

WPA SEWER PROJECT IS APPROVED

City Library Acquires 1137 Books in Year After Reorganization

$10,000 Allotted To Begin Work

Now Here's the Proposition

On account of the winter hog butcherin' and all these big Christmases and New Year feeds, most fellers around Hills Corners hev been outgrownin' their bellybands lately.

Dunbar in Shoe Business

In the event that any Buchanan residents have lost a shoe or shoes lately they might find a clue by conferring with deputy sheriff Clarence Dunbar. Or they might even find that Dunbar has their shoe. It seems that the local limb of the law has a retriever which makes a speciality of collecting shoes. Dunbar recently acquired makes a speciality of collecting the purp, a water spaniel, at a nice dry. The water spaniel arrived by crate and right off evinced a dislike for its new owner. After biting Clarence while he was opening the crate, it adhered to a policy of rebuffing all advances, even refusing to be mollified when a bunch of school ma'am friends of his wife gave him a shower honoring the addition to the family.

At the first chance it slipped away and when finally located was entrenched under a shed in the Voorhees apple orchard. Assembling all the dog catchers of southern Berrien county Dunbar at last extracted his property. The purp had built a winter's nest under the shed and in it had a sundry collection of old shoes, some of them good.

Mr. Gallup Polls Mr. Schwartz

From Richard Schwartz comes a report of an experience novel for anyone, even including Mr. Schwartz. The other day he received, in his official capacity as secretary-treasurer of the Dutch Belt Cattle Association of America, a letter from George Gallup, conductor of the renowned Gallup poll, and head of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In this case Mr. Gallup was not polling Mr. Schwartz for his opinion but for some information regarding Dutch Belt cattle. He stated that he had a farm near Princetown, N. J. While Schwartz was answering the letter, there came to his ears one of those interminable radio quizzes, inquiring the definitions of a totem pole and of a Gallup poll.

Farm Boys Should Stay in Agriculture

Michigan farm youth will find their ultimate gain greater, by remaining upon the farm, rather than finding employment in mass production industry in the opinion of John B. Strange of the Department of Agriculture in an address here at a banquet for 4-H club members and exhibitors at Detroit Junior Livestock Show. The department head expressed opinion that no educational project is more worthy of governmental support than 4-H activities.

"Our hope is that through knowledge and inspiration gained in your work," said Strange, "you will decide to make farming your business. If this is the case, I am firmly convinced no place offers better opportunities than your own state. Michigan agriculture is most diversified.

"While for years increased production through better methods has been given major consideration, the chief concern of agriculture today is better distribution and marketing methods and it is in the solving of these problems that you should take an important part.

437 Volumes Are Donated

Board Acts Under Advice State Library and University in Selection

With a record of 1137 books added, the Buchanan Public Library closed its first complete year of operation with the opening of 1939.

The new additions include 437 books donated by various organizations and individuals, including collections of modern technical and educational books for boys and girls by the Clark Equipment company and the Dry-Zero corporation. The 700 books purchased include an order not yet received from the book company.

Much progress has been made in the past year in popularizing and re-establishing the institution, much of the credit being due to a conscientious group of workers headed by Mrs. Alice Ludwig, WPA librarian. The library board, consisting of W. H. Brunelle as president, Miss Mary E. Reynolds as treasurer and Walter C. Hawes as secretary, has worked assiduously to stretch the funds received as far as possible in the large task of rebuilding a collection of books which had lapsed for nearly a generation.

In addition to books received, considerable equipment has been added, including four lamps for indirect lighting, two desks, a filing cabinet, several chairs, and improvised magazine racks and a pamphlet file. Most of this equipment has been bought second-hand or improvised from old materials. The magazine rack was rebuilt using an old wall file which hung in the city hall and an old table at a cost of $3, taking the place of a rack which would have cost $38 bought new. A library table and desk combined and four leather-bottomed chairs, all in good condition, were bought at a lump sum of $3.50.

The A. B. Hart set of 26 volumes covering the entire era of American history, each volume written by the specialist in his field, and all recommended as the best to date by the department of American history of the University of Michigan, was bought from the used book department of Brentano's stores in Chicago at $15 for a $47.50 set. Two members of the board attended a book sale in South Bend Tuesday, buying a number of juvenile books at from 40 to 60% and greater reductions.

Previous to the opening of the library and during its operation as a reorganized institution, it has received two appropriations from the city of $450 and $400, an appropriation of $50 from Buchanan township, $165 from the receipts of a tag day drive. In addition the first quarterly installment of $92 has been received from the state.

Much progress in bringing the collection of books up to date has been made possible by the fact that efficient WPA help has been secured, in the capacity of librarian. The board has secured a standard budget plan for balancing expenditures between fiction, non-fiction and juvenile books from the state library and has had recourse to advice from the state library experts in buying and from departments of the University of Michigan in special non-fiction material.

Miss Constance Ement, head of the extension division of the state library, came on request before the library opened and culled out about 800 books from the total of about 2500, and has been a valuable advisor since. Since then the library has acquired over 1100, bringing the total volumes to about 2800. As a result the collection of books is very much more up to date than it was a year ago.

Berlin Has a Face Lifting Operation

Construction work goes rapidly forward on the new broad highway that will bisect the city of Berlin from west to the east and is part of a vast road-building program undertaken by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler. By the end of the year 1,884 miles will have been added to Germany's system of express motor highways. Old landmarks in Berlin are being demolished to make way for the new improvements. Among these is the Victory monument in the Tiegarten which faced the Reichstag building.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bachman Honored on 40th Wedding Anniv.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Bachman entertained the Bend of the River Home Economics Club and their neighbors Saturday evening to see the old year out and the New Year in, and also to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bachman.

It was a lovely evening in comparison with that of forty years ago, when, as Mr. Bachman said, "It was forty below zero." At 12:05 a. m., 1939, Mr. and Mrs. Norris Bachman and daughters, assisted by Mrs. Josie Penwell and Mrs. Viola Fletcher, served a two-course breakfast. As the Old Year passed out and the New Year made its appearance Roy Fletcher played three selections on the accordion. The rest of the morning was passed playing bingo and cards. At a late (or an early) hour the guests departed, wishing the bride and the bridegroom Happy New Year and many more wedded years.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Bachman were married at the home of the bride in the Bend of the River, the old Bachelor homestead, at 5 p. m., Jan. 1, 1899, by Rev. Potter, pastor of the Buchanan Methodist church at that time. They have three sons and one daughter: Norris Bachman and two sons and two daughters of Niles township; Earl Bachman and one son of Berkeley, Calif.; Charles Bachman and one son, Valvin, Jr., of Susanville, Calif.; Mrs. Martha Thompson and two sons, Paul and Kenneth, of Lansing. Mr. and Mrs. Bachman were presented many lovely gifts by the members of the club, by relatives, neighbors and by their children and their families. Also Mrs. Allie Tichenor and Mrs. Margaret Harrington and daughters presented them a beautiful bouquet of red roses from the Rainbow Gardens. Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Bachman had open house, many friends and relatives calling.

Boy Scouts

Troop 41 Holds Party Twenty-three members of Troop 41, Buchanan attended a party held Tuesday, January 3, in the Legion Hall.

Because the committee in charge of the party could not decide on the type of party they wanted they finally came forth with a seasonal party; that progressed as follows: Spring: April 1st is the time for all pranksters to have their fun so we had an April Fool's Party which was immediately followed by an Easter party with the conventional Easter egg hunt but it seemed that April 1st was held over and the eggs were just a myth.

Summer: During June, July, and August a great deal of picnicking is done so off we went for a picnic in the middle of the floor. This part of the program was the best as far as the boys were concerned because of the refreshments that were served. There were the usual refreshments for a picnic: sandwiches, pickles, lemonade, and cake. The cake was sent to us by the Berrien-Cass Council for having completed our quota for membership and Boy's Life subscription drive. The cake was 18x12 inches.

Fall: With fall came Thanksgiving and so games were played that had to do with Thanksgiving and its traditional foods. Winter: Then came winter and Christmas. For this each fellow imitated some Christmas toy in action. This concluded the party and the meeting was dismissed at 9:30 P. M.

Funeral rites were held from the Swem Funeral home at 3 p. m. Tuesday for Mrs. Samantha E. Johnson, member of a pioneer family and wife of Nathan (California) Johnson, a noted pioneer teacher and a delegate from California to the Republican convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln in the Wigwam in Chicago in 1860.

The funeral was under the auspices of Sylvia Chapter O. E. S., No. 74, of which Mrs. Johnson had been a member. Rev. R. C. Puffer preached the funeral sermon. The pallbearers were Ralph Allen, Verl Clark, George Roe, Alfred Hall, Sam Rouse, Oscar Swartz. Burial was made in Oak Ridge cemetery.

Nathan Johnson had come to Buchanan in the early sixties from California, where he had been a political leader and had been the Grand Lecturer of the Masonic Lodge for California and the Western Territories. He came east as a delegate to the Republican convention in Chicago, and stumped widely through the Middle West in support of the candidacy of Lincoln. He taught school in the Buchanan community for many years, maintaining a "select school" in the building now known as the Dewey avenue school, after the town had built the first school at the present site on Detroit street. He taught first in the rural schools. His wife was a pupil of his at the Bakerstown school. Later she was a teacher in the "select school" which he maintained.

Two sons born to them preceded her in death. One was Nathan C. Johnson, for some time treasurer of the Diamond Match company in New York City. The other, John N. Johnson, was an active politician for some years in South Bend, Ind., and in Foley, Alabama, and one of the eight founders of the national order of Owls.

Mrs. Johnson was very active in local fraternal circles for years, being a member of the Royal Neighbors, the Maccabees, the Rebekahs and the Eastern Star, also of the Monday club and the Methodist church. She had lived continually at 406 Berrien Street since 1878.

 Of all the thousands of species of flowers growing throughout the world, more than 90 per cent either have an unpleasant odor or none at all. An outstanding example of an odorless flower is the rose, among whose numerous wild and horticultural varieties 99 per cent are without fragrance, says Collier's Weekly.

Building Better Citizens Well received throughout the nation have been the plans announced by officials of the Catholic University of America to build up through the Catholic schools and by other means a better informed and more conscientious citizenship.

The following comment appeared in the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel:

"Good, patriotic, God-fearing citizens of all faiths should be inspired and delighted by the plan just announced by Roman Catholic leaders to help build up, through parish schools and other church institutions, a 'more enlightened, conscientious citizenship.' There are more than three million boys and girls in such schools, under Catholic auspices—a sizeable percentage of our future electorate. But this is not, as Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit, has said, 'an exclusively Catholic program.' Rather, it is a program sincerely advanced to launch an overdue attack upon 'the current influences which tend to undermine democracy in this country." In other words, as stated by the Rt. Rev. Magr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the Catholic University, it is to be a program of 'education in the fundamentals of freedom.' Here, the Catholic Church has raised a standard to which secular educators and non-Catholic organizations may—and should—rally in emulation and cooperation. Catholic and Protestant clergymen and laymen are in a position to exert some wholesome pressures upon educators who themselves are in need of 'education in the fundamentals of freedom,' which ought to be a preoccupation in all schools and in all faiths."

New Building Material:

Ashes, Sand and Cement

JOHANNESBURG. — A house made of ashes and waterproofed with soap has been built at Sonop, in the Transvaal.

It has six rooms, complete with bathroom, kitchen, pantry and veranda. It cost $1,075.

Sonop is a government settlement where impoverished farmers are settlers on the land. More experimental houses of the same kind are being built, and if they prove successful, the Transvaal may save $30,000,000 by adopting this form of construction generally.

The material used consists of 95 per cent ashes and 5 per cent sand, cement and soap. This is poured into molds in a liquid state and quickly solidifies.

At Washington

By the appointment of Frank Murphy to be Attorney General, President Roosevelt demonstrates his utter lack of respect for our Constitutional form of government.

Frank Murphy when governor of Michigan permitted armed men to invade our state, to destroy property, to assault, beat, and send to our hospitals defenseless, law-abiding citizens. He said that he settled the sit-down strikes without blood-shed. Hundreds of citizens of Michigan know that statement to be false and so does Frank Murphy.

Murphy, while he was governor, charged with the enforcement of the law and the protection of citizens, permitted violence, bloodshed, riots, anarchy and civil strife. He was a traitor to the state.

President Roosevelt, during the campaign, approved of his conduct and he now appoints him chief law enforcing officer of the nation. That action is an invitation to the lawless, to those who would destroy our form of government by force, to proceed with their plans.

Men are known by the company they keep, by their choice of advisors. Murphy during the strikes, aided the Communists; they endorsed him during the campaign. He had their support at the polls.

Now the president makes the tool of the Communists a member of his official family.

Instead of worrying about dictators abroad, pointing with horror toward persecution in other lands, patriotic Americans will do well to turn their attention to those who permit the lawless, the Communists, here in America to persecute men and women who only desire to earn an honest livelihood.

CLARE E. HOFFMAN, Member of Congress.

Wolf's Jaws Are Strong
The greatest strength of the wolf, according to the American Wildlife Institute, lies in its jaws, which are perhaps more powerful than those of any dog. They often have cut through the half-inch manila ropes used for lassoes on the plains with one clip. For this reason alone it is believed by most hunters that no dog known can single-handedly conquer a full-grown gray wolf.

Fencing to Settle Disputes.
Until the World war, fencing was employed throughout Europe to settle disputes by duels. With the advent of the war: many European countries abolished the practice on the grounds that an individual's life no longer belonged to himself but to the state.

Early America
At first the name "America" referred only to the regions south of the Isthmus of Panama; gradually it came to include the two Americas.

THE MICHIGAN CYCLOTRON

Above is shown Michigan's new cyclotron, or "atom-smasher," which has been rebuilt from the machine first constructed at the University over two years ago. Research with such equipment is uncovering a vast amount of new information on the inner structure of the atom and the effects of radiation on plant and animal tissue. Construction and operation of the Michigan cyclotron have been under the direction of Prof. James M. Cork and Dr. R. L. Thornton, who is shown with the new machine in this picture.

The cyclotron bombards a target element with particles of heavy hydrogen. Within a vacuum chamber, behind Dr. Thornton's right hand in the picture, the particles are given a spiral motion by an accumulation of high voltage presures and the action of a 60-ton electro-magnet, which is made up of the large oil-cooled coils above and below the vacuum chamber and the huge iron frame surrounding the whole machine. Electrodes carrying alternating charges of about 50,000 volts are within the chamber itself.

Traveling at a speed of 18- or 20 thousand miles per second, the particles are discharged directly into the target, knocking off particles of that substance or being absorbed by it. In either case, a new substance or isotope is created. Study of these atomic changes and of the effects of radiation from the bombardment process and from the artificially created elements is opening up whole new fields of research to the physical and biological scientist.

Girl Sailors Do Everything but Cook

The gall-rigged schooner Yankee, manned by 14 Girl Scout mariners supervised by four experienced seamen, prepares to sail from New York on the first of eight one-week cruises. Here are six members of the group raising the anchor. The 102-ton schooner will be almost entirely in the hands of the Scouts, all of whom are in their teens, throughout the trip. The girl crew will stand watches, swab decks and assume all the shipboard duties except the preparation of meals.

Tight-Wadding It Through Europe

CHAPTER 66
By HAWES

It seems possible that two or three installments will close this narrative of my 1937 Odyssey-globetrot, one or two taking care of the boat ride and another of an interesting day in Canada. Thus will the thing be complete and thus will such critics as Bill Miller, who has been moving heaven and earth to force the suspension of the Tightwadding series for the past year, be set down as they deserve to get down.

The trip out of the bay leading back to the Clyde River, and along the rugged Scotch coast remains in my mind as a panoramic memory of violet seas edged with towering purple cliffs. The shores of Scotland are rugged and forbidding, but the lights and colors of land and sea are beautiful. So all that afternoon I hung on deck, oblivious of the mixed cargo of Irish, Scotch and Canadians on the Dutchess of York. The passengers were predominantly Canadians returning from summer visits to relatives in their former homes in Scotland, Ireland or England.

Whether it was because of unfortunate experiences with seasickness, or from whatever cause, they stick in my memory as a dour lot, inclined to ill humor and far less agreeable than the tourist lot that I went across with. Very likely it was as much myself as the tourists that served to create the impression. But there must have been something to it.

A Scotchman who worked as an office man in an automobile plant near Detroit was typical. He was returning from a visit with his father. After I had crawled out of my cabin and fought off my seasickness, the two of us usually sat about the same end of the lounge, reading. He sat most of the time in the always chill air of the half-warmed ship, wearing a Scotch plaid coat, and a tam-o-shanter, his nose usually buried in a book from which he diverted his attention at rare intervals for disapproving comments on the world. In view of his general comments on America it hardly seemed worth while for him to return.

"I got out of England because I hated to work for Englishmen," he fumed. "An Englishman makes the worst boss in the world. Give an Englishman a little authority and you have the worst such in the world. The only way to get along with them is to flunkiey to them. I don't like flunkiey so I go to America, the land of the free, where you don't have to flunkiey to hold a job. And what do I find? I get a job in an automobile plant in Pontiac, and the first thing I find is that I'm under an English boss. And have to keep tight on flunkiey. What's more, I find that the competition in flunkiey is worse than in England.

"Free Americans, huh! The Americans are the worst of flunkieys. An American will go to lengths to get in right with a boss that an English or Scotchman would never think of. I don't know what the trouble is, unless they are so crazy to get ahead in the United States that they will go to any lengths to get ahead."

And more of the same. The company in my cabin and at my table were different but hardly more congenial. I was parked with two berthmates, a south Ireland Irishman, and an American from Jamestown, N. Y. The American was apparently torn between a desire to economize on passage expenses and to go with the best of company. He carried a full set of golf togs and plainly did not belong in third class in social tastes. Whether it was me or the Irishman he objected to, he relieved the situation by getting a change of accommodations.

At table I had this same south Ireland man and three North Ireland or Orangemen. Rather they were ex-Belfast men who had emigrated to Canada. Here again I found associates who were torn between considerations of economy and social exclusiveness. Added to this was a smoldering hostility between the South Irishman and the North Irishman.

The close association to which one is forced in the cramped-up life of third class passage in an ocean ship soon taught me that my cabinmate, the south Ireland, was the class of the lot, even though he was an Irishman of the deepest dye. My underdog predilections led me to side up with him and from then on it was we two against the three Orange men for the choice fare of the table. There was no quarrel. At first I was handicapped in the struggle by a weakened condition from sea-sickness, but my aggressive Irish friend battled for me, less for love of me than for scornful contempt for the Orangemen. At first we were at a disadvantage, being outnumbered, and by the fact that our three opponents in the thrice-daily battle for the bill of fare were plainly and self-admittedly men of social consequence and with wealthy and influential connections. The waiters and dining room steward were visibly impressed by these evidences and consequently steered the best of the fare their way.

That is, until they found out that none of the alleged wealth was coming to them in the form of tips. I and the South Irishman had come across with fair tips to begin with, and as day after day passed, and the three Orangemen failed to come across, the waiters' enthusiasm cooled and finally they were plainly on our side. The satisfaction of thus turning the tide plus the desire for more delicate diet for an upset stomach, impelled me to come across with another dollar and a half and after that the Orangemen took what they could get.

My cabin mate helped in the cause by doing a little detective work on the social origins and status of the ex-Belfasters, and finally announced that they were three Toronto taxi drivers who had won vacation trips in a lodge contest. This information he imparted to the dining room steward, who was only too willing to believe it, all influenced by the lack of backsheeh. The rout of the Orangemen was then complete. I got a special table at breakfast and an assignment to a more convenient hour and the steward occasionally shook hands with me solicitously and queried whether all was right and was there anything more I would like?

All this was fine, but in my bunk I still kept an eye on the Irishman. I had been much warned about the necessity of guarding against theft and tended to be over-suspicious. The Irishman had the map of County Cork all over his face, and its dripping honey in his tongue. He, too, was guarded about his social origins, but in an unguarded moment something slipped out. He was querulous about the service from the cabin steward.

"Maybe he's thinkin' I don't know," he grumbled. "I've forgot more about this sort of stuff than he knows."

Where did you learn all that? I inquired.

"Is it doubtin' my word you are?" he inquired truculently. "Maybe a little boatin' on the Pacific ocean and off Africa and in the Gulf Mexico—or is it any of your business?"

But that was really before our offensive and defensive alliance against the Orangemen had been perfected. I assured that it was none of my business and that I did not care to know anything he did not care to tell, and his aggressiveness waned as fast as I had flattered. My suspicious of the score of theft were rather deflected by his obvious lack of suspicion. He wore large insignia rings and a gold watch and other ornamentation all of which he left hanging carelessly on the wall or strewn over the top of the washstand while he was absent from the cabin, never taking care to lock the door.

daily groomed with care and evident admiration for long periods before the mirror. Thus prepared, the facility with which he broke through the social barriers, especially with the women, was worth watching. And troops of children followed him about whenever he was in the lounges, charmed by his Irish blarney.

Congeniality, or my awareness of it, increased in general intercourse as we progressed toward America. The Scotch Canadians were prone to whiskey in the bar room and long sessions of song. It was a dull time when a group were not harmonizing on "A Wee Doch An' Doris" or "A-Roamin' in the Gloamin'". For it was most evident that Harry Lauder is yet the favored Scotch song smith.

Then there were evening sessions of community singing in the lounges when "Roamin' in the Gloamin'" vied with "The Maple-leaf Forever" as favorites. A young man, a bagpiper, got out his pipes occasionally and skirled in plaided and rascous splendor through the third class passages. Thus did we brave the chill passage of the North Atlantic, enlivened occasionally by dead stops on account of the proximity of ice bergs and logs, and by the stories of whales to fore and aft.

Children in Court

By Judge Malcolm Hatfield

Lying in the Child's Presence

With an ever increasing number of children being brought into court, juvenile authorities in many cities are becoming alarmed over what the future holds for such youngsters.

One of the chief reasons for a fifteen billion dollars a year crime bill is that many parents do not realize that they themselves are developing disobedience and dishonesty in their children. A most common method whereby parents help to instill the roots of dishonesty in a youth is to lie in his presence. Parents should always remember that a son or a daughter will not long remain honest if they themselves are untruthful.

Unwholesome Recreation

When schools are closed during vacation time it is necessary for parents to exercise constant vigilance over their children if they want to keep them out of court.

Too many mothers and fathers permit minors to idle away their time in search of unsupervised amusement. Then, when a son or a daughter finds recreation in questionable places, and subsequently brings disgrace to the family, such parents all too often blame every one except themselves. To avoid all possibilities of a vacation ending in disaster, the wise parents should remain alert constantly, not relaxing their watchfulness even for a single hour.

Needless Injury

The failure of a parent to heed the repeated warnings of juvenile authorities resulted in a serious accident when a seventeen year old boy lost both his legs after falling under a box car.

Three thousand men and boys lose their lives annually in the United States by stealing rides on freight trains, or by illegally trespassing on railroad property. Furthermore, children playing in the streets contributed 1,410 accident cases, or 8.7% of the 16,160 pedestrians killed by automobiles in the United States last year; they are also responsible for 41,940, or 14.3% of the 93,350 pedestrians injured. Such careless persons frequently become wards of society, and must be supported at public expense.

The Effect of Fear on Children

Judges recognize that fear, one of the most vital emotions, frequently determines the future success or failure of children. Many men and women today are chained by fear to a life of drudgery, when they could be in positions of responsibility and honor.

The powerful influence of fear was revealed when a mere boy was committed to a state hospital for the insane. When he was a small lad, his relatives had morbidly amused themselves by watching his reactions when they related stories of ghosts, or described gruesome incidents of murders and hangings.

Magic of Iodine

Cuts Birth Loss

Many young animals are lost each year due to the prevalence of goitre in those areas where there is not sufficient iodine in the drinking water or food to prevent this trouble. The feeding of potassium iodide to pregnant animals is an insurance against losses at lambing, farrowing and foaling time, which the Michigan livestock breeder cannot afford to ignore, suggests C. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.

Pre-natal goitre results in many still-born animals and others which are very weak and succumb to the trouble soon after birth. A medicinal dose of potassium iodide fed once per week or a small amount added to the salt which is kept before animals will provide insurance against these losses.

"With the college sheep and beef cattle," says Professor Brown, "we add two ounces of potassium iodide to each 100 pounds of salt or to each 100 pounds of salt and bone meal which is kept before the animals.

"To mix the ingredients thoroughly, one should use a spoon and basin and first mix the potassium iodide with one pound of the salt and bone meal, then with five pounds and finally with the entire amount.

"With the swine, we dissolve one ounce of potassium iodide in one quart of water. This gives 480 grains of potassium iodide in thirty-two ounces of solution, of a solution each ounce of which contains fifteen grains of potassium iodide. One ounce of this solution is a daily dose for 10 brood sows. "With the brood mare in foal, one ounce of this solution should be fed weekly on the grain."

THE New Year brought a substantial reduction in your electric rates. The reduction which became effective with bills rendered on and after January 1, 1939, resulted in a cut in cost to six-cents a kilowatt-hour for the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours.

In addition to this immediate reduction, there will be two additional reductions at six months' intervals. On July 1, 1939, the first block will again be reduced to five and one-half cents a kilowatt-hour, and by January 1, 1940, when another reduction will be made, the residential customers of this company will have the benefits of a rate which starts at five cents a kilowatt-hour and breaks rapidly to extremely low levels. When the new rate is fully effective, the savings to customers below the present rate will amount to $282,000 a year.

Remember, with this new rate, after you have used 60 kilowatt-hours, the rate for each kilowatt-hour drops to 2 1/2 cents for the next 240 kilowatt-hours, and above 300 kilowatt-hours a month, you may buy all you need at the "wholesale" or bargain price of 1 1/2 cents a kilowatt-hour.

We do not advertise bargain sales, but today you are getting electricity cheaper and cheaper. By putting electrical appliances to work you make living conditions better, take the drudgery out of housework and release time which may be devoted to more profitable pursuits. At the same time, by making fuller use of electric servants, you step down the cost of each unit of electricity.

The story is that a tramp befriended by Colonel Pratt executed the figures with a hammer and chisel.
