Clark Equipment Co. Develops New Train Unit for Fast City Service

Made for Subway, Elevated Trains

Experimental Unit Now Being Built at Battle Creek for New York Line

A recent experimental development by the Clark Equipment company which appears promising at this date is the new three-section, light-weight, streamlined car under construction at the Battle Creek plant for the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit company for experimental use on their elevated and subway lines in New York.

This new car, heralded as giving a faster, smoother, quieter and cleaner ride than anything now in use on elevated and subway lines, is scheduled to be completed by the first of the year. It will then be used for some time, and if it meets the requirements of the transit company it may enter the production stage late next year.

The car is an outgrowth of the modern street car developed by the Clark Equipment Co., about two years ago and now in use in many great cities of the United States and Canada, in numbers running from 20 to 200. Chicago has 83 in use on the Madison-Monroe circuit west from the Loop. This street car was in turn an outgrowth of the "autotram" developed about six years ago for railway passenger purposes and displayed at the Chicago Century of Progress exposition. While the autotram never caught on in a large way, the street car has demonstrated its success and has made substantial progress.

Officials of the Clark Equipment stated that they had entered the railway field with the idea that static conditions and slow development in that line in recent years made it a promising field for experiment. Engineers in charge of the development of the new car ordered by the New York company are enthusiastic over its possibilities, and predict that it will outmode the most recent metropolitan street transit equipment. While it is being built for use in the Brooklyn-Manhattan area of New York City, its development is also being sponsored by the Chicago Surface Lines. It is believed that its noiselessness will render it especially suitable for elevated line use.

The new car is a three-section, lightweight, streamlined unit mounted on four trucks. The body is being constructed of aluminum alloy and the trucks are rubber cushioned to minimize noise and shock. The car adapts to rapid transit operation in subways and on elevated lines all of the innovations of the modern street car developed by the Clark Equipment company two years ago.

The great increase in lightness also gives it marked advantage in quick pick-up, as it will have nearly twice the power per ton of weight as the conventional car. It will be mechanically ventilated with filtered air. The motors will be used for stopping as well as starting.

Through the use of rubber and precision gears practically all of the roar and rumble of the conventional elevated car will be eliminated, according to the engineers in charge, because of lighter weight and greater power, acceleration will be nearly as fast as in an automobile.

The three-section car will be eighty feet long, with a total seating and standing capacity of over 200. The New York lines will be able to operate seven of the cars in a train with capacity of over 2,100. It is estimated that in quantity production the cars can be built for 70% of the cost of those now in use.

The trucks to be used are the same as those in use for the new street cars, with contact shoes to pick up power from the third rail and automatic stop devices for use with block signal systems will be added. Rubber springs on the truck will support the body. The wheels will be rubber sandwiches—the metal tire and the central part of the wheel being separated by a layer of rubber.

Substantial saving in weight is made by the use of aluminum alloy. The new car, fully loaded, will weigh about 30% less than standard equipment now in use. An important feature will be the three

Late Lura Pears Wrote Story of Beginning of Buchanan Schools

First Session Held in Log Hut with Puncheon Floor on River Street

The following story of the beginnings of Buchanan's schools was written by the late Mrs. C. F. Pears, to be read before a meeting of the Thirty Club. It is here reproduced as especially appropos for the opening week of school.

History of Buchanan's First School In the early days, when only four families lived in this town, it was not called Buchanan, but McCoy's Creek, and was so called until 1843. At that time Buchanan extended north as far as Fourth street and south as far as Front street.

In 1842 the first school-house was in Hiram Weese's blacksmith shop (the location is directly across the street from the Spafford home of today) and the teacher was Miss Angie Bird.

A log hut with floor made of logs split in halves—flat side up—called puncheon floors. The benches were made of the same kind of timbers with holes in each end and stakes driven in for them to stand on. The anvil and big bellows were stored in a corner of the room. Jane, Joseph and Nancy Mansfield were three of the pupils.

In the winter of 1843 a new frame school house was built on the lot now owned by Mrs. Searls—just south of the Kent home. The house was a two-story frame dwelling and the teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Fellows, lived above and had the school room below. There was a big board over the school room door saying Niles Academy. In the spring of 1843 three girls—Mary Cathcart, Charity Munger and Jane Mansfield took the first teacher's examination given here. Jane was not 15 years old and this is her story of the examination:

"We got there on time Saturday—2 p. m. L. P. Alexander was chairman and told us to be seated. The three men were seated in the three chairs—all there were in the room. There was a board bench and we took that, L. P. did all the talking—had books to ask questions from and he asked as he thought best like we were in a class—just an off-hand way. We read from a book he gave us—each reading a part. He took very close notice of the others and I suppose did of me. We passed the one book we had. Then he said: 'You may stand up to spell.' All my hopes vanished for I was not a good speller, hard as I tried; but fate favored me and I did spell well. Then he said: 'You may each write your address'—then said we might go home. The next Monday morning a boy brought me a paper from Mr. Alexander—a certificate for teaching one year."

In 1854, a Mrs. Hart had a select school in the house now owned by Orma Chamberlain's father.

In June, 1856, the brick school house on Dewey avenue was dedicated. During the winter of 1860 the overflow from this school was held in the rooms where Desenberg's store is now situated. Miss Maria Samson was the teacher.

On Friday, Jan. 12, the high school building was dedicated with great rejoicing. Cress Roe, with his snare drum, headed the procession of pupils—each of them carrying a flag as they marched from the old to the new school home. The first teachers here were Mr. Laird and Mrs. Estes.

The first graduation was in '77 and the girl graduates were Emma Smith (Knight), Mannie Hamilton (Pillington), Lillie Howe (Smith), Nettie Bainton (Snyder), Fannie Woodworth (Baker).

Sewage Disposal Plant Erected on Site McCoy's Creek Settlement

Shingle Mills, Grist Mills, Furniture Factories, Stood on Tract

One of many reasons which the tract of land on which the sewage disposal plant is being built would be a fitting site for a city park and picnic ground is that it is virtually the cradle of the town—the site where Buchanan had its beginning as a settlement.

The McCoy's creek settlement undoubtedly lay on the city tract, and on the stream bed below, now owned in large part by L. B. Spafford. There were four water power sites within that distance, one where the remnants of the Bainton mill are still seen, one small one just below on the city tract, used only in very earliest times, one back of the Spafford home where the "old red mill" of L. P. Fox stood, and the last one powering the sawmill which was operated 60 and 70 years ago by Azariah Wagner.

The best known of these sites is the Bainton Mill site, near the present sewer outlet. William Bainton, Sr., the grandfather of Kelsey Bainton, owned the tract then and installed the dam. With his brother-in-law he bought an old building which had served as a warehouse on the wharf at New Buffalo when that was the terminal of the Michigan Central. He moved this structure to the dam site, and then rented the layout to H. S. Black and C. S. Black, who operated a furniture factory there for many years. The structure, 50 feet wide, 150 feet long and 4 stories high, was known locally as "Fort Sumpter." The Blacks (H. S. was a brother of George Black and C. S. an uncle) moved in the structure in 1860 and for years they paid Bainton $250 a month rent.

In those days McCoy's creek carried a larger head of water, and the brush dam of the Bainton's backed up a sizable mill pond, which included a part of the present site of the Clark plant. It was because of the instability of this brush dam that the Blacks decided to move their factory away in 1876. They secured the circular structure which was constructed about 1870 just back of the present site of the Clark greenhouse. This had been built as a floral hall when Buchanan aspired to the county fair. When that movement lapsed it had been turned into a winter skating rink, flooded with water raised from McCoy's creek by an archimedian screw. The Blacks secured a stationary steam engine, and erected additional buildings.

The Bainton's then put in a heavier dam and went into the milling business. Their power was at first provided by an immense wheel about 40 feet across and casting in its buckets a sixteen-foot water fall. Later they installed a turbine. The writer believes (but will not here distinctly commit himself) that the location of the L. P. Fox grist mill just below the L. B. Spafford home was the real cradle of the city, where Charles Cowles built his shingle mill, which was purchased about 1936 by Dr. C. C. Wallin, grandfather of Van Wallin of the Dry-Zero executive force. Dr. Wallin added a grist mill, the first of the vicinity.

Still further down was the sawmill operated in the seventies by Azariah Wagner. This was one of the pioneer upright or "muley" saws, which could turn out about 1,000 feet of lumber a day. Wagner had a cultivated field near the mill and the story runs that he would plant the field to corn yearly and plow it while he operated the saw. It took some time for the old upright to saw through a log lengthwise, and when it went through it was automatically kicked off. The saw was geared to the revolutions of the mill wheel and it was possible to change the gearing according to the nature of the wood, slowing the saw down for softer woods such as tulip and poplar and speeding it up for harder varieties as oak and walnut.

New Ballot Will Hide Party Vote

Taxpayers Must Apply for Special Bonding Ballot

While it cannot be said that the new Michigan ballot system providing for secrecy in party allegiance, to be voted for the first time at the primaries Tuesday, Sept. 13, is not exactly intricate, only careful attention on the part of the voters will avoid considerable invalidation of ballots.

The voter will be supplied with two ballots, a Republican and a Democrat, of the same color, fastened together with a clip. The ballots alternate in sequence, the Democrat ballot being on top in every other set and the remainder Republican. At the school of instruction for election workers held at the county seat last week it was recommended that each voter detach the ballot he intends to vote, leaving the clip on the one he does not intend to vote. He will be required to fold both the same and take them to the election officials. He will tell them which he is voting and which ballot is blank and they will deposit them accordingly. If for any reason the voter makes a mistake in informing the officials which ballot he voted and they both go into wrong boxes, that vote will be irrevocably lost, as the ballots in the box of blanks will be destroyed without being checked.

Official Bond Ballot

To authorize the Board of Supervisors to issue bonds for $71,500.00 for the purpose of making payment of Berrien County's share of the cost of erection of a new county jail and heating system on the site of the present county jail, with the benefit of a grant from the United States of $68,500.00.

Tax Raise Ballot

"Shall the total amount of taxes assessed against property in the county for all purposes except taxes levied for payment of principal and interest on obligations incurred prior to December 8, 1932, be increased for a period of five years from 1938 to 1942, both inclusive, from 1.5% to 1.6% of the assessed valuation of all property in the county, as provided by Section 21, of Article X, of the Constitution of the State of Michigan."

To authorize the Board of Supervisors to issue and sell bonds for $165,000 for the purpose of making payment of Berrien County's share of the cost of improving the county court house, with the benefit of a grant from the United States of $135,000.

Now Here's the Proposition

So That the Public May Know

It has been the practice of this paper for many years to look with a kindly eye on the enthusiastic reports of incoming fishermen, and to print without investigation or censorship all of their offerings, including size and species of fish, bait used, manner of landing, and all that goes into a complete fish story.

We did this in the knowledge that the public is not critical about accuracy in the matter of fish stories, and that they are forewarned that if there is any discrepancy in reported lengths, or weights they will not be in the way of underestimation. They do not object nor does the hero of the fishy tale object if the writer lets go a little on his own and sort of gives the story a hat and cane.

In consequence of this policy we have printed as was the offerings, of such representative fishermen as Ed Mitchell, Bob Franklin, Chic Franklin, Mort Snyder, Art Allen, Carl Remington, A. B. McClure, Ike Kollhoff, E. N. Schram, not to mention others, and while we do not in any way reflect on this list the public can look it over and draw their own conclusions as to the chances we have taken.

We have to report that undue ad-fish. Whether the doctor landed the But it is with genuine pain that we have to report that undue advantage has been taken of our tolerance in two fish stories of the past week, in which others than the principals sought to mislead us and thereby involve us in difficulty. For there is no deadlier insult to the true piscatorial fan than to have a mammoth catch he has made attributed to another person.

Consequently when two large bass caught at Fuller's Resort, Clear Lake, during the past week are variously attributed to four different persons, we realize that the matter is delicate and consequently we lay the matter before our public. It is not of consequence that the size of the fish was variously reported from 5 to 15 pounds, unless of course any of the reports underestimated them.

But it is of consequence that from sources of more or less accuracy we were informed that the two fish were caught by Floyd Hartline, Bob Canfield, Mike Lundgren and a South Bend doctor. And intermingled with these reports there was a wild confusion of detail. One story concerns a 6½ pound bass which was either

Socialized Medicine

Says the Charlotte-Tribune: Socialized medicine is more and more in the news. Off hand we are against it and yet today thousands of people cannot command the services of medical men educated through the medium of taxes paid toward the support of our great state universities. You may have known and forgotten that this county, for example, pays in taxes $1,000 per year per student for every Eaton county boy and girl attending the U. of M. Shouldn't this tax bill guarantee medical service in our smaller villages, many of which have been without such care weeks on end? It's all right to specialize but what about the lower bracket majority of the social order who put up proportionate costs, which total sum produces this highly efficient medical skill? The public must come first, even to a point of a cash subsidy, to serve our small centers of population. Medical men may as well accept the premise that the public interest has a very definite place in this question. It is a mere matter of an equality in professional services as well as taxation.

Youth Interested in the Rosicrucian Order

News that Marvin Gross, former Buchanan boy and one of the most brilliant students ever turned out by the Buchanan high school, and now pursuing advanced musical studies in Philadelphia, was a delegate to an international convocation of the Rosicrucian order at San Jose, Calif., in July, representing the city of Philadelphia. The incident was given to the Record by one of several young men of Buchanan who have been interested in the Rosicrucian Order. Being somewhat of an ignoramus ourselves but deeply interested in any indication of direction of thinking on the part of youth, we asked one of the local members of the Order to tell us just what enticed his interest. Not being able to gauge the depth of our ignorance in the subject he did not manage to fully talk down to our level, but he did tell us that a main point in the credo or articles of belief which is pertinent to the present is its insistence on international and interracial equality.

also its insistence that any nation which bases its program on racial antagonism is doomed to defeat. He cited Germany and Japan.

He also prepared the following article on some of the news of the order:

From out of Enigmatic India came an invitation for the American Delegation to study its ancient mystic arts and sciences, for the purpose of later admitting the delegation into the sanctuaries of Tibet.

Seven hundred members of the Rosicrucian Order, AMORC, a philosophical fraternity, assembled at their 1938 convention in San Jose, California, who received the invitation from the Andhra Research University, in Madras District, voted to accept it and send a delegation in 1939.

Ray Barbour, of the River Road, local member of the Rosicrucian Order, who has just received an official report of the International Conclave just concluded, states that the delegation will include the Grand Secretary of the Order, Ralph Lewis, and two others, including a motion picture cameraman who will take with him a complete sound recording equipment. Representatives of the order will study certain rare manuscripts available at the University, to ascertain the truth or falsity of the claims to phenomenal power and control of Natural Law made by the followers of the Mystic Sects of India. While making this research, negotiations will be made by the University officials, who include the Maharajah of Jeypore, for the party to visit certain secluded Tibetan Monasteries in the Himalayas, where it is hoped permission will be granted to film heretofore unrevealed customs and rites of the Llamas who are alleged to have miraculous powers.

Barbour also states that the delegation will be sponsored by the Rosicrucian Oriental Egyptian Museum, an affiliate of the Philosophical Order. Nine foreign countries and every state of the Union and province of Canada were represented at the recent convocation. An exceptional feature of the convention was the first showing of the sound motion picture "Along Civilization's Trail" which was filmed by a Rosicrucian camera expedition in Egypt and Mesopotamia in 1937.

Contest Begins at Hollywood

Buchanan Theatre Goers Will Have Chance to Participate in $250,000 Prize Award

The Hollywood theatre will start giving out the movie questionnaires for the great $250,000 contest in which it is associated this evening, according to an announcement carried in the theatre advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

Some movie goer, possibly one who lives in Buchanan and patronizes the Hollywood, is going to have $50,000 handed to him or her.

Fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money these days, and $250,000—all to be given away as prizes—is larger still. It's the moving picture industry, which flips millions of dollars around as nonchalantly as you please, that is offering these prizes.

In all, $5,403 cash awards will be made to theatre-goers. The $50,000 one is the grand prize.

The competition is to be known as the movie quiz contest and is sponsored by the leading motion picture producers of the United States and picture exhibitors, distributors and producers of the United States and Canada.

The Hollywood theatre in Buchanan is joining in the contest, which started Thursday and will conclude Dec. 31.

Answer 30 Questions

All you have to do is this. The local theatre has questionnaires on hand and will give them free to any patron. These are 32 page booklets. Each lists 94 movies, either current or forthcoming.

You need only fill out 30 of the 94 questions in order to participate in the contest and qualify to win one of the many prizes. That means that you need see only one-third of the major pictures listed in the questionnaire.

Each of the 94 pictures named has a little set of questions after it. Let's suppose, for instances, that one of the titles is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Behind that title would be some easy questions like these:

"What did Snow White's step-mother coax her to eat in order to cast a spell over her?" () A mince pie. () An apple. () A strawberry tart. () A graham muffin.

Write Only 50 Words

To be correct you would place an "X" between the parentheses before the words "an apple." That's all there is to the contest, but because there will, no doubt, be thousands of correct lists of answers submitted, the contest sponsors have decided to ask every contestant to submit, together with the answers, a 50 word letter saying which of the 30 photoplays the contestant liked best and why.

A professional board of contest judges, qualified and competent, will base the prize awards on the best-written letters accompanying correct answer lists.

News Flashes Step on Heels of Events

Stepping closely on the heels of the stream of great events will be the series of news flashes to be presented on the Hollywood theatre screen Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 11-12-13, under the auspices of the Berrien County Record.

The flashes will include: President speaks on third anniversary of Federal old-age plan . . . Annapolis midshipmen return from training cruise . . . West Point cadets fire big guns . . . Convention of twins held in Maine . . . New dance introduced in New York cabaret . . . Franciscan Friars ceremony . . . Fashions in hats . . . Lew Lehr . . . Indians race in war canoes . . . New York Pro Giants start football practice.

Plainly Mrs. DePyl Is No Politician

Unlike the regulation politician, Mrs. Kathryn DePyl thinks a promise is something to be kept, according to a statement made following the announcement that she had won the $200 prize given by the Thomas Ice Cream stores. Mrs. DePyl had stated previously that if she won the prize she would give half to St. Anthony's church. On receipt of the anouncement Saturday evening she said that her pledge would be kept. She will receive the money next Saturday.

HOW BUSINESS MEN "Get Together" THROUGH THE BANK

From the days of barter no two men could trade without some mutual faith.

Later, they learned to deal with each other through a responsible "third party" to whom both had entrusted funds for safe-keeping. These dealings were the first banking transactions.

Today, all of our intricate machinery of business and credit would fall to pieces except for the bank, which stands as the central and connecting unit of it all.

County Pupils Will Continue Work in Music

Four Traveling Music Teachers to Bring Music Courses to Country Schools

Traveling music teachers will give instruction in singing and other forms of music again this year to 80 per cent of the rural schools of Berrien county, according to Mrs. Jennie Burton Mechem, county school commissioner. It is the fourth year that the rural schools have had music instruction under the traveling teacher plan.

The traveling teachers are Mrs. Ruth Beardsley, Buchanan, who covers schools in southwestern Berrien county; Mrs. Lola LaCrosse, Berrien Center; in the south central part of the county; Mrs. Cecile Beckwith, Benton Harbor, in the north central portion; and Mrs. Sarah Shine, Coloma, in the northern part of the county.

Each traveling teacher makes contracts with several rural schools, giving one or two hours of musical instruction to the pupils, as the school district board may desire. Each traveling teacher must hold a teachers' certificate.

Two schools receive music instruction from teachers residing in the district, but who do not travel. Mrs. Phyllis Sattler, Oronoko township, teaches music at Bedinger school, and Mrs. Nelson Boonstra, St. Joseph, at the Brown school in St. Joseph township.

With opening of schools this year, the county will have but 134 school districts, compared with 138 in past years. The consolidation of the Three Oaks schools into a township unit has eliminated four rural districts.

Basswood, Spring Creek, Avery and West districts in Three Oaks township voted to join the Three Oaks village system last spring, and four busses have been purchased to transport the pupils.

Three Oaks township is ideal for consolidation, according to Mrs. Mechem, as it is almost square with the village in the center, simplifying the transportation problem.

Three of the districts, although they exist as legal entities, do not operate their own schoolhouses.

The Forest school, Bertrand township, sends its pupils to Niles. The Knight district, Oronoko township, sends children to Berrien Springs, and children of the Hills Corners district, Weesaw township, go to New Troy.

The Knight district has sent its children to the Berrien Springs school since 1918, and the schoolhouse has been torn down. But the Knight, Forest and Hills Corners districts continue to elect school district officers and conduct district business each year.

Many large one-room schools send seventh and eighth grade students to village schools, Mrs. Mechem says, encouraged to do so by state aid laws of the past few years.

The Golden Text, (Matt. 5:6), is "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."
Among the Bible citations is this passage (Hebr. 11:1, 3): "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear."
Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 300): "The universe reflects and expresses the divine substance or Mind; therefore God is seen only in the spiritual universe and spiritual man, as the sun is seen in the ray of light which goes out from it."

County Hospital Heads Found to be Efficient

Special Committee of Supervisors Finds Criticism is Without Foundation

Rumors and criticisms concerning affairs at the Berrien county hospital near Berrien Springs are without foundation, and are inspired by envy and jealousy, said a report submitted to the Berrien county board of supervisors Monday afternoon.

The report was presented by Supervisor A. W. Baker, Coloma, who was chairman of a special committee appointed last spring to investigate stories that the hospital was operating inefficiently and that patients were mistreated. It was signed by Supervisors J. J. Jakway, Benton township; Frank Sommer, Pipestone township; and Walter H. Eldson, Oronoko township.

Certain improvements at the hospital were advocated in the report. It was suggested that housing quarters be provided at the institution for nurses, some of whom, it said, are quartered elsewhere at the cost of transportation and room rent. The report also advised that living quarters for the county physician, Dr. F. J. Barkman, be provided at the hospital.

Dr. Barkman, target of considerable criticism, was defended in the report as "very proficient in the work he has to do. He is very cooperative in all ways and does not hesitate to go out of his way to aid those who have to seek his assistance."

"We have interviewed his staff of nurses and not one has hesitated in saying that he is fully qualified, a fine physician to work for and with, and that appointments, supplies and surroundings are conducive to best results."

"We bespeak this word for the doctor because we are fully aware of the fact that the eyes of the local medical society are on him and a few of their number, we believe, are prone to scoff and find fault because of enviousness, not that they do not recognize his ability, but on account of their own pecuniary interests."

Dealing with furniture, fixtures and equipment of the hospital, the investigators found that "as a whole the several committees who had purchasing of these items showed good judgment and we find that they appear to be as good or better than the average, and that costs were not unreasonable."

Food served to hospital patients, the report stated, is of high standard, and is kept in fine condition. It said, however, that storage rooms are not of sufficient capacity for the institution's needs.

The committee found an efficient corps of competent graduate nurses, the report declared, and although at one time there was some discord between nurses and maids, the condition has been "cleared up."

New Circulation Mark at Library

Number of Books Loaned and New Cards Taken Increase as Popularity Grows

The circulation of the Buchanan Public Library reached a new record for a single month with the closing of the books on Aug. 31 with a total of 2080 books loaned as compared with a mark of 1410 for the previous high in January, 1938.

While the reading contest for juveniles accounted for some of the increase, it did not account for all, as the adult reading mounted almost as much as the juvenile during the same period. The figures for the month read: Non-fiction, adult 128, juvenile 121; fiction, adult 840, juvenile 936.

A new mark for new cards issued to new borrowers was also recorded, excepting the month of the opening of the library of course, with a total of 87 new cards issued, divided as follows: adult 44, juvenile 43. The librarians reported a total of 53 rentals books loaned and 47 magazines loaned.

Contest Results
The board of judges of the reading contest met Thursday afternoon and, after reviewing the work of the entries, reported the following results:

Youngest age class: first, Georgia Topash; second, Bruce Moore; honorable mention, Patricia Howlett.

Medium age class: first, Robert Six; second, Florence Manners; honorable mention, Lynea Ingelright.

Older Group: first, Jean Housman for review of "A Lantern in Her Hand" by Bess Streeter Aldrich; honorable mention, Beatrice Brant for review of "The Ranch on the Oxhide," and Dorothy Irwin for review of "The Moccasin Trail."

In making their decisions the judges considered type of books read as well as number. They reported that they were pleased with the results turned in and felt that the contest had served a genuine purpose. The board comprised Mrs. C. L. Bean, Miss Mary Ewing, Miss Virginia Wright.

The winning book review by Jean Housman follows:
"A Lantern in Her Hand"
The book, "A Lantern in Her Hand," is the story of the life of Abie Machenzie Deal. Her father was a Scottish nobleman and her mother a beautiful Irish peasant. The story deals with the trials and tribulations of her life. It tells of how she struggled against droughts, hard winters, a grasshopper plague and etc. She lived through three wars. One in which her husband and brothers fought, one in which her sons fought, and also one in which her grandsons fought.

Her Irish blood shows in the way she struggled against the hardships and conquered them. Her Scottish blood shows in the way she brought up and educated her children in spite of all

Tight-Wadding It Through Europe

CHAPTER 51

By HAWES

In spite of that afore-mentioned fact that I broke all records mounting the right bus going the wrong way I made fairly rapid progress during my four days in Paris, which perhaps is indicative to the truth of the familiar couplet:

"Down to the cottage and up to the throne
He travels the fastest who travels alone."

I got up early, pulled a sweat shirt over my head that had probably seen service a week, completed what few other arrangements society require (and how few they are in Paris), hung an old crush hat somewhere on my head, took my money and passports from where I had been sleeping on them and securely fastened them in my coat pocket, and I was ready.

In fifteen minutes I was on the street lined up at a coffee bar for a roll and glass of java. I had likely lined up my trip the night before with the aid of the polite head porter. I never took a conducted tour, although that seemed the usual procedure. I read the advertisements of the tours one morning in front of the American Express company office not far from my hotel. By the way, if you ever go to Paris and want decent accommodations and courteous service minus the ritzy frills and the prices and snobbery that go with them, go to the Grand Hotel Housman Du Helder on the Rue Du Helder. You're right at the center and starting point of every thing and yet the place is very quiet. Give my regards to the head porter, the agreeable lady in charge of the hotel and the very pretty young lady who is night clerk.

Where was I at? Oh, yes, I was standing in front of the American Express company window reading the tour ads. Two American girls were there, discussing them. Said one: "Here's a one-day trip to the battlefields." Said the other: "Who wants to see a battle field? Here's a one-night trip to Montmartre."

And that was where they went. I mean where they all went. My rule was as far as possible to go where they didn't and go alone. The charge for the conducted tour to the palace of Versailles was 65 francs, or about $2.50. It took all day and you could depend on it they would drop you off at noon at some stick-up cafe with whom they had business connections. They show you a lot of minor features that have no great significance and which you did not want to see to start with, but you can't help yourself. I made the Versailles trip in a half day, saw what I wished to see, and it cost me 15 francs (60 cents). I spent about two hours in the palace of palaces.

In the wilderness of palaces, castles, art galleries, etc. of Europe, I think you get the most if you simmer them down to a sample of each, try to see it right, and let the rest go. They'll only be repetitions. Having seen the Cathedral of Upsala under the right conditions, I had seen them all. And having done the greatest of all palaces, the Palace of Versailles, I had seen enough of palaces. As I walked through the long halls and the great ornamented salons, boudoirs, bedrooms, I could understand very well how it came that when the rabble of France got the upper hand they took the axe to the royalty. All this great wilderness of marble, ivory, gold and red plush was built with money wrung from the sweat and blood of generations of peasantry and the kings themselves were no better than gangs of sanctified banditry.

I stood in the chamber of the Louises, and looked at the great canopied bed of the king, set if I remember rightly on a sort of platform. There was a barrier of heavy gilt cordage which separated the general public from the king. Here, I understood, the members of the court used to come early in the morning and hold a session of state before the king was up.

Away around on the other side of the palace, furlongs away was the chamber and boudoir of Marie Antoinette—a suite of miniature rooms, marvellously ornamented and furnished. What impressed me most about the palace was the distance of the queen's room from the king's. They must have been sort of on the outs.

The quarters of Marie Antoinette were locked and opened only for especially conducted tours, but it was my luck to arrive there just as one of them thronged up and while they were milling around the door as the caretaker unlocked it, I managed to mingle with the herd and go through with them. The visit was worthwhile; the magnificence of the quarters of the kings of France gives you a vivid impression of what a millstone they must have been on the necks of the people. Most interesting from a historical point of view was the Hall of Mirrors. There the treaty of Versailles was signed; there Lloyd George and Clemenceau beat Woodrow Wilson at diplomatic horse trading and manoeuvred a peace which nullified everything the Americans were supposed to be fighting for and sowed the seeds of the present situation in Europe.

I stood on the spot where George, Clemenceau and Wilson were seated and looked down the immense vista through the Court of Fountains. The landscaping is magnificent, and your eyes travel down across the great fountains through the ordered groves and groups of statuary until the scene melts into the blue distance through a gap between spiral Normandy poplars. After I had seen that I picked up my sore dogs and laid them down systematically in the direction of the railway station.

In addition to having the greatest of all royal palaces, Paris also has the world's greatest art gallery in the Louvre. There I spent about three hours. I heard it roughly estimated that about half of the world's great art treasures are there, which is doubtless a rank exaggeration, but there is nothing in the world to compare. There is the world's most famous statue, the Venus d' Milo and the world's most talked about picture, the Mona Lisa. There also is the most famous of American paintings, Whistler's "Portrait of My Mother."

An art student could spend a lifetime there, and I was neither an art student nor had a lifetime to spend. So I followed my rule of hunting up the original Rembrandts and Franz Hals, a few of the French landscapists, the world-famous Venus and the Mona Lisa, and galloping by the other thousands of paintings as though the sheriff was after me.

There was a crowd of art students in front of the Monna Lisa making copies. The long hall which is especially designed to show off the Venus D' Milo held a throng of art students and curious tourists like myself. The armless Venus stood on her dais, smiling serenely as she had since her birth in the Grecian era, not at all disconcerted or conscious of her public. Even to a rank ignoramus the great statue is impressive, especially when first seen far down the long hall.

Having the sort of trivial mind that I have, I was more interested in the art students, wondering what sort of curious lives they led and what their attitudes were. My interest was by no means reciprocated for their only attention to the milling tourists was an occasional stony stare, some what less respectful than they would have bestowed on a cow, whom they might have considered worth artistic attention. One young man seemed especially irked and sought to shut out the obnoxious herd by making a telescope out of his hands, changing his stand from one place to another and viewing the statue thus isolated.

The almost equally famous example of Greek statuary, the Winged Victory of Thrace, was also given an architectural setting to set off its magnificence, at the top of a great stairway from which it seems ready to launch into space.

I do not care to be taken as posing either as a high brow or a low brow in these articles.

I knew enough about two or three corners of art to amuse myself to an extent, but I was and am a rank ignoramus from the point of view of an educated art student.

When I think of the pictures I saw in Europe, I don't think of the treasures of the Louvre or of the British Royal Academy, but I think of the work of artists of whom I never heard in the national galleries of Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen. I remember always certain pictures: "Christine" by Christian Kroeg in the Oslo gallery and "The Daily Bread" by Anders Zorn in the Stockholm gallery.

These pictures did not represent a licksplittle culture designed for a sophisticated, wealthy market; they represented real insight into the life and souls of people and of cultures.

The picture represented the arrest of a servant girl, possibly for a small household theft. Christine herself was in the background, a downcast, helpless figure, with a dozen or more women to right and left watching her with aversion. Only one face registered pity—one intelligent feminine face looked at the girl with sympathy. The remainder typified the common attitudes of society. The most striking figure stood in the immediate foreground, a woman who obviously represented respectability, impenetrable and unassailable. She stands full face in the fore front of the picture, fashionably dressed and ornamented, with a look of smirking self satisfaction in her face. The attitude of society toward her is typified by another woman who watches her with rapt admiration. But the face of the accused servant girl is finer than that of the impenetrable lady.

The significance of the picture increases when it is known that Kroeg himself was no underdog, but a man who moved in international atmosphere of wealth and culture.

Here in an interrelation of the poses of a moment caught on canvas is an indictment of social injustice as memorable and as damning as that of Victor Hugo in "Les Miserables."

It illustrates the insight and the sympathy which interpenetrates classes of Norway and Sweden, and enables to the conservative and radical to consider each other's arguments rather than to dissolve intellect in a blind red fury of emotion. The two pictures illustrate the deep social sympathies of the Scandinavians which have enabled them to settle their problems on a mutual basis of understanding.

For this sympathy is the basis of the will to understanding that has helped them solve their problems. It is one reason why in Sweden at the present time production is 50% above the 1929 level and why the income of the worker is 25% higher in buying power than any previous time. (To be Continued)

Supervisors Vote To Accept Fed'l. Courthouse Grant

Fifty-five Percent Will be Financed by Bond Issue if Approved

The Berrien county board of supervisors, at a special meeting Monday afternoon, accepted the offer of the federal government for a grant of $193,909 towards construction cost of a new county jail and an annex to the courthouse.

The two projects will cost a total of $430,000, of which the county's share of 55 per cent is to be raised by a bond issue, if the issue is approved by taxpayers at the September 13 election.

The board chairman, Clarence W. Bartz, appointed Supervisors Emil Ruff, Benton Harbor; Harley E. Squier, Buchanan; John Winn, Niles; Alvin Knaak, St. Joseph; and Walter H. Eidson, Oronoko township, as an "instruction committee" to present to voters the facts concerning the county's need for the improvement.

The offer of the Public Works Administration for the $193,909 grant provides that construction shall be started within 15 weeks of the date of the offer, and that it shall be completed within 12 months after construction begins.

Six county officials spoke before the board Monday, outlining the need for additional room in their departments, necessitated by the growth of business in the departments.

Circuit Judge Fremont Evans, Probate Judge Malcolm Hatfield, Prosecutor E. A. Westin (whose office now is outside of the courthouse), Mrs. Eva Dwan of the auto license bureau, Drain Commissioner Ed Freeman and Sheriff Charles L. Miller were the speakers.

Supervisor Lester Farnum reported to the board on a visit to Lansing made on August 8 by the state tax committee of the board, to attend a session of the state board of equalization.

The committee asked for a $1,000,000 reduction in the county's equalized valuation. The state board has not yet notified the county whether the reduction will be granted.

Supervisor Emil Ruff reported on a recent baseball game between the supervisors and sheriff's department, in which $162.50 worth of tickets were sold. A balance of $105.52 was left after paying expenses, and the fund was given to the Berrien County Crippled Children's society.

Michigan Women Show Way in Nation Tax Fight

Women of 28 states joined Michigan housewives today in a nation-wide drive against taxes that increase the cost of living.

The women, organizing in the National Consumers Tax Commission, are led in Michigan by Mrs. W. R. Alvord, of Highland Park, the Michigan member of the Commission's national committee, Mrs. Alvord is past president of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs, and past president of the Detroit Woman's Club.

While several units of the commission already were active in Michigan, announcement of the launching of the national campaign was made from national headquarters today.

Members of the commission described the drive as "America's first crusade against local, state and national taxes that increase living costs and raid the family pocketbook." A goal of two million members working in units in every city and town in the country has been set by the commission, according to the group's president, Mrs. Kenneth C. Frazier, of Dallas, Texas, long prominent in consumer campaigns in the southwest. She said plans call for annual dues of 60 cents.

Sheriff Charles L. Miller has paid the taxpayers of Berrien County over $110,000 in the past five years.

This phenomenal record of savings has been accomplished in spite of the fact that there has been more than 100% increase in the business of the office and the number of prisoners confined in the county jail in the past two years.

Many of the outstanding sheriffs of the state have served their counties long terms ranging from 10 to 20 years, but none have been more efficient in the faithful performance of their duties.

His administration is a proven success. You can assure yourself of that continuation of service and protection by placing an X before his name which will be found on the Republican ballot next Tuesday, Sept. 13, when you go to the polls to vote.

How Will Woods Became Wood Worker

Will Woods was a caller in the Record office from South Bend Friday, renewing his subscription to the Record.
Woods is a former Buchananite, and we will take a chance on saying that he is the last of the turn-of-the-century generation who still continues associated with that business. Woods is now a furniture salesman. He began his association with the furniture industry quite some years ago when Spencer & Barnes were in business in the building on Days avenue now owned and used by the Clark Equipment company. One day Will Wood, a boy, was sitting in the postoffice when Spencer, senior member of Spencer & Barnes, came in.
"How'd you like to do some work for me Will?" asked Spencer.
"Would there be any money in it?" ask Woods.
"Sure, I'd pay you wages," answered Spencer.
So, to make a long story short, Woods started out boring holes for pegs in table leaves. Then he resawed basswood boards for drawer bottoms, slinging a board into two thinner ones, then he finally rose to responsibility for the most intricate furniture sawing of the plant. He went to Benton Harbor with Spencer & Barnes, and from there on through all branches of the business, including the retail furniture business.
People who came to Buchanan only a few years back will remember his mother, a pleasant-faced woman who used to frequently sit on the porch at the old Woods home at the corner of Third and Main streets, until her death a few years ago.

Used Pens for Slaves
In the Eighteenth century, slave traders had their strongholds along that part of the West African coast now called French Guinea. Many a barracoon, or slave pen, was built there, with cannon for defense. And the European traders avoided the section because it was hard to navigate.

Some Voices of the Past in Praise of St. Joe River and McCoy's Creek

Days when Buchanan people staid at home because it was so hard to get away from home, and perhaps because they thought more of home, a couple of tributes were written by local men to those two pioneer institutions of the community, the St. Joseph River and McCoy's creek.

One at least had considerable local circulation; the other was saved by C. F. Pears and perhaps is printed for the first time here.

The longer tribute to the St. Joseph River was published in the Record back in the early part of the century. It was written by Charles A. Shook, a son of the late John Shook and a stepson of Mrs. Florence Shook. He was at that time minister of the Advent Christian Church here. He left here nearly 30 years ago and is now in Miller, Nebr.

THE OLD SAINT JOE
(By Charles A. Shook)
I have heard them sing the glory Of the Tiber and the Rhine, Of the Ganges and the Danube, The Euphrates and the Tyne. But somehow there is no river known among the streams that flow, That will set my heart a-beating Like the old Saint Joe.

There are streams that are more hofed, And that wear more honored names, Like the Delaware and Hudson, The Potomac and the James, But the old associations Of the joyful long ago Give, with me, a double honor To the old Saint Joe.

And to-day the son of Walton, As he takes his rod and reel For a day of recreation, Surely cannot help but feel. As he gazes on the landscape Through which its waters flow, Altho' both deep and lasting For the old Saint Joe.

I have fished upon the river In the cold and in the heat, I have sometimes been successful, Have at others met defeat, Yet I've never lost affection For the stream to which I owe Much delightful recreation— The soft-flowing old Saint Joe.

So at last when life is ended And my fishing days are o'er, And I've laid aside my rod and reel To use them never more, And the doctor softly whispers, "You're just about to go," I'll request my friends to lay me somewhere near the old Saint Joe.

The following unfinished fragment was written by Henry B. Howe, a former employe of the defunct First National Bank, and a younger brother of the late Fred Howe. Harry Howe died shortly after this was written, about 1910. The verse was written on a scrap of paper, and unfinished, as at the end of the typewritten copy there were several unrhymed lines in pencil. Charles Pears, an associate in the bank, saw the verse, liked it and saved it. It is printed for the first time with his permission.

There's a valley in old Michigan Famed for beauty far and wide, Through whose bosom speeds a river Toward its meeting with the tide, Through the prairie and the woodland Rich with fruit and golden grain Past the village and o'er the mill dam Surging loud, then soft again. With every mile of crook and bend,
