

WILL ADVERTISE FOR POSTOFFICE SITE

City Considers Merits Chemical and Biological Sewage Plants

To Open Bids at Postoffice Aug. 3

Now Here's the Proposition

Prominent talkin' don't hoe no corn, but there's a lot of fellers make a good livin' out uv it.

Launching of the Willabob

'Twill be the schooner Willabob that sails the summer sea on its maiden cruise at Clear Lake Saturday or wait it's a power boat but they will bust a schooner of champagne over the prow in the launching.

The Willabob, Captain Barnacle Bill Miller, skipper, will leave the Oak street ship yards between 9 and 10 a. m. Saturday, and will either be taken to the lake by truck or will go under its own power if the weather is a little wet. It will receive its name in honor of the two grandchildren of Skipper Barnacle Bill, Miss Willa M. and Master Bob Miller. The launching party will be merry select and anyone wishing admittance should contact Skipper Barnacle Bill, wealthy Days avenue luncheon and ex-publisher.

Paging Red Schwartz!

Here is something that should be right up the alley of Richard Schwartz, exponent of the merits of white belted live stock. Recently Elmer Lauer went after some rats that were ravaging his corn crib. He caught several and everyone had a peculiar white marking extending as a rule about its body, some times like a belt around the middle, some times like a collar or covering one entire end. Mr. Schwartz is going to want an order of those rats out on his Dutch Belt avenue holdings.

A July 14th Post Mortem

There were no very serious casualties about Buchanan resulting from July 4 fireworks, but there was one which will bear telling even at this date.

A fond father had staked his two sons to a pyrotechnical display but watched over them carefully while they discharged them. Finally there was one left. "Thank God, there's another Fourth of July over and nobody hurt," he said, "and just to make sure I'll shoot this last one myself."

'ROUND ABOUT BUCHANAN

Buchanan is back on the map again, in the detective pulps at least, for about the fourth time in the past year, in an article in the "True Detective Stories" magazine, August number. It is entitled "I Married a Fugitive" and authorship credit is "as told by Mrs. Frank Bentley to Chas. D. Pifer." Pifer is the Herald-Examiner staff representative in South Bend and has been responsible for the other articles featuring sensational events here.

Townsend Rally at South Bend July 17

Judge Jeffries of Detroit will be the speaker at the Townsend rally at Pottawatomie Park, South Bend, Sunday afternoon, July 17. A large number of the Buchanan unit plan to attend.

Time Factor in Type Selection

WPA May Bar Chemical Plant by Limiting State Waives Its Approval

Determination of the type of sewage disposal plant to be constructed in Buchanan rests with the decision of the city council. It will wait for the plans for any other plant already approved by the state. Interest was in the chemical type of plant at St. Charles. The city officials estimated that the adoption of a Public Health type, which has provided fully satisfactory results.

They visited a plant of the biological type at Chippewa Heights, similar to the type approved by the state for Buchanan and were told by the plant employee then in charge that he considered the chemical type better. The chemical plant has the advantage of being housed entirely inside a building and permits no odors to escape, also cleans the water better.

Since the chemical type is comparatively new it has been officially approved by the state board of health, which is stated that it will not be disapproved by the state. WPA stated that they will not give state approval but completion of plans for bids within this one requires installation of the here.

Larson Steel Stockholders Vote on Change of Name

Softball

(By JOHN SCHULTZ) The first round of softball play came to a close last Friday. A second round schedule has been made out and will be printed this week. Last week's games contained many thrills and some lusty hitting on the part of some of the players.

Wednesday evening the Boyce Insurance team, being tied for first place with Phillips 66 in the National league, defeated the Phillips 66 ten by the shutout route 2 to 0. Fabiano twirled three hit ball for the Insurance ten. Freehling was nicked for six hits for the losers.

In the nightcap Bob Ellis pitched the Foundry to a 2 to 1 victory over Dry Zero. He pitched five hit ball and lead his team at the plate with three hits in three times up. Raber got two hits to lead the losing Dry Zero ten. H. Rudloff pitched seven hit ball for the losers.

Thursday night in the opener Clark's defeated the Future Farmers in a free scoring tilt 11 to 6. Clark's started early and kept adding to their early lead to win easily. The Farmers had one big inning, the fourth, in which they scored all their runs. Jesse was the winning pitcher allowing only three hits. His mates committed seven errors. Rotzein was the losing pitcher. He gave up nine hits, but his mates committed twelve errors.

Gnotdtk's worked their way out of the cellar by virtue of their victory over the Presbyterian church in the final Thursday evening 7 to 4. Shirner lead the losers with a hit and two walks in four appearances. Trapp got a double in two trips to lead the winning Gnotdtk team. Fairman was the winning pitcher giving up five hits. Shirner and Miller gave up four hits.

Friday night the Presbyterian Church defeated the Montgomery Ward team from Niles 7 to 3. This was the church team's first victory of the year. Johnny Miller twirled for the winners giving up three hits. He fanned fourteen Montgomery Ward batters. Naggie twirled for the losers giving up nine hits. Miller and Shirner got two hits each in three times up to lead the onslaught. Naggie, Zollers, and Kessler got the only hits off of Miller. Zollers hit was placed so nicely it went for a home run.

Dry Zero made it a clean sweep for Buchanan on a Friday night by putting on a big rally in the sixth inning to defeat the Kawneer "B" team from Niles 7 to 4. Leading four to one going into the last half of the sixth Modory, Niles swung into a heap of trouble and when the inning was over he found himself trailing 7 to 4. Cronin lead the winners with two hits in three times up. Rudloff was the winning twirler giving up four blows. Modory got at Rudloff for a triple to lead the visitors.

Dedicate Lights at Camp Madron

Close of Cub Scout Period Marked by Ceremony for Installation of The Electric Lights

With a crowd of parents and friends filling the building to overflowing, in spite of a heavy downpour of rain, Camp Madron closed its Cubbing Camp with a very colorful program. A group of Indians outfitted in new costumes started the program with a fire ceremony—the fire being started by flint and steel. This followed by one to the Winds and a dance typical of the Tuscaroras Tribe.

Immediately after the dance Scout Executive Oscar Noll introduced Fred Andrews veteran Scoutmaster who completed 21 years in Scouting last Wednesday. Mr. Noll paid a very fine tribute to Mr. Andrews for his untiring service to Scouting and then announced that the honor of turning on the lights would be given to Mr. Andrews. To Mrs. Kathleen Hunt, popular cook of the camp went the honor of shooting the cannon which was the signal to Mr. Andrews in the control room to throw the switch. The lights went on at 8:30 p. m. throughout the entire building. Applause of appreciation deafened the hall for several minutes. Mr. Noll explained that with the excellent cooperation of the contractors and the light company it was possible to have the work completed in three days. Temporary fixtures are now in place, but others will be gotten later which will fit in with the architecture of the building.

Following the dedication of the lighting system, Mr. Slais, Director of Advancement, together with Carl Wood, Field Executive, and Eugene Kelley, Boating Instructor, gave out the many awards which were earned during the week.

Ride Bicycle on Left Says Rinker

Local Deputy Sheriff Talks at Meeting of Bicycle Safety Patrol

Robert Rinker, deputy sheriff, talked before the local Bicycle Safety Patrol club Thursday evening on the rules of safety in bicycle riding, the meeting being held at the L. D. S. church.

He stressed the fact that traffic officers recommend that bicyclists ride against the traffic on the left side of the road, as pedestrians do, rather than on the right side with the traffic, as nearly all do now.

He described the system of bicycle licensing which has been adopted at Benton Harbor, where the license may be revoked for riding in the city after two or more complaints against any individual bicyclist for careless riding. The license fee is fifty cents a year.

Rinker also described two fatal accidents which he had witnessed, in which bicyclists were killed.

The only legal regulation of bicycles at present is that requiring that they carry a white light in front visible 300 feet and a red light in the rear for riding at night.

Writes Article On Education in Oriental Values

The following is taken from an article by M. M. Siraganian in the June issue of the Oriental Rug Magazine:

From my own experience, I know that many people have been buying domestic rugs and broadloom only because they have never had explained to them the beauties and advantages of Oriental rugs. I myself came to this small town of only 4,000 inhabitants in which there was not a single Oriental rug. In the past few years, I am happy to report I have been able to sell Oriental rugs to 36 homes and families—a total of 372 rugs, all of them in the antique and semi-antique class. And every customer is crazy about the rugs he or she has bought!

This is a small example of what can be done by means of education and publicizing. There are plenty of people in this country who are able to buy Oriental rugs, and are only waiting to be told the advantages of these handmade works of art.

"ONE FOOT IN THE FACTORY AND THE OTHER ON THE FARM"

"I only get three days a week but I can make it go as far as I use to make five and six go," said a young man, an employe at a local factory. "The difference is, I've rented a little place in the country, where I have something to do when I am not on the job, and I find out I live a lot cheaper. "When I go out home I forget about town until I have to come back to the job. I don't keep up any social obligations there."

Which indicates that in his own individual way this young man is applying the idea which Henry Ford thinks is the solution of all our difficulties. In a partial way he has gone back to the land.

Where in the world could one find a better place to go back to the land in a limited way than around Buchanan? Even in these depression days there is a constant movement of small tracts of land here, bought by city professional men, or workers in trades and business, developing small fruit farms with an eye to making them their future homes. More than that, professional fruit men who operate in the north end of Berrien County are moving southward, buying additional acreage, especially immediately north of Buchanan, to transfer their fruit holdings to land less infested by fruit pests, and as a matter of fact with a soil better adapted to the fruit industry.

The rural plants which Ford is developing in small Michigan towns are suggestive of what might be done here. It is Ford's idea that the country would be better off if a larger fraction of the people lived in the country and farmed acreages in summer while working in the factories in winter. His idea includes cooperation on the part of industry, centering their manufacturing operations in the winter months and leaving their workers free for farming in the crop growing season. "One foot in industry and one foot in the soil," so to speak.

An article in Reader's Digest has the following to say of the Ford plant at Ypsilanti:
 "At Ypsilanti, where 1200 men and women make starters and generators, a large proportion of the farmers are as much farmers as factory hands. Dozens take leave of absence as soon as the soil can be worked in the spring, returning to their jobs after harvest. Scores more take shorter layoffs to help with sowing and threshing peaks. Rule One at all of the small plants is that a man may leave any time to work on the farm, may have his job back when he gets through farming. Many of the workers are over 60 years old. For all, men and women, the Ford wage of $6 a day is minimum."

"A man laid off in an industrial city is condemned to idleness and lost income unless he gets another job. In the country he always has enough postponed farm work to keep him profitably busy as long as he is off—and if the shutdown is long he has his land to support him. The city employe may not always be found after layoff, but the farm worker has his roots down, is there when the shop reopens."

headquarters at Chicago early Tuesday morning. About 1:30 a. m. Tuesday while coasting around the end of Lake Michigan he switched his car radio on to receive the lonesomeness and picked up a broadcast relayed from Germany, with Hughes, around-the-world flier giving an account in English of his flight. Hughes was speeding eastward from Berlin, flying 200 miles an hour, mostly above the clouds. It was then morning in Germany and the sun was several hours up. He was flying at an altitude of 13,000 feet. Fernwall stated that the broadcast came in as clearly and distinctly as though it were from a Chicago station.

THE Best Friend YOU COULD HAVE

A NOTE FROM A FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR OF YOURS

Our customers recently told us that everything in our store is always "extra nice." That little word "extra" sums up our idea of the way a grocery store should be. We give extra time to finding the best quality foods—extra care in filling orders—extra attention to personal service. We do only one thing which we do not attach an "Extra" to—that is price. Both in staples, and on specialties—we save you money—every day of the week. Our motto is: "Don't come in and look over our money-saving values. Very truly yours, FRANK POORMAN"

RADIO PHONES REACH TO SOUTH, EAST, WEST

Sending and Receiving Station in Five States Carry Voices to Most of the World

Bell System overseas radio telephone service is operated from three centers: New York, San Francisco, and Miami, Fla.

From New York, radio telephone circuits are operated to London, to Paris, to Bermuda, to South America, and to ships at sea. Many additional foreign points, however, are reached by these circuits. From London, for example, overseas calls continue via land wire and deep-sea cable to most of the countries on the European continent, and additional radio links extending from various cities in Europe bring ready communication with Australia and with points in Africa, Asia, and the Near East.

From San Francisco, service extends to China, Japan, Java, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Philippines, and to certain ships either regularly or occasionally in the Pacific.

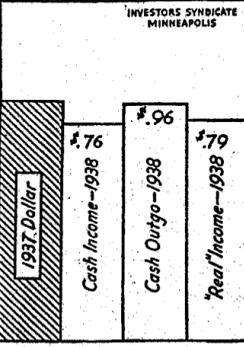

From Miami, overseas service extends to the Central American countries, the West Indies, and to Colombia and Venezuela in South America.

The radio telephone channels which operate from New York are located on Long Island and in Maine and New Jersey. The transmitter for the original transatlantic circuit is at Rocky Point, Long Island, N. Y., and the receiver is at Houlton, Me. Transmitters are also located at Lawrenceville, N. J., and Ocean Gate, N. J., and receivers are at Netcong, N. J., and Forked River, N. J.

For the transpacific services and the ship-to-shore service operated from San Francisco, the transmitters are at Dixon, Cal., and the receivers are at Point Reyes, Cal. For the services operated from Miami, the transmitters are at Opa Locka, Fla., and the receivers at Hialeah, Fla.

American Income Falls 21 Cents; Living Costs Dip Four Cents In Year

PURCHASING POWER May, 1938, Compared with May, 1937

THE above chart, showing how the average American fared in national income changes in the last twelve months, is based on the monthly consumers' study of Investors Syndicate, of Minneapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Public in May had a "real income" of 79 cents, or a decline of 21 cents on the dollar from the same 1937 month. This "real income" is not a subtraction of cash income and expenditures, but an average relative of these figures designed to show how living costs affect adjusted income dollars.

Cash income of Mr. and Mrs. Public in May was 76 cents for every $1 a year earlier. This decline of 24 cents on the dollar resulted from the following losses per dollar wages 34 cents, salaries seventeen cents; and investment income seventeen cents. Other income was down thirteen cents on the dollar.

Rents were up one cent on the dollar last May as compared with the same 1937 month; food was down nine cents; clothing was off three cents; and miscellaneous items were down six cents.

Mysteries of Brain Probed by Scalpel of Modern Surgeon

Indianapolis.—The mysteries of life, death, and consciousness have been probed by the surgeon's scalpel and electrical impulses in the brain itself.

The seat of human consciousness and with it the ability to speak is located in the brain's artery in the left front side of the head, Dr. William H. Thompson, of the Municipal University of Omaha, told the American Association for the Advancement of Science here; after reviewing heroic operations performed by brain surgeons. Amazingly large amounts of a person's brain can be removed if necessary without seemingly affecting his ability to lead a normal life and carry on his business.

The right cerebral hemisphere of the brain, for instance, has been removed with no observable permanent loss of the higher mental processes. Surgeon's knives have whittled away other portions of human gray matter, previously thought essential in the control of mental functions, and the patients hardly knew anything had happened to them.

But if the left anterior cerebral artery is injured by any chance, Dr. Thompson warned, the patient can never regain consciousness. This area and the flow of blood seems linked with the problem of conscious existence itself. Scientists are now searching for some practical way of studying these new aspects of the age-old problem of relationship between mind and body.

To the mysteries of the pulsating electrical impulses beaten out of the brain, death itself has given a clue. Dr. P. S. Shurrager of the University of Illinois reported that the origin of the brain waves is shown in the records of the death process.

In the democracy of death the lower creatures such as fish, frog and toad become like the higher animals, the guinea pig, cat and dog, in the electrical responses of their brains. From this fact, Dr. Shurrager infers that the brain's electrical waves have their origin in the very life processes of the cells of the brain.

Each single cell in the brain may in the course of its life process create electrical impulses which are added together algebraically to create the complex brain waves broadcast from the brain's surface, Dr. Shurrager indicated.

Dies by Golden Bullet. Graz, Austria.—The newspaper Kleine Zeitung reported from Sarajewo that a poverty-stricken former millionaire, Mohammed Sahingaitch, had shot and killed himself with his last wealth—a golden bullet. He squandered his fortune, the newspaper said, after his wife died from blood poisoning caused by hairpin.

City Water Plant Prosperous. St. Louis.—The city's municipal owned water plant, earned a profit of $650,000 during the last fiscal year compared with a deficit of $22.29 for the previous 12 months.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Matt. 7:13, 14): "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

"Kidnapped" A World-Famous Story. From the world's great stories comes the greatest motion picture and "Kidnapped," which Robert Louis Stevenson considered his best, will prove this axiom to the hit at the Hollywood Theatre July 17, 18, 19.

Warner Baxter portrays in all his swashbuckling, vigorous best, the never-to-be-forgotten Alan Breck, fugitive clansman of the highlands. And Freddie Bartholomew, a size or two larger than when he last appeared so brilliantly on the screen, gives a fine performance to the role of David Balfour, the boy hero of the piece.

The movie takes liberty with the original script in introducing a "heart interest" to the life of Alan Breck. But this reviewer is willing to concede that even Robert Louis Stevenson might have rewritten his story had he known Arleen Whalen.

Costello Comes Back. No doubt about it, this is the year of Comebacks. Not a major studio hasn't its examples. The minors don't count, because it is from them that some of the stars of old are emerging, to compete again in the major leagues of flickery. Others again are returning from England.

Significant is the return of Dolores Costello, this year, Miss Costello started her comeback at Warner Bros. Studio (where she was her greatest fame in other years) in a picture called "Beloved Brat." The picture is the attraction at the Hollywood theatre Friday and Saturday.

Miss Costello, as everyone knows, retired from the screen when she married John Barrymore. Now, back at work, she is delighted at meeting old friends again, and getting back into the exciting whirl of movie-making.

Announcing Bette Davis. In 1935 Bette Davis received the Motion Picture Academy Award for the best screen performance of the year, the most coveted recognition that a star can receive. She won it for her work in "Dangerous." And now, in 1938, it looks very much as though she will again be the winner for her performance in "Jezebel," the drama which comes to the Hollywood theatre on July 20-21.

Quoting Ed Sullivan, movie columnist for New York's Daily News: "Bette Davis in 'Jezebel' is a good bet for the 1938 Academy Award. She's terrific." Sullivan is only one of the country's leading critics who have nominated Bette as their candidate for the honor.

Cast as a devastating siren of New Orleans in pre-Civil war days, Bette's portrayal is said to be magnificent by all the previewers.

Tight-Wadding Through Europe

CHAPTER 45
By HAWES

DER FUHRER SPEAKS

Fuehrer Adolf Hitler is seen in a dramatic closeup as he addressed the people of Austria by radio following his successful invasion. He spoke from the town of Linz, where he spent the first day following his arrival on Austrian soil for the first time in over two decades.

Perhaps Germans of this vicinity who read the chapter last week were not satisfied with the picture it gave of Berlin. Nor was I but it happened to be what I saw—and heard.

However there were explanations. The feeling in Berlin, especially toward the English, was then perhaps more tense than it had been at any time since the World War, and it extended to all English-speaking people. The Americans achieved some of this ill-feeling by the outspoken opposition of the press to Hitler. You did not have to be able to read German to grasp this attitude. Several correspondents of the London Times, semi-official news organ of the English government, were expelled from Berlin the week I was there. Everywhere there were large posters representing Herr Hitler in various heroic poses. In one particularly frequent poster he was depicted as a giant Gulliver standing with folded arms, smiling down contemptuously at a swarm of poisonous, impish Lilliputians, scarce shoe-high to him, representing the foreign newspaper correspondents, who were throwing venomated darts which presumably rattled harmlessly off the Aryan giant. It was about that time also that Mayor LaGuardia of New York City was speaking his piece about Hitler.

I was perhaps in the storm center of this anti-English and Anti-American feeling, in the official center of Berlin. That section was worth seeing once, but if ever I had the good fortune to revisit Germany I would not go back to the Unter Den Linden section again, at least for more than a saunter through it. On the other hand it would be a memorable experience to be able to travel leisurely through the cultured loveliness of Hanover as I saw it from the Berlin-Paris train.

I doubt very much if that difference of atmosphere you sense in Berlin as compared with Copenhagen springs from any essential difference in the people. A comparatively short distance separates them and the people are not widely separated ethnically. How does it come then that you feel the impress of a kindly and humane civilization in Copenhagen and sense on the other hand something dark and threatening in Berlin? It is my impression that the numerical extent and potential strength of the Germanic race group and its geographic position in Europe renders it a political low pressure area, whence spring cyclonic disturbances that are as much the result of pressure without as from within. At least that is the impression I sensed during my short stay on Unter Den Linden, as though I were at the center of great storms, brewing or then in action. I do not believe that the German group or any other can be truthfully considered the villain of the historic piece. They are what circumstances make them more than what they naturally are, and the circumstances that mould them are too vast and indefinite to be grasped by this observer. And as I said to begin with, I saw very little and I believe that I saw that in the worst place in Germany in which to draw any conclusions.

Let's go back to Unter Den Linden during late July, 1937. It is a thrilling and worth-while sight just to look at the great street, even if you do not know the tremendous dramas that have been enacted there. You will be vividly aware that you are not in an American street by the difference in the traffic. There are far less cars than on an American street, and those you see tend to be of the midget type. I did not examine extensively, but I do not remember that I saw one with an American name on it although there were many of the Opel cars made at the Adam Opel plant at Russelsheim, a General Motors-owned concern. The bicycles are numerous and much of the motor traffic is made up of the frequent busses which travel almost in fleets, converging from all parts of the city. I took one of the "roundabout tours" in a Barker bus. It was a "roundabout" with an English speaking guide, and the passengers were mostly Americans. I remember that the German guide was excellent, with a fund of humor, much it apparently impromptu, with which he enlivened the tour. I disliked the conducted tours, however, and this one did not change my opinions. Behind me sat a gentleman who had imbibed too much beer or something and who bellowed at times in opposition to the guide. I took it that the make-up of the passengers did not suit him entirely. "Some of them look like a bunch of sailors," he confided to that section of Berlin. I did not look any too respectable myself and the remark almost annoyed me.

Always the conducted tours stopped at some place of entertainment with which the management must have had some commercial connection. This time it was an outdoor cafe overlooking the Berlin airport. The airport was not impressive compared with some American airports (I understand that a much greater one is under construction or has been opened) and I left the crowd in the cafe and went out on the streets, amusing myself otherwise. All of a sudden I saw that the bus had left the place where it was parked. After a mad gallop I found it, drawn up at the airport entrance and already to go, except for myself and a young American couple. The guide was then out hunting us. I wended my way through the crowded bus (of course I had a seat near the rear and everybody had to get up to TIGHT WADDING THRU — let me through). I heard an American woman who sat directly in front of me say for the benefit of the entire bus: "Seems like you never go anywhere but what somebody is holding up the crowd." Anyway I was not the last in.

On the way back to Unter Den Linden I listened to the general remarks of the above-mentioned lady. Her husband, whom she referred to as "John" was a small friendly-looking individual who sat across the aisle from her and once in a while interjected an attempted joke which she never listened to. She was telling another lady how she came to make the trip. It seems that she and John, or rather she herself, conducted a rooming house. She had done very well in the rooming house. During the sad years of the depression, she said, John had sometimes worried, but she had reassured him: "Never mind, John, you don't have to worry—I've always run this business successfully and I always will."

Dear, dear, how she did love to travel. As soon as she got home she would save up money for another trip. Nobody could say she neglected any of her obligations, though. She had now owed a cent when she left. And when in doubt she always paid plenty. There was the porter at the hotel—she was not sure that she ought to tip him but she had, for no one in this world would ever be able to say that she had not paid every obligation in full. Of course there was Mrs. So and so at home who had hinted that she'd not attend to her religious obligations because she did not go to church Sunday nights, but as she had told John, when she went to church Sunday mornings and to prayer meetings Thursday evenings, as she always did, nobody could ever say that she was really neglectful. It hardly seemed possible that John had disputed the matter.

That was typical of all conducted bus tours. You knew more about the passengers than you did about the town when you got off the bus. The morning after the hectic night, in the position on Unter Den Linden I arose early, and went down to the hotel but I had decided I was taking no more chances and until I left the city I would bank my money and passports at the American Express company office, a block and a half away. A young German clerk waited on me. How long did I want to leave my possessions? Only until 10 o'clock. Oh well, there was no use to bank anything—he would give me a receipt, and I could just leave it the two hours or so. I told him I wanted to get out on the train which left for Paris at 10:57 a. m. I left with him my funds, my steamship and my tickets and my passport, and only enough money for my bill. This I told because I thought it had some connection with the politics taking me in to the German border. I had to go to the clerk that had to go to a district office. I was a little disturbed by the countless sound-

Shirley Has Kiss for Top G-Man

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation, who was made a member of the Variety Club of America at a luncheon given in the main ball room of the Willard hotel in Washington, D. C., where Shirley Temple presented him with a gold engraved membership card in addition to a kiss given to the head G-man as a token from Hollywood.

I paid my bill and took the subway to the depot from which the Paris train left. The train, as usual, was jammed, and seats could not be reserved third class. I was a little early and nailed a seat. Here came a few minutes later an immaculate French gentleman, with pearl gray spats and twisted mustaches, looking as though he had just stepped out of the proverbial handbox. He was a true Frenchman. If the German is by nature reserved, the Frenchman is the opposite. He talked to all and sundry. Within five minutes he knew where I had been and where I was going. Did I have anything to smoke? He would make me ten cigars and when we got to Paris I should buy for him ten cigars. I had a little difficulty persuading him I did not want any cigars.

The train started for Paris and I glued my attention on the sights out of the window. In the suburbs we stopped in what seemed to be a labor camp. There were scores of young men—boys rather—working along the track. The discipline did not seem very strict however for they all stopped work to watch the train while it remained. There was much shouting and apparently not very friendly jibing at the train. One particularly bold and voluble young gentleman seemed to be the official spokesman and humorist and fired at us remarks which his companions greeted with shouts of laughter. He grabbed something on the side of the car and elevated himself to the level of the windows near my compartment.

"Anybody on the train speak English?" he shouted. The other young men shouted and laughed. I got another impression that anti-English demonstrations were not banned. But the train started up and left them behind, and soon we were passing through the most magnificently cultivated landscape I had ever seen.

The Library

FORTUNE—If you want to know world conditions, and especially South American conditions, you should not miss the magnificent illustrated series on South American countries running in Fortune, the July number carrying the article on Argentina. You learn as much as you possibly could from reading, and the pictures of the sophisticated capital, Buenos Aires, and of the industries of the great pastoral stretches of the inland are second only to an actual sight of the country itself. Farmers may be interested in the article on "The County Agent" in the July Fortune, with fine illustrations on country activities. For those who have been around oil fields, the article on "The Deepest Hole in the World," describing the 2 1/2 mile deep well drilled by Continental Oil Company in the San Joaquin Valley, Calif.

FORUM—"They Read by Hand and Ear" in the July Forum develops a subject which the Record touched on in an article on De Jordan—the new "Talking Books" developed by the library of Congress and consisting of the reproduction of books on large phonograph discs for the use of the blind. "Philanthropy From the Grave" deals with the influence on endowed foundations for learning and science in the development of thought. "Are Men Mice" is an amusing debate between Alfred Uhler and Margaret Fishback on whether women like men masterful, and whether or not they are.

COLLIERS—"FULL RATIONS" in the July 9 number tells about eating along the River Plata in Argentina, and also how you can stay at home and go to South America in a culinary way. Some tasty-sounding ideas in the July 9 number, a fine article in which Philip Guedalia gives his explanation of the turn of world events, stating that conditions in Russia, Germany and Italy may be explained from the fact that these are the politically adolescent races of the civilized world, with less than a century of self government in which to learn the lessons that have taken the Anglo-Saxons four or five centuries to acquire.

AVIATION—"Douglas DC-4" a description with many illustrations of the 53,000 pound plane, the largest American commercial land plane. "Boeing 314" describes the great 32,000 pound Pan-American flying plane.

And the joy that comes through giving.
Give me contentment in doing my share
And my life will be worth living.

Inez Irwin Writes on Place of Child

"Unless you do something about it, your children are going to spend most of their days and a large part of their evenings on the street," Inez Haynes Irwin, well known author, says in a challenging article which appears in the current issue of Woman's Day Magazine.

Mrs. Irwin, wife of Will Irwin the novelist, points out the physical perils of playing on city streets, but she is mainly concerned with the danger of idleness which streets develop in growing boys and girls. For idleness, she writes, which at first seems only to induce mere mischief, is apt to develop into serious and dangerous impulses.

Mrs. Irwin urges parents to give their children a place at home where they can entertain their friends, saying that if parents do not invite children and their friends into the house, they will force them into the streets.

"I am an ardent believer in the rights of parents," Mrs. Irwin writes. "I am also an ardent believer in the rights of children. In the main I think children are likely to get the best of it nowadays. But there is a stage in our lives, the period when we are becoming men and women—adolescence—which is so delicate and dangerous that parents should sacrifice all they can to make life pleasant for these developing boys and girls. For in that age any form of healthy diversion possible to the city streets interests them no longer. But there is any amount of unhealthy diversion which will thrill them beyond measure if you are foolish enough to expose them to it.

"And if you turn your boys and girls into the street for their fun they will, each of them, soon divide into two children. There will be one child that you see about the house, discontented, sullen, secretive. And there will be another child that you will never see at all. For the moment he gets onto the street he becomes cocky, bullying, full of the wrong kind of knowledge and showing it; on the way to becoming a tough citizen if not worse.

"But how can I prevent this you are saying to yourself. "There is only one thing you can do—and this goes not only for you, city-mother, but for you too, beach-mother and country-mother—you must give your children a place in their home where they may entertain their friends. Remember it has always been as much their home as yours. In this dangerous age of adolescence it should be more their home than yours. In other words, either you must invite your children and their friends into the house or you will force them out of it onto the streets."

New Law Conceals Party Preference in Primary Election

Leon D. Case, Secretary of State, who according to law is the chief election official, calls attention to Act No. 37, P. A. of 1937, which provides for a secret ballot at partisan primaries throughout the state. Its purpose is to eliminate the necessity of an elector disclosing his or her party preference, as has been the requirement heretofore.

Under the old law, when a voter visited the polling place to vote in a partisan primary election, the clerk, after locating the voter's name and address in the poll book and determining that you were a qualified voter, asked which party ticket was preferred and gave you the ticket or ballot requested.

Under the new law, the voter, after being certified by the election clerk, will be handed a set of ballots, each bearing the same number and stapled together in the upper left hand corner. The election inspector who hands out the ballots, instructs the voter to vote one of the ballots only. The voter takes these ballots into the voting compartment and marks the party ticket preferred. After marking the ballot the voter detaches it from the other ballots and folds it with the perforated or numbered corner outside. The voter hands both ballots, folded the same and separately, to the election inspector, designating the voted ballot by saying, "I've marked this one," "I voted this one," or by some other indicating words. The inspector will then place the marked ballot in the ballot box marked "Voted Ballots" and the blank ballots in the box marked "Blank Ballots." At no time will any one be able to tell the party affiliation of the voter.
