WHERE LINES ARE DRAWN

Seems like it doesn't matter so much these days what you do as where you do it.

Take the recent furore over the broadcast by Mae West and Charlie McCarthy. We heard it and while it was in a way rather broad, it was mild in comparison with the one Mae West film we ever saw. It was mild in comparison with much that we read in the magazines and absolutely sanitary in comparison with the offerings of some of the best sellers between book covers. (We might add in this respect that Mae is barred from the local Hollywood theatre by manager Hoffman.)

We understand, but we don't know why, that the line is drawn much closer and finer in radio than it is in the movie. You can't get away with anything in radio but while there is supposed to be a national film censorship, you can get away, perhaps not with murder but certainly with something approaching manslaughter. Why insist on a clean radio and permit shady films?

Another area of publication which is said to be quarantined from filth is the funny. There can be nothing dirty in the funnies—not even a cussword. We suppose it is on account of the "kiddies," but in that case why not a ban on filth in the moving picture?

It's all very mysterious.

1938 COLLEGIATE

You see much in print to the effect that the current generation of college youth has, on the average, a more practical and sensible attitude than the crops of the twenties.

During the recent midyear vacation we talked with a young man from Buchanan registered in a state school. He gave us a few ideas along that line. He said:

"I'm working my way in part and I'm getting by on $3 a week for board and room. I haven't had a breakfast for weeks at school but it doesn't bother me. I don't do a thing but study, work and sleep. Never look at a girl. It's the same way with most of the fellows I know. They're working their way too and we're there for what we can get.

"I'll have to say that I have learned more in my half year at school than I did in much longer time at high school. Boy, what you can learn if you put your mind to it. There's sure a lot of knowledge to be grabbed off around that school and I figure I'm going to get all of it I can while I am there. And that is not going to leave me much time for anything else."

RATING BUCHANAN'S GRID TEAM

A 1937 sports resume for Berrien county in the New Year edition of the St. Joseph Herald-Press credits the Buchanan high school football team with the best record among county teams, on the basis of its six victories, one tie and no defeats.

Outstanding among its performances, according to the Herald-Press, was the 6-0 victory over Western State high of Kalamazoo, the first defeat for that team in 20 games. The evidence might have been carried further than the Twin City paper took it. This same Western State high school defeated St. Joe high school 20 to 6, following which the St. Joe team went on to win the Big Five title, also defeating Benton Harbor, a Class A team. The Buchanan team is entitled to the claim of being the best under Class A rating in southwest Michigan.

A Tin Can is a Treasure in the Jungle

BUT WE "WASTE" MILLIONS OF THEM EVERY DAY. . . .

A SAVAGE in the African jungle would look upon a shiny tin can as a priceless possession to be treasured for its beauty and utility. In this country, we "waste" millions of tin cans every day. The simple answer is that the cost of making a new tin can is less than the cost of recovering and reconditioning the old.

For hundreds of years water provided man with his principal source of mechanical power. Most people, when they see water rolling down a nearby stream, think of it as an economic waste of power in the same sense that tin cans are "wasted," but it has been said that the major water power sites east of the Mississippi could not be developed to produce power as cheaply as it can be produced by coal.

Today, because of improvements in the art, it requires only a fraction of the amount of coal used fifty years ago to make a kilowatt-hour, but in spite of this remarkable improvement a modern steam electric plant only recovers about one-third of the power in the coal. With coal a better source of power than water today, what will it be in future years when science learns to extract even more power from coal?

One pound of coal contains as much power as ten million pounds of water falling one foot.

Former School Head President Woodmen

Native of Illinois
A native of Modern Woodmen of America's home state, Neighbor Aleshire was born at Burnside, Hancock county, Ill., and received his elementary schooling there. Following his graduation from Carthage College, Carthage, Ill., Mr. Aleshire went to Michigan where he taught school for a number of years. He had chosen the legal profession for a career, but before realizing this ambition, the insurance field beckoned and he entered the Royal insurance office in Chicago as a broker. Prior to moving to Chicago, he served a term in the Michigan house of representatives, having been elected from Buchanan, Berrien county.

Prominent in Insurance Circles
Neighbor Aleshire rose to prominence in insurance circles in Chicago, and in 1901 he formed the firm of Parker, Aleshire & Co., which is now managed by his two sons. Mr. Aleshire has been an active member of the Chicago Board of Underwriters for many years; he served on various important committees of the Board and was its president in 1917 and 1918.

While a resident of Michigan in 1888, which state had not yet been admitted to the Society's jurisdiction, Mr. Aleshire took out membership in Camp 326, in his home city of Carthage, Ill. He now takes pride in being affiliated with the Society's largest unit, Camp 3052 Chicago, being a regular attendant at meetings and one of its most active members. A devout believer in the camp system, he is conversant with its problems and intensely interested in its work.

A Writer and Speaker
Neighbor Aleshire is an eminent scholar. With an excellent command of the English language, he is a speaker of note and a writer of no mean ability. During the World war he was a "four-minute" man and delivered many inspirational addresses. His patriotism also evidences itself in his writings. Many of his essays have appeared in The Modern Woodman and readers will recall his "Borrowed Thoughts," "Personal Experiences," "Miscellany," "The Months of the Year," "A Century of Progress," "Stories and Myths" and various other fine articles which have appeared without his by-line. To him goes the credit for establishing and selecting the material for the column, "Wit and Wisdom," which has appeared for the past four issues. He is frequently called upon to prepare memorials in his home city of Chicago.

While National Treasurer, Mr. Aleshire's office has been in Chicago, but as National President it will be maintained in the Head Office building and he and Mrs. Aleshire will reside in Rock Is-

Housewives Need to Know How To Judge Values of Linen Buys

And a Few Other Seasonable Words on Current Markets

Prosperity may rise and recede like the come and go of the times, but shopping goes on forever, and the less money you have to spend, the more you need to know about spending it.

Among the matters which Mrs. 1938 Housekeeper will turn her attention to at an early date is that of the offerings of sheets and other bed linen which will be available during the first weeks of the year at white sales. Here are some tips on such purchases from an article by the head of a buying firm in New York City:

As opposed to the old days when bed linen was really made of linen threads spun from flax, modern sheeting is woven of cotton fibers made into yarn. These fibers vary in length from 1/2 to 1 1/2 inches, which dimension is called "staple." The best sheets are made of long staple cotton, and no sheet is a good buy which has a staple of less than an inch. These fibers are twisted into the yarn of which the fabric is woven; they must be tightly twisted in order to give a cloth which is comfortable and durable.

The number of these yarns per inch, both as to the lengthwise or warp threads and as to the crosswise or "filling" threads, determines the fineness and closeness of the sheet. This number is called the thread count. If the clerk at your store has a magnifying glass you can see for yourself how the thread count varies in different grades, the fuzzy coarse yarns of the cheap sheet with only a few to the inch and the many tightly twisted threads of the better percale. Because these are more tightly twisted in the finer grades the air spaces will show more clearly.

The proportion of these threads each way of the material must have a good balance. A "square" sheet will have an equal number of yards in each dimension, as 69 warp threads and 69 filling threads. All sheets are not "square," but, unless there is reasonable balance, the fabric will not wear well. A coarse muslin sheet with a thread count of 66 by 76 will give reasonable wear, but percale sheets of over 90 count will have a finer texture. These better grades will sometimes run as high as 194 square. Government regulations require a warp of at least 74 and a filling of 66, but this is minimum requirement. It is the lowest thread count permissible on the market.

The tensile strength of the individual thread also counts. This means the number of pounds pull necessary to break a given piece of material and can only be measured by a machine in the hands of an expert. But you may have noticed in your own home that when you stretch a sheet tight it may break at some point. The amount of tensile strength of the threads of your sheet will determine its durability. Tests on 109 sheets show tensile strength varying from 27 to 80 pounds crosswise, and from 21 to 80 pounds lengthwise. The average was 53 pounds in the warp and 50 pounds in the filling. Federal specifications require a minimum of 70 pounds tensile strength each way.

The amount of sizing, as of starch or other materials, used in the manufacture of the cloth is important. This sizing serves a double purpose; it prevents the yarn from breaking in weaving and also gives a smooth finish. It may be carried to excess, and excess sizing is sometimes given to poorly woven products to present a deceptive appearance of weight and smooth finish. Laundering washes away the excess starch and the material is revealed as loosely woven and fuzzy. To detect excess sizing, place a piece of the sheet over a dark surface and rub it vigorously between your hands. If too much starch is present it will appear as a white powder on the dark material.

The weight of a sheet shows the cotton in its manufacture and in unsized sheeting varies from 3 1/4 to 5 1/4 ounces per square yard. It has considerable influence on the price. The minimum requirement is 4.6 ounces to the square yard of unsized sheeting varies from 3 1/4; you buy, however, is a matter of personal preference. If you like a light sheet, see that it is light because it is made of fine yarn and not because it is loosely woven. Generally speaking a heavy sheet gives a better tailored bed and outwears lighter materials, but sheets with much weight are awkward to handle and more expensive in laundering. It is sometimes ad-

The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" Among the Bible citations is this passage (John 14:21) "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and health with key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p.4): "To keep the commandments of our Master and following his example, is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidence of our gratitude for all that he has done."

West Buchanan Bert Conant is improved after several weeks of confinement with sciatic rheumatism. Clear Lake Woods residents report the best skating in years on the lake now. Skating parties from Buchanan, South Bend and other places have been coming regularly to skate. After the recent thaw the lake has refrozen perfectly clear and smooth and solid entirely across. The road around the west side, via Clear Lake Woods is open and quite good. A fine New Years party was enjoyed by members of the Clear Lake Woods colony. Those who came out from Chicago and staid over Sunday at the hotel were Mr. and Mrs. William Kelley, Mrs. Frances Wagner, Mrs. McIntyre and James Nejd. Mrs. William Jenkins and children, Mary Ellen and Billy, Buchanan, spent Thursday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Best. Mr. and Mrs. Dohn Weaver spent the week-end at Frederic, Mich., with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Hopkins. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Weaver's brother, who is visiting them. Mrs. Steven Wanchura is ill at her home on the Clear Lake Woods road. James Reep has returned from a holiday visit with his parents at Paxton, Ill. The Broceus school Parent-Teachers Association will meet next Tuesday evening, with a special speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wanchura were Saturday afternoon callers at Baroda. The New Years day party held at their hall by the Dayton Odd Fellows was quite successful. Over a hundred sat down at dinner and about the same number at supper. The party was held all day and during the evening. The Dayton Odd Fellows are holding an oyster supper and dance next Saturday evening. Mrs. Estal Price had as guests from the Christmas week-end until New Years her two nieces, Miss Ruby Gonyon, a teacher at Frankfort, Ind., and Miss Bernadine Gonyon, who is a student nurse at Epworth hospital, South Bend.

Lower Age Limit For Fish Permit Major changes in Michigan 1938 fish laws include reduction of the age limit for having a license to fish, from 18 to 17 years, and designation of closed seasons for pike lakes which heretofore have been open the year around. The license section also provides that residents desiring to take all species of fish shall be required to pay one dollar for this license to be known as the "general resident fishing license." Resident persons desiring to take any species of fish not including brook, brown or rainbow trout shall be required to pay 50 cents for a license which will be known as the "special resident license." Pike lakes in the lower peninsula will be closed from March 2 to April 30, inclusive; those in the upper peninsula from March 16 to May 14, inclusive. The month of April also has been added to the closed season on the "all other lakes" classification and a closed season is provided in non-trout streams on great northern pike, pike-perch, muskellunge and perch.

Sea Level Air Pressure Air at sea level has a pressure of about one ton to a square foot.

Each recent year has brought to the screen a finer type of musical picture and 1937 is no exception. "The Firefly," Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer's impressive adaptation of Rudolf Friml's memorable operetta, with Jeanette MacDonald in her seventeenth musical triumph, is Hollywood's new offering at the Hollywood Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Allan Jones and Warren William as the star's leading men delighted the audience. "The Firefly" presents a powerful story of dramatic romance, as well as a vehicle for remarkable music. M-G-M has gone the limit in its settings and in the artistry of presentation. Hunt Stromberg and Robert Z. Leonard produced and directed, respectively, and in the opinion of this reporter the combination surpassed its Academy Award winning collaboration a year ago with "The Great Ziegfeld."

Lavish scenes in the High Sierras and others made on thirty massive sets present the sweeping drama of old Spain in the period when Napoleon was defeated by Wellington at Vittoria. Seven thrilling musical numbers, five of them from the original Friml operetta, feature the picture. Two others were written by Friml especially for the film. Miss MacDonald dances beautifully and sings "Love Is Like a Firefly," "He Who Loves and Runs Away" and "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart" in perfect voice.

Allan Jones sings "A Woman's Kiss" and "The Donkey Serenade," and they sing in duet, "Giannina Mia" and "Sympathy" with charming effect.

Makes Screen Bow Wyn Cahoon, prominent Broadway stage actress who recently appeared in the hit play, "Brother Rat" in New York, makes her screen debut in Columbia's "Murder in Greenwich Village" with Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, showing at the Hollywood theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Mary Russell, Raymond Waldburn, Gene Morgan and Marc Lawrence appear in supporting roles. Albert Rogel directed. Alerty Illumination To illuminate the "Adam and Eve Inn" set for one night scene in the Marvyn LeRoy production, "The Great Garrick," to be shown at the Hollywood Wednesday and Thursday, 280 overhead spotlights, 42 floor spotlights and floodlamps were required, projecting over 84,000 watt candlepower of light. Eight wind machines created the effect of movement through the trees, while a coach and four was driven through the set, which covered every inch of space in one of the largest stages at Warner Bros.' studio. The picture X-o-X-o Bros.' studio.

Woman's Sacrifice in Airman Drama A beautiful woman's valiant attempt to stand by her weakening husband in the face of his cowardice when two other men love her to the extent of trying to save him from disaster, is threaded into a powerful dramatic plot in "Flight from Glory," RKO Radio picture with Chester Morris, Whitney Bourne, Onslow Stevens and Van Heflin, playing at the Hollywood Friday and Saturday.

The story transpires at a ramshackle air field in Peru where a group of reckless aviators are virtually exiled. These desperate men accept service with a commercial airline transporting mine equipment over the treacherous Andes in patched-up death-inviting planes. A newcomer brings his young bride who is forced into a crisis as her husband gradually goes to pieces from the dangerous flights and constant disasters.

Movie technicians can handle any situation but they can't change the disposition of a bee, is the joint opinion of Russell Gleason and Kenneth Howell of Twentieth Century-Fox's Jones Family, after a scene of their newest picture, "Hot Water," which is at the Hollywood Friday and Saturday, and in which a box full of bees play a significant role. When the box was opened, the bees for some reason made a bee line to Howell and Gleason, who were saved from being stung by a prop man who threw a tarpaulin over their heads. The bees scouted around creating general havoc until bee experts got them under control. The experts were the only ones un-stung, for they had thoughtfully provided themselves with gloves and net helmets.

TIGHTWADDING THROUGH EUROPE

(Continued from page 1) mobile, but the Swede calls them bikes and the American calls them autos. Both have the word bicycle but the Swede calls them a cycle and the American calls them bikes. As I said in a previous article, about 75% of the cars in Sweden were American-made, and of these about one third were General Motors and another third were Fords. My brother-in-law has a Dodge. In order to sort of "place" myself in that faraway land, it was my wont to tell the Swedes that the wheels and axle housings of the quite common Chevrolets were made in my town in America. Quite an exaggeration but at least with a slight basis of truth, and it sort of helped me to establish some little common bond, as well as to put in a good word for Buchanan.

Bicycles are not especially cheap in Sweden, running about the same price as in America. I quite often saw a Monarch and other American makes, but most of them were Swedish-made. Every bicycle carried its license plate, but it was only for registry purposes; there was no license fee.

Now let's be pedaling our way to the postoffice. My bicycling is not expert, a revival of a skill of many years ago and the Swedish forest roads are full of protruding pine roots and stones, so that I have a number of near-spills. The postoffice is at a bus station, and while we are there the bus comes in with the mail. On top there is a space given over to bicycles, for it is vacation time, and many thousands are making trips about their own country, using the buses and their bicycles.

Although I haven't been about enough to know anybody, by some legerdemain everyone has me spotted, for this is away in the back country in Norrland and tourists are not so common. Anyway I'm the guy from America and I feel the curious stares following me. The post mistress knows who I am and brings me the mail for the two homes, relieving me of the necessity of struggling in my barbarous Swedish. So now we can go home and see what we can do with a Stockholm newspaper.

My study of Swedish tapered off somewhat after my arrival there, for there was so much to see and so many who knew English. My young 15-year-old niece, who spoke Swedish, English, French and German, was at first ambitious to teach me Swedish, but after she had diligently labored for a couple of days to teach me some of those gosh-awful tongue-twisters and had listened to the results from my lips, a pained look gradually crept over her face and eventually I saw it was not pleasant work for her. Also I made slighting remarks about her Cholly-boy English with its drawled a's that did not contribute to the general results. But I had to defend myself some way.

English is spoken in Sweden with the educated English accent, reminiscent of Oxford, as practically all English teachers there complete their education in England. It is common also for young people who intend to enter business to take several months in England to perfect their pronunciation. Consequently, to me at least, it sounded like a page out of Wodehouse, and I was free to remark that there 130,000,000 Americans talking English as I talked it whereas there was only a few million top-strata English that talked the language as they did. But eventually I saw that the business contacts of the young Swedes were mainly with those top-strata as the English are by far their best customers, so perhaps a Cholly Boy accent was a business asset to them.

My "study" finally resolved itself into trying to pick out the meaning of the news articles about America in the Stockholm papers. The search for Amelia Earhart was on and by the use of a dictionary I could get the meaning of the articles. Many things interested me, especially the resemblance between Swedish and Scotch dialect. The word "barn," in Swedish for "child" and is exactly the same in Scotch dialect. The "mickle" of Scotch is the "mycket" of Swedish. The Scotch say "ha" for have, and so do the Swedes. This has its roots in history, for many hundreds of years ago there was a great Scandinavian emigration into Scotland, and many of the Scotch families are of the Norrland blood.

Many American expressions which I had thought to be dialect or slang I found to be exactly like the Swedish. In America we speak of "writing up" something; in Swedish it is "skrivlar opp" (write up). We speak of "slapping down" some money; the Swedish expression is "schlapp ned" (slap down). And so on through many instances.

Sometimes a forest worker who had known my wife as a child would come in to visit. In spite of the modernity of life there it was interesting to me to pry into the hangovers of old ways of thinking. One old man believed firmly in the "trolles" or woodspirits, once a part of Swedish belief, and still generally handed down as the national folk lore.

His grandmother, he said, had been in charge of a "fabode," a mountain farm where stock are kept in the summer. The wood trolles were supposed to haunt especially these fabodes, because they liked cream and cheese. They were shadowy beings without morals, who helped or damaged people in accordance to the treatment they received. It was customary to place gifts of cream and cheese on tree stumps and stones for them to take in the night. They were always gone in the morning, say the old people. But his grandmother was very busy and neglected to feed a woman troll who haunted the fabode. One morning while she was in the shed milking her cows, she saw the troll's face watching her through a window. She gathered up some foam off the top of the milk and threw it in her face. The troll vanished but when the girl turned the cows out, the best cow stumbled over the door sill and fell, breaking her back.

A miller of the neighborhood, he said, was very busy one summer working day and night. While he was alone in the mill one night he saw a troll hanging about the mill wheel. He scooped up some water and threw it at her. She vanished, but the wheel stopped at once and they could not start it again that season. An old lady believed in the trolles and claimed that on one occasion when she was walking through a forest path a troll in a pine tossed her a red slipper as a mark of favor.

While I was in the mountain farm at Harledalen, with the Black Swede and "Greta Garbo," I asked whether trolles ever haunted that mountain farm. They laughed and the Black Swede said: "No body believes in that now but a few old people. But there was a recent case, he said, where several men had been making fence on Sunday. A goat hung about all day, but towards night it disappeared in thin air almost, with no where to disappear to. They thought it had been a troll and that it had haunted them because they were making fence on Sunday.

The talk stopped and then the tubercular young man from Vancouver said: "Well, who knows, perhaps there's things between this earth and the heaven that we know nothing about."

Perhaps he read Hamlet. According to the old folk tales the trolles have the power to change form at will or to disappear. Or they may make themselves substantial flesh. If they appear in human form it is usually as a beautiful young woman. These women trolles steal the young men's hearts—sometimes marry them and even bear their children, but if they are ever found out they will at once disappear and take with them the child.

Besides the trolles which lived in grottos in the rocks, there were the "tomtarnas" the brownies of Swedish folk lore, who lived closer to the houses and helped regularly in the household tasks if they were properly fed. Otherwise they hindered. These tomtarnas were fat little gnomes, on the Santa Claus order in appearance, with pudgy bodies and long pointed caps and beards, morry faces, fur-trimmed coats.

To the younger Scandinavians these are but folk tales and there are few of the older people and those back in the hill country who put any belief in them.

The Swedish and Norwegian young people were as modern as you could wish to see, although they were on the whole and to all appearances most wholesome. They went in the minimum of summer garb, but all appeared to be entirely oblivious, I heard little or none of the product which our washroom school of humor likes to refer to as "broadmindedness."

While I was seated one day on the porch at Lobonas talking with my young niece, a couple went by in the legal minimum. The man had a strange contraption on his bicycle which attracted me (believe it or not) more than the undress and I said: "Look at that." "Yes" said the girl, "It is certainly wonderful to be able to go

There was no idea of there being about with so few clothes." I'm anything funny about it. It seems to be the simple direct attitude of the country—the blessing of getting away, for a few short weeks, from the curse of swaddling clothes that bundle them in winter.

I noticed a very pronounced affinity between the "gossar och flickor" (boys and girls), and they were wont to go everywhere in couples. Quite often I saw them walking hand in hand along a city street, quite oblivious. But I never saw anything of that more strenuous paving known in the modern American vernacular as "filng wooin'." Public spooning is said to have been an importation to America from the continent after the World War, but however that may be we have since outdistanced our teachers. I did not see any of it across the water and until I had crossed the Detroit river into the United States, when I practically had to change my seat on a street car to keep a young couple from hugging in my lap. I knew nothing of the private lives over there except that they seemed to keep them private.

(Ed. Note: The following is taken from the lead editorial of the Chicago Tribune on Christmas day, entitled "Goodwill Towards Men," and devoted toward an assessment of the good traits of the nations of the world.

"The Scandinavian countries invite your attention to a miracle. Denmark, Norway, and Sweden have found a way to peace and with it prosperity. Here are the most amiable, intelligent, and democratic of people. Their handsome faces smile upon the world out of neighborliness and good will. They have mastered a secret of living and its beauty glows in lands deeply indented for the tides of northern waters. Other peoples may still be in search of the mysterious good which the Scandinavians and their neighbors of Finland have found within themselves."

ACCIDENT TAKES LIFE OF JOHN KOENIG

him out in the potato patch near the house pulling weeds, at the age of 102.

Before his wife's death ten years ago the two would go to their room every night immediately after supper and spend the evening singing through the German Lutheran hymnal. He read constantly in his prayer book, hymnal and bible, all in the German tongue, until about a year ago. After that he would get anyone who would read to him, but so versed was he that he would recite in unison with them as they read, sometimes getting ahead, for he knew the four Gospels, the Book of Psalms and many other parts by heart. He never learned to speak or read English.

Koenig was born in Poland Nov. 25, 1827. His family was remarkable for longevity, his father being still alive at the age of almost a hundred years when Koenig came to America at the age of 72 in 1899. The Koenig family brought with them from Europe family records authenticating his age, but they were burned in a fire which consumed his home in Oklahoma shortly after he came here. They immediately wrote down the dates as far as possible. His oldest child, Mrs. Caroline Unruh, born of a first marriage in Poland, is living with a son in Texas at the age of 80. While a few years back the story of his great age aroused some doubt, and the doubt was increased by rather wild and unreliable press stories about his remarkable exploits, no one can talk to the Koenig family, noting their quiet, intelligent sincerity, and not fully believe in the reliability of their story.

The story of his escape from Russia while being transported as a convict to Siberia had no foundation in fact, but the story was approximately true of his brother.

He followed the trade of a hand sawyer in Poland, where much of the lumber is still sawed by hand. The logs are elevated on a scaffolding and one sawyer stands above and one beneath, working the saw up and down through the log and sawing out boards and planks by hand. When the work dwindled in Poland he went to Russia. After most of his children had come to America in the nineties, he followed them in 1899, going first to a son in Kansas. The first years he followed the harvest and threshing work while in his seventies. In a few years he went to Oklahoma and took a homestead. Discouraged by crop failure and a fire which wiped out all of his buildings he came to Michigan with his wife and they made their home for a time with their daughter, Mrs. Albert Schmaltz. Then they returned for a year to Oklahoma, but came back again about 1915 and remained until their deaths.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at 1:00 at the home of Mrs. Schmaltz and at 2 o'clock at Glendora Trinity Lutheran church. Rev. E. K. Jeschko, pastor of the church speaking in German and the Rev. A. Krug of Montague, Mich., in English. Burial was in Weesaw township cemetery at Glendora. The body lay in state at the Schmaltz home, where it was taken from the Kinney funeral home at Gallen Sunday.

Born in Poland in 1927 John Koenig, was born Nov. 25, 1927, in Kallish, Poland, and at the age of 25 married Louise Walter. To them two daughters were born; one died in infancy. The other is Mrs. Caroline Unruh of Kansas. Mr. Koenig's first wife died six years after their marriage. In 1859 Mr. Koenig married Gustine Pahar and in 1870 they moved to Russia. During that period eight children, five sons and three daughters, were born. Three of these survive: Mrs. Schmaltz,

Children In Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield Many judges are wondering how thousands of insane and feeble-minded individuals, now running the streets, will react to the type of material that is now being published by a certain magazine.

Judges and police cannot cope with the type of magazine now sold on news stands which actually carried shocking pictures and related in graphic detail all of the lurid facts concerning a woman who was ravaged and murdered.

Has the worship of the almighty dollar gone to such extremes in the United States that innocent girls are to be subjected at all times to the attacks of crazed morons whose imaginations are inflamed by the money mad editors of magazines who photograph such unwholesome incidents? Is this condition to go unchallenged in our New Year's resolutions?

A machinist by trade, he was employed in the local shop of Clark Equipment Company for some time. He was also employed by the Michigan Central railroad.

Flower Wonder at Arlen Clark Home

A flower designated in the catalogs as one of the wonders of the plant world may be seen this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arlen Clark, where a "Sacred Lily of India" is blooming.

The lily stands in a glass dish on the floor, with nothing about the bulb but paper. The bulb and stalk are 30 inches high and the bloom another 31 inches making the total height just over 5 feet. The smell is quite offensive.

The plant requires no earth or water about the bulb to produce its great bloom in winter, but in the summer it is planted in the ground and is a green palm-like plant. It is supposed not to bloom until five years old, but annually thereafter. Mrs. Clark received the bulb as a gift three years ago and this is its first bloom.

Dumb Waiters English Idea
Dumb waiters were an English invention of the Eighteenth century which consisted of tiers of trays affixed to a central support on a tripod base. They were usually placed diagonally at the corners of the dining table so that diners might help themselves after the servants had departed.

Exchange Plan To Save Game

Cooperative Hunting Plan May Promote Good Will in Hunters, Farmers

A movement which holds promise of improving Michigan small game hunters' chances in the field and which is already promoting more friendly relations between farmers and townsmen received considerable impetus during 1937.

A year ago, according to the state department of conservation, the cooperative hunting exchange plan was just getting underway. One club had entered into a cooperative agreement with the department. The club controlled 13,000 acres. Now, a year later, 34 clubs controlling 841,271 acres in 15 counties are functioning.

The plan, adopted voluntarily by farmers, has as its purposes the increasing of farm-land game and the control of hunter vandalism.

Owners or lessees of farm lands, under the cooperative plan, form their own clubs and agree to permit licensed small game hunters access to the territories controlled by their organizations, under the club regulations.

The department aids in formulating game management plans for areas controlled by the clubs, cooperates in game law enforcement, furnishes signs for posting of boundaries and roads and tickets to be issued to hunters by farmer members.

Farmer-members of the cooperative clubs are also aided in their efforts to increase wildlife by department specialists who furnish them with information about practices that have proved effective on agricultural lands.

The department reports that a majority of the farmer-members interviewed during the recent hunting season expressed the opinion that trespass conditions were decidedly improved under the cooperative arrangement. The members of the cooperative clubs are supplied with tickets which they, in turn, issue to licensed hunters. Members do not charge for hunting privileges but require that hunters ask for permission to hunt, wear tickets so they can be seen, leave cars parked in farmers' yards, not to shoot near buildings or stock, close gates, climb fences at post, return tickets before removing cars from yards and obey rules of the farmer-organization.

The department requires that land controlled by the cooperative clubs shall contain at least 640 acres, solidly blocked.

Wildlife production is expected to be increased by farmer cooperation in observing game management practices, refraining from unnecessary burning of swales, brush and other suitable wildlife cover and from unnecessary trimming of fence rows and roadside cover; giving reasonable assistance to the department obtaining such information as number of game birds killed and number of hunters on club properties and in game law observance and enforcement.

HOUSEWIVES NEED TO KNOW LINEN VALUES

(Continued from page 3) visible to buy a loose weave of heavy yarn rather than one which is very close, because it washes more easily and there is less danger of cracking under winter freezing.

The sheets should be well sewed with hems of at least one inch at one end and of from 2 to 3 inches at the other. These hems should be even and neat and sewed in small stitches. The stitches should be at least 14 to the inch. When buying sale sheets be sure to find out whether they are first or seconds. While second sheets are often good it is advisable to find out why they have been marked seconds. A few of a broken thread in the weaving might weaken the sheet and cause early splitting. But a spot of oil from the machine would disqualify the article as a "first" and yet be easily removed.

The size of the sheet is an item for attention. The first requirement is to know the exact dimension of the bed for which they are intended. Most sheets shrink from 6 to 8 inches in laundering. The undersheet should be long enough to tuck well under the mattress all around and turn back at least 18 inches over the bedding at the top. The following sizes are best for satisfactory wear and comfort: single bed, width 63 inches, length 108 inches; three-quarters bed, width 72, length 108; double bed, width 81 to 90 inches, length 108. Unbleached sheeting shrinks more than bleached. Hemstitched hems may tear from the body of the sheet.

Care of Sheets
Then comes care. Sheets thrive when laundered with plenty of soap but no bleaching agents. Irons should not be too hot. Sharp folds should never be pressed into the material as the yarn tends to break at the creases. Continued ironing in one direction increases the length one way and decreases it the other. An excellent way to lengthen the life of a sheet is to frequently make up the bed with two raw edges at the seam, or a French seam. Better grade seams are of a yard and a quarter or 42-inch material made the full width. Two selvage edges will show at the seam. If you wish to be efficient in the buying of your sheets, keep a record of the brand, place of purchase and date. This last may be written on the material with indelible ink in an inconspicuous place.
