Union State Bank Buys City Bonds

Interest Rate of 2% by Local Bank Sets Low Record in Buchanan Bond Issues

The city of Buchanan attained the distinction of being the first town along the St. Joseph River to definitely contract the installation of a sewage disposal plant...

The Dowagiac firm was awarded the contract at a special meeting Friday evening, being the low bidder among thirteen contractors with a figure of $50,150.

They started Monday on the ground work on the plant location on the acreage bought by the city a number of years ago from Bainton Brothers.

Messrs. Cole, Moore & Geupel, who have had wide experience in installation of disposal plants, state that the location of the Buchanan plant is the most beautiful that they have seen to date.

Street commissioner Edward Mitchell started work Monday morning with a force of fifteen men, laying a two-inch water pipe 900 feet through the city tract to the plant.

Sell Bonds for 2% What is believed to be a record for a low-interest issue of Buchanan municipal bonds was registered at the special meeting, with the purchase by the Union State Bank of Buchanan of the $35,000 issue to finance the city's share of the plant cost, the local bank offering the money at 2% interest, and giving the city a premium of $127.50.

Hollywood Installs New Sound Screen

Manager Hoffman today stated that he has just finished installing a new WAKER SOUND SCREEN in the Hollywood Theatre. This screen is the last word in theatre screens, and is the first of its kind to be installed in Michigan.

It eliminates all eyestrain and makes every picture a delight to watch. It is especially adapted to the projection of Technicolor pictures, and brings out all the delicate color hues heretofore not seen. It is set back on the stage 20 feet from the first row of seats, which gives you a perfect view from any seat in the theatre.

Softball

The final week of regular scheduled games were played last week with some very nice play in all the games. The lead in both leagues tightened up until now there are two teams tied for the leadership in each league.

Tuesday night the Poorman's Grocery team hammered out an easy victory over the Future Farmers by the count of 17 to 0. Poorman pitched four hit ball for his team while the Poorman team hammered out sixteen hits off of Rotzein and Kline.

Deeds got a home run with a man-on in this game. Hattenback got three hits in four tries and Jim Liska got three hits and a walk in four tries.

The other game Tuesday night saw the funniest sort of a softball game ever played on the diamond. The Presbyterian church came near beating the Bakertown ten but their seven run rally in the seventh inning fell one run shy of its mark and consequently they lost 16 to 15.

Each team collected eleven hits. Liska and Batterson and also Bainton pitched for the winners. Poorman and H. Hamlin, wined for the church ten.

Wednesday night Sherburn set the Dry Zero ten down with three hits to win for the Foundry by the count of 10 to 1. H. Rudlaff seemed to have what the Foundry hitters were wanting for they tied off on him for nine hits.

Five errors hurt Rudlaff's efforts somewhat. Sherburn got two hits to lead his team in hitting. Houswerth got two for the losers.

In the final game Boyce and Phillips 66 hooked up in what started to be a good ball game but turned out to be a forfeit to the Phillips 66 team.

With the score against them the Boyce ten tried some stalling acts but they failed as Umpire Chain called the game a forfeit as the Boyce ten waited patiently for rain.

Thursday night the Clark Office defeated the Buchanan Business men 13 to 2. Post pitched five hit ball for the winners while his mates slapped S. Boyce, Martin and Swem for thirteen hits. Six runs in the first was topped off by five more in the fourth for the easy victory. Elmer Keyes showed he could still swing the bat as he got two doubles and a triple in three times at bat for the Office ten.

Writes History Dayton Church

The following history of the Dayton Methodist church by Mrs. Flora Jennings formed an interesting part of the program held at the Home Coming there Sunday.

The writing of the early history of the Dayton church has proven to be a rather difficult task as accounts seem to differ to a great degree, especially the very beginning of Methodism in this part of the country. But by gleaning a bit here and a bit there I have tried to link together things I have heard and read about the beginning over a hundred years ago, and fit them the best I can to the authentic facts of later times.

In 1833 the first church organization in Southwest Michigan West of the St. Joe River was formed and meetings were held in the B. F. Redding home a mile and a half southeast of the spot where the Mt. Zion Church was built. Later the services were held in the Currier Cabin which stood in the Currier orchard between the Currier homestead and the Frank Straub home.

In 1865 at the General Conference in Albion, a circuit of three churches was organized, the aforesaid church being one of them. This circuit was put in charge of a local preacher and during that year 3 new preaching places were added, making six at the end of the year, some of them country school-houses, and some villages.

The next fall the first ordained minister came to the charge, a young man, I. N. Skinner. About this time or perhaps a little before, the railroad was built through Dayton and it soon became quite a thriving village with several stores, blacksmith shops, wagon works, lumber yard, grist mill and so on.

After a 2 year pastorate Rev. Skinner left and Rev. J. S. Valentine was sent with eight preaching places to serve. At the next annual conference the circuit was divided and given to two pastors. For the first year after the church was built here, Dayton was a charge by itself.

After 1873 the Annual Conference again changed the circuit, and it then consisted of Dayton, Weesaw, and New Troy. There had been a parsonage in Dayton for quite some time, and during this year the mortgage on it was paid off. Through many succeeding years the church grew spiritually and in numbers, being served by the following:

Famous Violin Performer Here

Florizel von Reuter of Germany is Guest of Miss Winna Roe

Florizel von Reuter, known throughout the world of music as one of the greatest living violinists, arrived here Tuesday in company with his mother, Mrs. Grace Reuter, to visit until today at the home of the latter's friend of long standing, Miss Winna Roe.

Their acquaintance with Miss Roe dates to the times when he was acquiring celebrity in Chicago as a boy prodigy with the violin. His mother took him there when he was four years old, placing him under the tutelage of Max Bendix, then concert master for the Theodore Thomas orchestra. He remained in Chicago three years, becoming during that time a protege of the Hon. Lyman J. Gage, one time secretary of the treasury, who became greatly interested in him. At the age of seven he was so far advanced that it was thought best that he study in Europe. Free passage to London was provided for the boy and his mother by President McKinley, and Mrs. McKinley decorated their steamer cabin with flowers from the White House.

He received his diploma of graduation from the Conservatory of Music in Geneva at the age of 10. He is said authentically to be the youngest child ever awarded such a diploma. After a fine tutelage under the best violin teachers of Europe he was suddenly obliged at an early age to earn his living. Since the beginning of his public career he has played in many countries in Europe, America, South America and the Orient, and has at various times in his career enjoyed the patronage of the royal families of England, Sweden, Roumania, Greece, Bulgaria, Austria and Russia. At the age of ten he played for Theodore Roosevelt at the White House, twice in Carnegie Hall, twice in Boston, once with the Boston Symphony under Gerlicke and in other concerts, while touring America as a boy prodigy.

He has composed three operas and many orchestral and solo violin works, and has written a number of books on musical and occult subjects.

He makes his home at present at Stettin, Germany, and is in the employ of the German government as director of musical activities for the province of Pomerania. For three years previous to 1934 he was first violin teacher at the State Academy at Vienna, Austria. He was recently offered a similar position at Tokio and at the capital of Turkey. Because of his German extraction, the German government has classed him as a German, although he is American born and still claims citizenship here. He is here at this time arranging a series of concert appearances and lectures to be given in America during the latter part of 1938 and 1940. He states that he expects to transfer his headquarters to America and establish his residence here at that time.

To Apply for PWA Schoolhouse Grant

The Buchanan school board met Monday evening to consider action pursuant to the reception of three petitions for the construction of additional school facilities, one signed by residents of the Burkhardt addition, one by residents of Liberty Heights, and one by the city at large. The meeting was attended by a Lansing school architect, who was instructed to draw up plans and estimates, which will be made the basis of an application for a PWA grant for 45% of the cost.

Joshua Harner and son, Vernon Harper and family, and Mrs. Roxy Snyder of Berrien Springs, visited Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lingo. Mr. Lingo had just arrived home from the hospital.

Around About Buchanan

He Traps Turtles If turtle is about your speed in the menu line you should contact Deb Voorhees who is a turtle by profession. That is, he makes a business out of trapping them along the St. Joseph river for regular customers in Buchanan and South Bend. Several customers take a turtle a week. In a local restaurant the menu turns turtle every Thursday, depending on Voorhees for the wherewithal. Last week Deb caught a 19 pound turtle. His all-time turtle was a 42 pound one caught two years ago, which fed over 200 people at the grand opening of Meusel's brewery, South Bend.

120 Kinds of Narcissus This is not exactly a seasonable note but Mr. and Mrs. Lester Mitchell are now planning to plant about 30 more varieties of narcissus at their home on West Chicago street, which, added to the 90 they already have, will make a total of 120 kinds. When they come in bloom next spring the show will be worth seeing and we, for one, don't intend to miss it.

Pays For Record for Fiftieth Year

The Berrien County Record ought to have an organization among its readers under some such titles as the "Golden Subscribers Club" for those who have taken the paper fifty years or more. If we did, Jerome Seabast would not be eligible for membership as he paid for his fiftieth year Thursday morning. And that, as the fellow said, is loyalty and consistency for you.

A FARM REVOLUTION IN METHODS

"Did you combine this year and how did you like it?" That's one of the stock questions among farmers this year and to "combine" does not mean to join a union or a co-operative society either. What it means is to have your wheat, barley, rye, beans or what have you cut and threshed at one combined operation with a "combine."

And don't make any mistake, the discussion involves a revolution in the basic economy of farming. The farmer, just as the manufacturer or any other producer not in business for their collective health, takes a realistic view of the situation. He just wants to know which will pay best.

"Think about all the men combines will throw out of work," one farmer was admonished.

"I can't help that," was the answer. "I'm competing with big-scale combine farming in the west in grain raising. Nobody thinks of that factor in any other business."

One of the chief objections to date has been the straw problem. If the straw is spread over the fields where the grain crop served as cover for a new hay crop, it may decrease the value of the first hay cutting next year. But the combine makers have evolved a new attachment that will windrow it. Then the farmer can throw three windrows together with a side delivery rake and stack the straw in his barn.

A notion of what the Buchanan wheat raiser is competing with is related by L. A. Bratton, who farms the former Richard Kean place two miles southwest of Buchanan. He came here from district in Oklahoma where 10,000 acres of wheat was not an unusual planting for a single farmer. His own father raised as much as 15,000 acres at a time. They prepared the land with a "one-way" a disc which served for a plow. Trailing a ten foot disc which threw the ground all one way, behind a large tractor, they drove steadily day and night with relief drivers, preparing 160 acres a day. All these holdings are harvested with large combines, standard harvesting equipment being a combine to every thousand acres. One farmer of his acquaintance handled annually about 10,000 bushels, his equipment consisting of 15 tractors, 11 combines and seven trucks.

In good years they have raised as high as sixty bushels to the acre on large fields. But they have suffered from drouth for eight years. Planting costs on a crop of wheat are about $1 per acre, or $10,000 for a 10,000 acre holding. A steady drain of $10,000 per year with small or no returns has bankrupted many of these farmers.

Glendora Beaten by Niles Merchants 10-5

The Niles Merchants made 8 runs in the first inning off the pitching of F. Prenkert to win the game from Glendora. No longer in good pitching form due to a soreness in his arm, Prenkert was replaced by Vic Hartline who did very well, allowing only 2 runs to come in during the eight innings-of play that were left. Much credit should be given him as he hasn't pitched since he pitched for New Troy high school. Much to Hartline's credit he struck out several men and made good hits while he was up to bat. D. Stanard was right up and at them, making two 2-baggers. The pitcher for the Niles Merchants was Pristeen; the catcher was Bishop. Prenkert and V. Hartline were pitchers for Glendora, while S. Stybuski was catcher. Niles Merchants had 14 hits, 10 runs and 4 errors, while Glendora had 9 hits, 5 runs and 1 error.

7 1/2 Ft. Black Snake Drops Thru Ceiling

If you can figure out how you would feel if a 7 1/2 foot snake practically dropped about your neck, why that is the way John Runyon felt when a big black snake dropped through the ceiling of his home on the floor beside him.

He and Mrs. Runyon had just returned from Buchanan but that, Mr. Runyon insists, is no explanation for the snake. Mrs. Runyon went in the house first and had passed through the kitchen to an adjoining room. Mr. Runyon had just entered the kitchen when—plump! comes this snake on the floor. With a wild yell, Runyon shot he blew the snake into kingdom come, and also a big hole through the kitchen floor.

Tight-Wadding It Through Europe

CHAPTER 49
By HAWES

It hardly seems possible, when I call it to mind, that it was only a year ago this time or a couple of weeks earlier that I was dodging hither and thither in Europe on a third class ticket and the spur of the moment.

Now and then a picture in the rotogravures—a parade on the Champs-Elysees, a labor riot in the Latin Quarter of Paris, the Place D' La Concord, and it comes back with a rush that short time ago I wandered there like a soul from an alien world.

I did not see many of the "things that should be seen" in Paris, but I saw a lot and left satisfied, in firm possession of the all-time record for having caught the right bus going the wrong way more times than any other tourist in a similar time.

One reason I was quite successful getting about in Paris was because I evolved a system of getting about. I could speak no word of French so that a Frenchman had the remotest idea what I was saying—unless it were "parlez vous Anglais?" But I had maps and after I had decided where I wanted to go I wrote the name of the place on a piece of paper and under it wrote "bus?" This I would show to a traffic officer, who would instantly comprehend and write the number of the bus I must take, and wave his hand in the general direction I must go to take it. I would drift that way, stop at a bus station and mount the first vehicle of that number. When I paid my fare I would again show the paper with the name of my destination to the conductor and he would wave his hands wildly, talking volubly in French and pointing in all directions, whereon I would understand perfectly that this bus went the wrong way.

The rest was simple. I would get off and wait for a bus going the other way. I found the traffic officers and bus conductors in Paris uniformly agreeable and helpful in intention at least. They not only kept close tab over me to see that I got off at the right place, but on several occasions when I saw something that attracted me and decided to get off forthwith, they would seek forcibly to detain me, apparently under the impression that I did not know what I was doing. These contests were always in good humor but sometimes quite spirited. Sometimes I got away; other times the conductor's grip was too good and I rode on to the original destination.

The first thing I wished to see in Paris was Notre Dame cathedral. Once I had found it I made the real discovery of my Parisian visit—the old Latin quarter surrounding the University of Paris. Like all main tourist objectives the cathedral was a disappointment. One reason was, of course, that I expected too much; the main reason was that it seemed impossible to venerate a great historical building, while packs and packs of chattering tourists thronged it.

I came to the cathedral only with rather dim associations from my youthful reading of Victor Hugo's "Hunchback of Notre Dame" and other memories of reading of the great rose window and the famous gargoyles. It was my plain duty of course, to sit reverent, palpitating in the presence of a historic and religious shrine. But reverence never came to order, and I merely sat a while in a back seat and confusedly watched innumerable conducted tours wending up and down the aisles, amid a babel of barkers lecturing on the details impossible to remember, and which were being busily scribbled by hundreds of pencils into hundreds of notebooks—how this statue at this shrine was the gift of the Duke of some place or other in the year Umpty-seven—and if you will notice the detail it is a fine example of the art of some place or other etc, etc.

Out in front there was a clamorous hammering where an army of workmen were putting up bleachers seating about 6,000 for the presentation of a sacred Mystery play and at every turn you were buttonholed by agents selling tickets to the performance. Anyway I had once attained the real atmosphere of a cathedral, when I paid the caretaker of the Cathedral of Upsala to let me in at the twilight hour and walked the aisles alone. The experience was not easily repeated.

After an hour in the cathedral, finding reverence and interest much below par, I wandered out and across the Seine on the old stone bridge, into a tangle of narrow winding streets threading canons through antique buildings. For hundreds of yards along the river opposite the cathedral were long rows of open air bookstalls, whose presence gave me the first inkling that I was near the old Latin quarter. Further back in the narrow streets were many more streets stalls, where I found old Latin books published in the 1500's and the 1600's for prices ranging from 8 cents (2 francs) to 50 cents and a dollar. It was an eye-opener on the value of old books. More interesting than the old books were those rare unworldly types you saw back in the interiors of the book stores, serving the trade or poring over the books. Pale, scholarly, abstracted types of men, looking as though they were 95% mind and 5% body, such as I never saw anywhere else. It confirmed what I had heard, that the educated Frenchman is the most intellectual type in the world.

But to a person of somewhat less than 95% mind, the open air restaurants of the Latin quarter were even more interesting. And to a low, calculating tightwadder those "fixed pris" (fixed price) signs were most interesting of all. Pleasant it was to read that there you might be served with a full banquet from potage (soup) to dessert and including your choice of hors d' oeuvres and a bottle of red or white wine, all for 6 1/2 francs (about 25 cents). Reassured by the throngs, of well dressed diners in even the cheaper cafes, many of them evidently students or professors, I entered the cafe St. Germaine, for it was the noon-hour and only a roll and a glass of cafe had staid me in the morning.

Opposite me at the little table sat a handsome young negro, very intelligent looking and his equally goodlooking wife. They were typical of the international aspect of the quarter. I tried a little English on him and he answered me in excellent "American."

"You're from America?" I asked. I saw him flinch a little, and he and his wife exchanged a fleeting glance. "No," he answered, with perfect courtesy, "We're from the English colony of Haiti but I've been in America a lot."

I gathered that they felt that to an American a negro had an inferior status. But in their bearing and appearance there was evidence of education and social standing. It must be different in Haiti. The young Haitian helped me select a course from the bewildering array of offerings on the menu and I did quite well, although I was not certain what I ate all the time. But the meat dishes were delicious and the cooking was generally excellent even in these cheap cafes.

Through and out of the Cafe St. Germaine I wandered on and presently I saw another cafe which looked most interesting. I would go in there, and order another bowl of soup, I thought, just for an excuse to look it over.

It seemed easy. I sat at a table and a little waiter of an extreme Latin type, with twisted mustachios, came to take my order. I had no interpreter here, but I knew that "potage" was soup and at that I pointed.

The waiter greeted this decision with gestures numberless and salvos of remarks apparently of a highly appreciative character. I inferred he wished to know the rest of the order. I shook my head, shrugged depreciatively in the Latin way signifying I wanted nothing more. At last the waiter was apparently satisfied he knew my wishes.

Away he went; back came the soup, and he left me to my sippings and observations. But only for a time. Presently here he came with an armful of dishes. I was aghast. Apparently one of the things I said or one of the motions I had made had reminded him of something to eat and he had sent in an order on that basis.

Desperately I tried to think what Marco Polo or Richard Haliburton might have done under similar circumstances. I grabbed the card and tapped insistently on "potage": I said "billet," "bill," "price" and everything else I could think of that might make him understand I wanted only my bill. I pried open my Swedish-made pocket book with the tightwad clasp on it, and rattled some money in my palm.

He understood everything and agreed with everything; he smiled bowed, spread his hands, waved them, he gathered up all the dishes and left, while I continued my observations of foreign and exotic types and waited leisurely for my bill.

Back he came in a moment—with another bowl of soup. The situation demanded stern measures. I shoved back the soup and rose to my feet with a mixture of what I considered sternness and dignity, pointed at the price opposite "potage" and laid exactly that much on the table. Not even 10% tip more.

He understood at last. A look of genuine dismay came over his face; he picked up the bowl of soup, murmuring apologetically. I walked out and he stood looking after me with a sorrowful look on his face. Still distrustful of what I had read of the hasty Latin temperament, I had visions of him hastily flying in to an opposite mood, grasping a carving knife and pursuing me.

However he did not; my last remembrance of him was standing watching me leave with sorrow and apology in every line and feature even to the droop of his handlebar mustachios. He certainly was a lot more polite than I was. I hope he did not have to pay for the extra dishes. I should have given him a good tip. I have never been satisfied with my own conduct on this occasion. (To be Continued)

She's a Penny-Pincher Everyone has determined at one time or another to save pennies, but leave it to Glenda Farrell to save them in a big way. For the past three years, the star of "Blondes at Work" has been putting every odd penny she ever got into a small packing case. The case is almost full now but she refuses to count them until she can't get another cent in the case.

DO YOU KNOW— That Freddie Bartholomew was trained by professional English oarsmen for his race scene in "Lord Jeff" coming Sunday. That Mickey Rooney, who plays Terry, with Freddie Bartholomew in "Lord Jeff" mastered a clarinet and led his boys' orchestra in three hours of practice? That Peter Lawford, who plays Benny with Freddie Bartholomew and Mickey Rooney in "Lord Jeff" is the son of Lieutenant General Sir Sydney Lawford, K. C. B., a distinguished British war hero?

He ended up by buying a hat to soothe the worried clerk, although he really didn't need one. SALE STARTS FRIDAY
Prosperity Sale Sweeping Country
New Low Prices, New Business,
New Merchandise
Gamble's Prosperity Builder Campaign which started in July is literally taking the entire Middlewest by storm. It has been greeted with open arms by manufacturers, factory workers and farmers, as well as customers. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of merchandise has been bought and sold. Thousands upon thousands of people have been put to work. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of raw materials have been turned into manufactured merchandise. This great campaign is not only successful in the Gamble organization but it is being followed by other manufacturers and retailers throughout the entire country.

During the month of August we have invited more manufacturers to co-operate in this great sale and they have accepted the invitation with enthusiasm. Such an opportunity, many of them said, could not be turned down. Here was a chance to help the country, to help the consumer, to help the producer of raw material and to help their employees. Many of the values in this August Prosperity Sale are even better than our July Sale. We urge you to take advantage of these rare bargains.

For your comfort and enjoyment we have just installed a new WALKER SOUND SCREEN which is the last word in theatre screens, and is the first of its kind to be installed in Michigan.
This screen eliminates all eyestrain and is especially adapted to the projection of technicolor pictures, and brings out all of the delicate color hues heretofore not seen.
We have set this screen back on the stage, 20 feet from the first row of seats, which gives you a perfect view from any seat in the theatre.
Be among the first to see this improvement which was made to increase your enjoyment of our fine screen entertainment.
E. C. HOFFMAN, Manager.
