attention last week was one in the Mishawaka "Allbold." This item concerned the organization of a Drama Club. It was considered by the girls who met to allow boys to become members of the club.
From the Dowagiac "News" comes the interesting announcement that a new loud speaking system will be installed in the football stadium. This system will be used for all home games.

JOKES
1st Student---Have you noticed Bob Hamilton's curly hair?
2nd Student---Yes, like ocean waves on a bed of rock.
Toad Smith---Where are the Andes?
Ben Harvel---I don't know. Where did you put them last?
Member of Future Housewife's Club---Why do you rub garlic all over your face?
Member of Future Husband's Club---Because the recipe for spaghetti says to rub garlic all over your pan.

Buchanan Seconds

Lose to Niles

Tuesday, October 19, the Buchanan Reserves lost to Niles Reserves by one point. The score was 7-6. The Bucks played their best game of the season. It was real football weather that day and the boys felt like playing, in fact they had to play to keep warm. The Bucks held a 6 point advantage until the closing minutes to play.

The Bucks scored first in the second quarter on a sustained march that was climaxed by Topash going over the goal. Kline missed with his try for the extra point.

The Bucks held this margin until but 3 minutes to play the Niles' team took it upon themselves to get to work and they did. An end run of 20 yards put the ball on the Bucks' 3 yard line. With first down and 3 to go the Bucks held for 3 downs but the last was too much. They scored and their fullback plunged over for the extra point which proved to be the margin of victory.

The score by quarters was:
Niles 0 0 0 7

HIGH SCHOOL BANNER MENDED

Due to the chilly weather the mice have come indoors. Most of them come in not for heat alone. At Buchanan High School they seem to be in for fall colors as well. Some maroon was missing from the high school banner. A fair sized piece had been chewed out.

Two girls, Ruth Rumsey and Kathryn Hess, were assigned the task of mending this flaw. These girls engaged in the domestic work during a class period in Home Management. Hoka si Poka! and the hole was gone and in its place was a neat job of mending.

Grade News

The distribution of report cards reminds us that six weeks of school have passed. In many grades standardized tests in problem solving and arithmetic fundamentals have been given. These are being used as a gauge for comparison of the children in their individual group, also with the average of other schools.

The people in Miss Ekstrom's fifth grade are now learning the use of reference books. Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia is particularly stressed because of the thumbled index found in the back of each book, and still more stimulating was the presence of a Compton salesman, who talked to them about the encyclopedias.

These fifth graders have finished their study of the New England states. This work included the study of the lives of authors and other famous people who lived within those states. Other items of interest have been radio programs pertaining especially to book reviews and nature study.

Current topics and scrap book work is underway in Mrs. Fuller's fourth grade class room. The pupils tell their classmates about pictures they have chosen and all around it is an interesting study.

Back into the days of knight-hood have flown the minds of the sixth graders. If you have read or seen the movie, "Connecticut Yankee," you can readily imagine what these pupils in Miss Reams' room are thinking about. England of old with the knights in armor, speedy horses, huge castles, and the tests before knights are chief picture of their day. The stories are of unusual interest about King Arthur's Court.
