May Borrow Money on Wheat Acreage

Loans on 1938 wheat will be available to any wheat producer upon whose farm the acreage of total soil-depleting crops for 1938 has not exceeded 105 percent of the soil-depleting acreage allotment established in accordance with the provisions of the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program, Martin H. Kretschman, Chairman of the Berrien County Agricultural Conservation Committee announced Wednesday, June 22nd.

Loans will be made on all classes of wheat grading number three or better, stored in federally licensed warehouses or in acceptable storage on farms. Farm storage should be of substantial and permanent construction so as to permit fumigation for insect destruction and to insure protection from thieves, rodents, other animals and weather.

The loan rate will be determined on the basis of number one grade wheat, taking into consideration the amount of wheat in excess of a normal year's domestic consumption and exports and the parity price rate. Interest rate on wheat loans will be 4 percent per annum.

Wheat loans are being offered because of the expected large crop, due to the record acreage and exceptional growing conditions this year, and to the large 1937 carry-over. A substantial part of this excess should be retained on the farms to protect producers against income reducing effects of selling to an over-supplied market.

Bridgman Plans 4-Day Celebration for Fourth of July

Bridgman, long noted for celebrations and its ability to entertain and draw overflow crowds is again in readiness for the opening of the Bridgman Business Builders seventh annual Fourth of July celebration, tomorrow evening, July 1, and continuing four days. Gustave H. Knaak, Jr., who is again the general chairman of the Fourth Carnival states that all arrangements have been completed and with the excellent co-operation of various committees, the carnival will present more and better entertainment features than ever before.

As during the past years, the Miller Amusement Enterprise of Chicago will again furnish the three big rides which will include the Merry-go-round, Ferris Wheel and Tilt-a-Whirl.

One of the main attractions will be Capt. Earl McDonald, the high Fire Diver who ignites his asbestos suit and leaps 75 feet into a shallow tank of water edged with spears. He will give one performance each evening.

The main street of Bridgman, decorated with hundreds of colored lights becomes a big midway. There will be 15 concessions which include a new corn game, eating places and various games of skill, in fact everything that makes up a real carnival.

On Sunday evening, July 3rd there will be a two hour concert given by the Simplicity Band of Niles under the able direction of Mr. Frances Heinlen. It will start at 8:30 and continue until 10:30. This will be held on the main street.

THE TORCH OF LIBERTY
LIGHTED JULY 4th, 1776

American liberty is a flame that must be watched and tended if it is to burn forever.

Blustering winds blowing about the earth threaten to extinguish the light that America has held aloft for more than one hundred and sixty years.

The men who signed the Declaration of Independence proclaimed our right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

None shall take away that right so long as we prove worthy of our great heritage.

"ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO" ONE OF WORLD'S GREAT STORIES
You'll be adding to your education if you attend "The Adventures of Marco Polo" at the Hollywood Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 3, 4, and 5, for it films one of the most famous stories of all times, a part of world literature.

This is the story of the world's greatest traveller and adventurer, Marco Polo, who opened the first important trade route between Europe and Asia. The action takes place during the colorful reign of Kublai Khan, the greatest of all Chinese Emperors, 700 years ago.

Marco Polo, youngest of the Polo Brothers, merchants and importers, is sent by his father from Venice to China. The father sends Marco because he is not a stuffy business man but a romantic adventurous character who always brings something worthwhile back from his travels.

After a long and difficult journey, Marco Polo and his servant Binguccio arrive in Pekin. He amazes and impresses the great Khan and at the same time falls in love with the Princess Kuka-chin.

Although she is formally engaged to marry the King of Persia, the greater obstacle to Marco's courtship of the Princess is a cruel Saracen, Ahmed, who is determined to get rid of Marco Polo.

On an apparently innocent journey to the interior, Marco is attacked by Ahmed's soldiers and narrowly escapes death—only to be captured by Lord Kaidu, a powerful general at war with the Khan.

Marco's sensible methods impress Kaidu more than that of the interest Nazama, his wife, shows in Marco. Kaidu, wishing to be less annoyed by his jealous wife, promises Marco that he will keep him alive as long as he amuses her.

Back in Pekin, Kublai Khan, trusting Ahmed, leads his army against the Japanese, leaving Ahmed in full control. Knowing that the Khan and his army will be destroyed by a typhoon in the China Sea, Ahmed prepares to marry the Princess and declare himself Emperor.

But it would spoil the story to tell more—see it for yourself at the Hollywood.

MILLIONS WILL SEE THIS "PRIVATE" BATH
Over 80,000,000 people will be treated to the spectacle of Richard Greene taking a bath in his film debut, but the new star discovery insisted that the set be cleared before he'd enter a tub for the camera.

A modest young man, this sensational new star discovery demurred vigorously at the sequence in 20th Century-Fox's "Four Men and a Prayer," in which he plays the romantic lead opposite Loreita Young.

Only Greene's head and shoulders are visible above the heavy lather in which he is immersed. "Four Men and a Prayer" is shown Wednesday and Thursday, July 6 and 7 at the Hollywood Theatre.

CHAMP AIDS SCREEN SLEUTH
They call him "Slapsie Maxie"—and for no other reason than that the former light-heavyweight champion boxes with his hands unclenched.

Maxie Rosenbloom has two reasons for this. One is that he doesn't want to cut, loose his "hard" punch and mar his opponent. The other is that he doesn't want to damage his hands.

Maxie was born in New York. He eats, his admirers say, every 15 minutes (usually tea and Danish pastry), and goes into training diet the night before a fight.

In "Mr. Motto's Gamble," 20th Century-Fox hit showing Friday and Saturday, July 1 and 2 at the Hollywood Theatre, Maxie is in Peter Lorre's supporting cast with Keye Luke, Dick Baldwin, Lynn Bari, Douglas Fowley, Jayne Regan and Harold Huber.

He admits to one yearning. He'd rather be a baseball player than a pugilist. So now he's an excellent screen comedian.

Benton Harbor And Niles Seek Lower Taxation

Will Make Third Attempt to Secure Equalization Reduction

The cities of Niles and Benton Harbor will make their third attempt for reduction of equalized valuation when the Berrien county board of supervisors meets at the courthouse next week for its regular June session. The session opens on Monday, and will run through the week.

The two municipalities have claimed for several years that valuations on which their taxes were based are higher in proportion than those of other townships and cities. Two years ago they protested the valuations, and last year the supervisors from those cities voted no when it came time for the equalization committee's report to be adopted.

This year, however, Niles and Benton Harbor supervisors began their agitation in April at the board's organization session, and Chairman Clarence Bartz appointed a special committee to investigate county valuations with a view towards readjusting them if advisable.

The special committee consists of Mr. Bartz and the seven members of the equalization committee, of which Supervisor A. W. Baker, Coloma, is chairman. Its other members are Fred Koenigs, Bertrand township; Loomis K. Preston, St. Joseph; John Winn, Niles; D. E. Patterson, New Buffalo; Guy Smith, West-saw township; and E. S. Barnes, Benton Harbor.

This committee, divided into four subcommittees, is working this week on a survey of the county. It probably will be near the end of next week's session before the equalization committee's report is presented for adoption.

The supervisors face a busy week, with the report of a special committee on the county hospital expected to provide one of the highlights.

Affairs at the hospital have been in a more or less tumultuous state since the institution opened a year ago. It is attached to the county infirmary, and there have been frequent reports that the management of the two institutions have not been harmonious.

The special committee was appointed to work out a better plan of cooperation between the two units. It has had several hearings since the April session of the board, and has heard the complaints of many witnesses on different phases of the management of the hospital and the infirmary.

It is expected that some time during the week, the committee will present a plan for management and operation for the consideration of the board.

Two proposals, one for building a new county juvenile detention home, another for enlarging the courthouse, also may be presented next week.

The need for a new detention home has been advocated for years, but it has been only during the past year, since Mrs. Myra Storms of Niles became chairman of the board's health and welfare committee, that anything in the nature of definite action has been taken.

Mrs. Storms' committee has investigated juvenile detention homes in southwestern Michigan and has held several meetings to discuss a new plan for Berrien county. One suggestion, which has met with favor, is that the county sell its present detention home in the St. Joseph residential district and acquire a small farm at the outskirts of the city.

Delinquent, dependent and neglected children, who are wards of the probate court, are kept at the home. For delinquent children the home must provide detention cells which are escape proof. For dependent and neglected children the home must provide living quarters and an environment that will be similar to that of a private home.

Tight-Wadding It Through Europe

CHAPTER 43
By HAWES

When I got off the ferry at Sassnitz I was in Germany, as I was apprised at once by the severe and careful scrutiny of the customs officials.

They looked at everything carefully, but what they were most particular about was money. On the ferry we had all received long forms to fill out for the officials, stipulating exactly the amount of money we had, in what form, what our purpose was in Germany, how long we would stay, etc., etc. When we lined up at the customs barrier there was a much longer delay than I had experienced hitherto. They searched all my belongings carefully. I had to show all my money. Finally I got by, half asleep and got on the Berlin train.

Like all European trains that I rode in the coaches were divided into compartments. And, as everywhere, the train was crowded. There was tremendous railway passenger traffic everywhere. They seemed to be getting about, and doing most of it by train. In my compartment, composed of two seats facing each other, each accommodating four in a pinch, were a German woman, her two half-grown boys, a girl dressed in peasant garb, and a young soldier, in a gray uniform, with three sets of wings on one sleeve. I inferred, correctly as I learned later, that he was an aviator with three years of service.

The dawn was lifting dimly, foggy, over a waterlogged peninsula as the train sped southwestward from Sassnitz. It rolled over terminable trestles and bridges, through marshes and bayous of the North Sea for almost an hour, and then pulled out into solid, substantial German countryside. It was about July 24—I'm not exactly sure of dates—and the wheat in northern Germany was standing golden ripe. Everywhere through it where it was not cut, the scarlet poppies bloomed, their bright colors calling out of the heavy yellow ranks. Not a weed or other intruder. The German homes seemed solid, substantial looking, mostly red brick and tile roofs. But I do not remember North Germany so distinctly for half the time I was trying to catch up the sleep I had lost. I had not been in bed for two nights. After a couple of hours, however, all of us straightened up and took stock of each other. My fellow passengers looked me over with a not unwelcome interest. I had the Swedish-American sticker on my grip which advertised my nationality. I listened while the German woman glanced me over and appeared to be giving a sort of appraisal to the aviator. She looked straight at me and put both hands to her head, as though talking about the shape and laughing. I suspect I qualified as an Aryan type for after a little while the aviator essayed some halting but understandable English. However his English was limited and his understanding of the spoken tongue also limited, so after a half hour of goodnatured attempts to break down the barrier of understanding he smilingly gave it up. I found him as I found all the other young German soldiers, especially of the aviation branch, sociable and willing to help.

Long about 6 o'clock we reached the environs of Berlin, and soon after we rolled into the great station. There was another ordeal. If we no play getting located in a foreign city in a strange land, with a jargon of the language, but very definite ideas of what you could do for accommodations. As usual I checked my baggage at the depot and started to look for a hotel. In fact I had a hotel address in my pocket. But I was surprised that I could find no one who spoke English. Railway officials, hotel waiters, policemen—all took their heads uncomprehendingly. I left the depot and hit a news stand, but fared no better. A pup of workman gathered about me, all scanning the written address and talking vociferously. All I could do to help. Finally I got it rough my head what bus I had to take to get to the hotel on Charlottenstrasse, where my wife had staid some ten years before, got the bus and it whirled through angling streets and suddenly we dashed through a tremendous group of public buildings and a great crowd of battle-stationary that impended like a thunder cloud over us; we straightened out down a great broad avenue, less than a mile long. I knew where I was then.

This was Unter Den Linden, one of the great streets of the world. There at the far end, set on a great arch, was the plunging war chariot with four great sculptured horses, which Napoleon had taken when he captured Berlin in 1807 and had transferred triumphantly to Paris. Then Blucher had brought it back after the Battle of Waterloo. Down the long famous street we swung where the troops of Frederick the Great, the Emperor Wilhelm I of Blucher, Van Moltke, and finally of the Kaiser and Von Hindenberg had paraded in long victory and final defeat. The famous old linden trees had been taken out a few years before when a subway had been installed under the street, and new trees planted. Unter Den Linden must be from 60 to 100 yards wide, with a wide park space in the center, streets on either side and four rows of linden trees. On either side and down short stretches of Wilhelmstrasse and Friedrichstrasse was official Berlin, of the Nazi regime.

We plunged through the great arch and looped angling down another street. Finally in about three quarters of an hour the conductor signaled me to get off. I dismounted and found myself a few doors from the Charlottenstrasse number. But there was no hotel, no "pension," no "hospice" at that number. A few doors away however there was a pension sign. I rang the bell. A woman came, but could talk no English. She summoned me into a reception room and returned with two other women, neither of whom could talk English.

This pension hotel was in what had evidently once had been an aristocratic dwelling place—its furnishings were still sumptuous. It evidently represented a genteel poverty that had once seen better days. The women strove strenuously to induce me to take a room. The charge was three marks for a room and breakfast—about a dollar I think. German money was the only currency I never solved. I managed to make them understand that I thought it was too far from the center of things. I had decided that I was going to get quarters near the center of things and pay a little more if necessary rather than to spend all my time and money on buses.

I was rather sorry afterward that I did not take the room, for if I had staid in this fine, beautifully furnished old home on a quiet street, with courteous people, I think I would have left Berlin with a better impression. However, in the dash through Unter Den Linden I had seen a "pension" sign on a building. I had been told that I could trust pensions. Anyway my pulses were drumming with desire to get back to the great street, and I thought it would be worth while to stay my three days there above the avenue where so much of the world's history had centered.

I got off opposite the pension sign. It hung from a third story window. On the ground floor was the Norwegian Travel Bureau. Two doors off was the Berlin headquarters of the Chicago Daily News. A block and a half away was the American Express company which I depended on for mail and information. Two blocks the other way was Kaiser Wilhelm's former home. Directly across the street was the head office of the Berlin tourist bureau, where all travel busses stopped. And so on. It seemed ideal. I entered the stairway. It was an old building and at the bottom was one of those great iron grills, with the door open. I went up two stairs to the third story. There was no elevator. I rang the bell of the pension. A German woman came. She could not talk English.

The rates were the same as on Charlottenstrasse. The furnishings and appearance were decidedly different. I did not like the looks of the place very well. But then it was a "pension." I went to a window on Unter Den Linden and angling across the boulevard I saw the German Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. It settled me. I was in the center of things. I picked a room on an inner court, got two great keys, one for the lower grill, one for the pension door, and a smaller one for my room.

I was too tired to hunt any further anyway. I sat down at the court window and looked down on a sort of garden restaurant at the bottom of the court. It seems to me the name was the Cafe Gebhardt Habel. I found that it was part of a famous old wine house that had been on that location for near 200 years. On the opposite wall I read an inscription on a bronze plate to the memory of fourteen employees of the Gebhardt Habel, who had "died gloriously for the Fatherland" in the World War. Fourteen out of one little establishment. That told a story.

day morning) was broken by the staccato of martial music and a rhythmic tramp of feet in front. I jumped and dashed for a window of the reception room in front. The window was washed so clean, I did not even see the glass and I almost drove my head through it in my haste. When I got it up and leaned out I saw a large company of soldiers coming from the left. And every direction streamed thousands of people.

That looked like something and I dashed down the stairs. As I reached the street the soldiers were abreast and they were breaking smartly into the famous Prussian goosestep. The crowd was growing thicker. I followed them and they turned and faced the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. I learned afterward that this was the Waich company, which performed a rite of remembrance every morning to Germany's soldier dead. No once-a-year Memorial Day for them.

I watched the rite; watched the soldiers swing sharply about facing down the avenue; heard the rifle and drum strike up and saw the lads goosestep smartly by. I, with them, fell in, beside and behind and marched. I squirmed and shivered until I got directly next to the soldier, watching their faces. They looked serious, almost sad, as though there was no fun in it for them, and the sweat rolled down their faces under their heavy helmets. It was more interesting to watch the crowd. Directly ahead of me was a blocky grayhaired man, who marched stiffly, shoulders back, swinging an artificial leg from the hip. Directly opposite was a middle-aged woman, poorly dressed like a servant or scrub woman. But her carriage was as martial as that of the soldier; she strode like a man with shoulders back, spine like a ramrod, eyes fixed in front.

We swung into Friedrichstrasse and the throng converged into the narrower street. I looked at the people walking beside, at the people standing in the doorways. They were all deadly serious, a look of solemn, doom in their faces. Were they thinking backward or ahead? Was it a rite of memory or of revenge? Were they thinking of the dead or of the day of Germany's vengeance? I never learned; I found no one to talk to; and anyway I was alone and a stranger and it did not pay to talk.

About four blocks down Friedrichstrasse I dropped out looking for a restaurant. I saw a small tidy place on a side street with "Deutsch biffsteak" advertised for 90 pfennigs. I think that was about 25 cents, but I am not sure. The "biffsteak" was some sort of substitute for beef. I was told afterward what it was but I do not remember. But it was very tasty and the price was right so I broke my fast there, opposite one of those inevitable aviators with several wings on his sleeve. If there is a German plane for every one of those handsome, serious-faced boys with wings on a gray uniform, they must be as numerous as a plague of locusts.

Factory-Made Bread

In one of those wonderful pictures of business which appear regularly in "Fortune," the July issue explains "why Continental does the biggest bread-baking business in the country, why it is second only to National Biscuit in all baking, why it uses more flour than any other farm customer, why it is second only to the A. & P. in flour buying."

The article, entitled "Wonder Bread and Circuses," states: "No more than an estimated 25% of the bread eaten in America today is baked in the home. Most of that 25% is baked by farmers' wives living far from town—not because they cannot afford to buy factory made bread at regular prices but because the big bakeries cannot afford to give it to them at those prices.

Of the remaining 75% of all the bread eaten in the U. S., which makes up the bread business, about 10% is baked by big restaurants, hotels and public institutions. About 8% comes from the chain groceries which also, by and large, bake their own bread. About 7% is sold by little local bakeries. And about 50% is politely fought over by the big baking companies, local and national, of which the biggest four are, in order of their 1937 sales volume, Continental, General Baking company (Bond bread), Purity Bakeries Corp. (Taystee bread), and Ward Baking company (Wards Softbun bread). The 707,245,000 pounds of bread sold last year by Continental represented about 4.5 of all the bread eaten in the U. S., and about 6% of all the bread sold. Which is not so bad for a company in existence only 13 years and, which could not have existed in anything like its present form 30 years ago.

The World's Greatest Airships

The July Fortune also contains a marvellously illustrated article on "Tomorrow's Airplane," with pictures of Boeings B-314, the largest airplane, ever built, and a great illustration of the LZ-130, German's great dirigible which is to make its maiden voyage across the Atlantic in July.

The Cinderella Flower

Better Home and Gardens for June has an article on the present vogue of improved geraniums, especially of the pelargonium group which has achieved great popularity in formal landscaping about houses.

Pomegranate Wood for Castanets

Good castanets are made from pomegranate wood. They must resist the violent impact of fortissimo and staccato movements and if they have the slightest flaw will soon splinter. They are called chestnuts after the Moorish percussion instruments and because they look like chestnuts when separated.

Mich. I. O. O. F. Opens Boys Camp

Roy Pierce of Buchanan Named to Grand Lodge Camp Committee

A boys' camp will be on the program of Rev. Karl H. Keefer, of Gladwin, Grand Master of Michigan Odd Fellowship, during the month of August, with Roy A. Pierce of Buchanan a member of the Grand Lodge Camp Committee.

The camp will be at Lake Louise, a 3,000 acre tract of forest, hills, and lakes in Hudson township, Charlevoix county, half way between Boyne City and Vandorbilt.

Mr. Charles Horner, of Eaton Rapids, spent years in building up of this great natural estate in the northern part of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan. He expended over $100,000 on this tract, and now it is one of the most beautiful and largest estates in America. It is six miles long and from two to three miles wide. After Mr. Horner's death, his two brothers, Edward and William Horner, dedicated Lake Louise to the everlasting service of boys and girls. In 1923 they presented the whole estate to the Methodist Episcopal Church of Michigan.

Through the efforts of Grand Master Keefer, Michigan Odd Fellowship will have use of wonderful Lake Louise again this year for a boys' camp during two weeks of August.

Odd Fellow Lodges of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties will be privileged to send 100 boys to Lake Louise for the week of August 14 to 21.

Odd Fellow Lodges of the remainder of Michigan will have the privilege of sending 100 boys to that camp for the week of August 21 to 28.

Transportation to and from Camp Lake Louise will be furnished through the generosity of the Ford Motor Co., of Detroit, and will pick up the boys bound for the camp at designated places throughout the state.

The boys who are selected by the Odd Fellow lodges of Michigan to attend the camp at Lake Louise will be under the supervision of the following, who are all connected with Odd Fellowship:

Grand Master Karl H. Keefer, of Gladwin, director; Grand Chaplain Rev. Stanley Niles, of Sturgis, associate director; George Holinos, of Battle Creek, swimming and life saving instructor; Alfred Halstead, of Marcellus, trees, rocks and science; Frederick S. Goodrich, of Albion, devotional director; Mrs. George Birch, of Battle Creek, bird study; Charles C. Harris, of Rockford, musical director; Lavell T. Smith, of Dearborn, director of transportation.

The Grand Lodge Camp Committee is as follows: Harry Scarlett, of Detroit, chairman; Charles C. Harris, of Rockford; Lynn Brown, of Midland; Francis M. Dodge, of Detroit; Guy Hall, of Hillsdale; R. A. Pierce, of Buchanan; Ray A. Elgas, of Cadillac; A. E. Wylie, of Clare, and R. A. Lewis, of Decatur.

Grand Master Keefer urges the Odd Fellow Lodges which wish to be represented by boys in this camp to send in their reservations at once to Grand Secretary Fred A. Rogers, of Lansing, because of the fact that only 100 boys can be accommodated each week in this camp. The expense for the boys will be borne by the lodges sending them.

Need More Salt in Summer Diet

Common table salt, iodized in preference in Michigan, played an important role in the hot weather cautions issued today by Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, State Health Commissioner, in an effort to prevent the recurrence of heat fatalities which caused 956 deaths in the extended heat wave of July, 1936.

"In case of excessive perspiration add an extra amount of ordinary table salt to the diet," he said. "A full teaspoonful or more a day is needed to make up the bodily loss. This extra salt adds not only to one's comfort, but also lessens the danger of heat exhaustion or prostration. Salt is best taken with the drinking water. Such a drink is both pleasant and refreshing."

The two extremes of life, infancy and old age, are especially susceptible to the ravages of extreme heat, said the commissioner. Persons over 40 and particularly those who may be troubled with diseases of the arteries or heart should avoid over-exertion and exposure to the sun during the hottest part of the day.

Briefly, he said, the following rules of hot weather hygiene may prevent unnecessary deaths during heat waves:

1. Eat lightly and dress lightly.
2. Avoid over-exertion especially after eating.
3. Avoid exposure to the sun during hottest part of the day.
4. Abstain from stimulating drinks, but drink plenty of water.
5. Take frequent cooling baths.
6. Avoid swimming immediately after eating.

7. Add teaspoonful of table salt to daily diet.

The coming of hot weather demands special care in the feeding of young children, said Dr. Gudakunst, if they are to avoid the hazards of diarrhea and enteritis. All milk and water should be boiled. Unripe or overripe fruit should be avoided. At the first sign of gastro-intestinal upset, all food should be discontinued and the child given only boiled water, said the commissioner. If this does not clear up the difficulty, a doctor should be called.

Wrote About Strait of Magellan After he had discovered the strait of Magellan more than 400 years ago, Ferdinand Magellan sat himself down and observed on paper: "I think there is no other world a more beautiful country or a better strait than this one; at every half league there is a good port and a place for anchoring, good waters, wood of all cedar, a very sweet herb named 'appio,' and fish like sardines."
