Buchanan Has 7 Recruits in Navy

Olin Smith Back on Furlough; Reports on Comrades

All of Buchanan's contingent of seven young men who enrolled during the past winter in the Newport training station of the United States navy are doing well and are enjoying their work and experience hugely, according to Olin Smith, who arrived here Monday to visit at the home of his mother until Friday.

Smith is home on a nine-day furlough, preliminary to going to New York city for assignment for sea service with the U. S. Fleet. He will join the fleet at New York April 29, and will be stationed for a month there, while the fleet is a part of the New York Worlds Fair.

He played on the Newport station basketball team as a guard, and had several fine trips, including one to Norfolk, Va. He is enrolled for training as an aviation mechanic and expects to study six months at a trade school before being assigned to a ship where he will study the subject at sea.

On his way to Buchanan he saw Ben Harval who is at Brooklyn, N. Y. waiting for the completion of the new destroyer, U. S. S. Lang, on which he will be stationed. It is expected to be ready in six weeks.

Marshall Doak is now on board the fleet flagship, U. S. S. Houston, en route to South America. Other Buchanan boys who entered this spring and will be at Newport about 4 weeks more are Gene Stretch, Louis Thurston, Paul Thurston and Jerry Cline. All the above boys attended the Buchanan high school last year.

PROCLAMATION

ARMY DAY will be observed, nation-wide and throughout Michigan on Thursday, April 6. This is the twelfth year of the nation-wide recognition of the part our military forces have played in the up-building of our country.

The purpose of the observance is to focus public attention on the United States Army and its activities, to promote an intelligent understanding of the functions of the Army in peace as well as in war time emergencies, and to consider the problems of our national defense that peace for our nation may be maintained.

In the hope that we never shall be involved in another war, let us, by the observance of this anniversary, demonstrate our devotion to those who have sacrificed themselves that we may always enjoy the blessings that abound here as in no other land, and resolve that we shall strive to preserve for our posterity those same blessings which we hold so close to our hearts.

C. J. WILSON, Mayor.

Under Quarantine For Scarlet Fever

Now in Use in 3 Refrigerators

Called Bound-Batt; Has Been in Development For Two Years

A new, low-cost Dry-Zero insulation, designed for use in household refrigerators, refrigerated truck bodies, ice cream cabinets and commercial coolers, is now being made in the Dry-Zero Corporation's plant at Buchanan.

Although the price of the new product is considerably lower it has the same insulating effectiveness as other Dry-Zero products. It makes Dry-Zero insulation available in rolls for the first time so that it can be purchased in quantity and cut to size on the job as required.

The new product, called Dry-Zero Bound-Batt, has been in process of development for two years. Its lower cost is due to improved product design and manufacturing technique, according to Harvey Lindsay, president of the company. It is already being used in large quantities to insulate the 1939 cabinets of three leading household refrigerator manufacturers, as well as in many commercial refrigerators and truck bodies.

The basic difference between Dry-Zero Bound-Batt and previous Dry-Zero products is that the fibres composing the Bound-Batt are held together by a microscopically fine binder so that no external covering is necessary. This binder is introduced as a mist carried by the air currents used to produce the patented Dry-Zero grained batt. Because the binder is so finely atomized the fibres are joined together only at microscopic points of contact and there is no increase in the heat conductivity of Bound-Batt over other forms of Dry-Zero insulation. Less than five hundredths of a pound of binder is used per cubic foot of insulation.

The chief advantage of the new product, according to Mr. Lindsay, is the ease with which it can be cut to the specified sizes and shapes required for insulating refrigerated containers of various kinds. In fact, where advantageously, pieces can be cut on the job from a bulk roll with shears or knife, he declares.

To facilitate handling, Dry-Zero Bound-Batt is customarily covered on one or both sides with specially manufactured asphalt coated kraft paper. The edges are not bound. The Bound-Batt is sturdy and stiff enough for high-speed production line handling, and flexible enough to fit around structural members and protruberances.

Bishop Raymond Wade to Speak at Methodist Church Tonight

With The Medal Men at Clark's

Being The Story of The Plant and Of The Men Who Built It By Building The Quality of Their Souls Into Their Work

CHAPTER 7 Following the publication of the former installments I have been getting some interesting additions, which renders it advisable, beginning with this chapter, to follow each new number with a series of postscripts bringing up the rear of contributed post mortems.

There's the matter of that foot-bridge again—but read the postscripts. Although the Lee & Porter Axle works, was the forerunner of the modern machine shop as well as of the automotive department, of the Clark Equipmen, company, it differed from a modern factory in a number of ways, or which none were more striking than the lack of rows and rows of big shiny cars to carry the men to and from work.

In fact there was not even a bicycle rack, or a row of tying posts, and the boys negotiated the mile to a mile and a half before and after their ten hour stint by leg power. Since they had not been educated to believe that walking is so nerve-rackingly slow, they were quite resigned to it, and one of the medal men tells us how the boys would trudge homeward in groups carrying dinner pails, laughing and singing songs, after ten hours of work.

Of course the head bosses kept horses in the small barn and rode back and forth in buggies. Judd S. Clary, who lived in Dowagiac, came to Buchanan every morning at the 7:30 a. m. train, and was met at the depot by Ed Bird with a single horse and a light spring wagon with a top. Sometimes Mrs. Bird or George Bird, then a boy came, and sometimes when there was a shortage of rigs whoever met the train came with a team and the "Black Maria," as the covered hack with two long seats facing each other was known. They would drive around by Miss Hazel Miles home and pick her up. The same program was repeated at night, the Bird rig taking Miss Miles home and continuing to the depot to meet the 5:19, the evening train east, which was something of an institution, as I will explain later.

Judd Clary was an efficient, but an easy-going and likeable man, according to the stories handed down by his employees. Later he acquired a cream-colored open car which he drove in a manner which would hardly be tolerated or even possible in this age of hectic traffic, as it was his habit, walking or driving, to persist in a keen interest in everything within the reach of his eyes, paying more attention to this side and that than to the road.

Miss Miles had another fortnightly trip under Bird's auspices, when she went to the Lee Bros. Bank to get the payroll. Mr. Bird would call at the plant in his light spring wagon and Miss Miles would climb in with a large leather bag, proceed to the bank and draw from $1,000 to $1,200 and return to the plant with no far flung cordon of state police or of Brink's Express guards riding forwards and back. There was indeed a big black gun down in the bottom of the bag, presumably for Miss Miles to use in the event of a hold-up, but she never had occasion to use it, or even to investigate the truth of the tradition that it was loaded. But that was before the days when fast cars and paved roads had multiplied the hold-up racket.

Relatively high pay received by some employees of Lee & Porters has been cited in this series, but you must remember that such were not run-of-the-plant instances at all. They were such cases as that of George Kelley, who had perhaps the best piece-work contract at that plant and occasionally put in up to 20 hours a day in the seasons of most urgent rush, gathering in an high as $40 and, on rare occasions, even $50 weekly.

The employees working as helpers or at daily wages apparently got from 70 cents and a dollar in the early years to $1.75 and $1.80 for common labor in 1912 and 1913. John Montgomery worked the last few months of the plant's existence in 1912 and 1913 as a metal polisher at 28 cents an hour or $2.80 for the regulation 10-hour day.

Guy Young started at Lee & Porters in 1901 at common labor at $1.25 per day. Labor rates had then started their upward spiral, and that was above the rate of 1890. Charles Dumbolton started as a boy just out of high school in 1899 at 7 1/2 cents an hour, 75 cents a ten hour day, $4.50 for a 6-day week. However in a year he was on piece work making big money—as much as $2 a day. Joe Vincent started at bench work in the axle works in 1902 at 15 cents an hour. Charles Simpson started in 1900, making as little as 8 cents an hour at the start but soon going on piecework and running it up to $2.80 per day, at the rate of 6c, 8c, 10c, and 12c per set for machining different types of axles, four to the set.

Judson Markham worked as a helper for George Kelley in 1908-9, getting 15c an hour, $1.50 a day, in the opening years of the century. Morrow Chubb started as a beginner at Lee & Porters at 12 1/2c an hour. In two years time he had been advanced to the bench, doing work the equivalent of that of a machinist, but getting only 15c an hour. Guy Eisenhart states that there were full-fledged machinists working on hour rates at the Lee & Porter during the last years of operation, when it was going into automotive production, getting 30c an hour. Day labor then, he states, was about 18 cents.

Jumping ahead in the story, Stephen Gladwish hired by Harry Berry in 1905 at the Celcor plant, starting as a full-fledged machinist at 27 cents an hour and advancing in three months to 30 cents an hour. Arthur Voorhees was a piece work contractor in the hammer room at Lee & Porter in the middle years of its operation, making from $3 to $5 per day, which would mean a top of $30 a week, at so much per set of four axles. He hired two helpers whom he paid $2 per day.

Among the men who worked at the Lee & Porter plant and who played a key part later in the development of the automobile axle department at the Celcor plant was Ralph Hamilton. He started in 1906 at 15 cents an hour, common labor and was advanced before long to 22c or $2.20 per day. When Burrows installed the auto axle department in 1909 Hamilton went to work there as a mechanic at 27 1/2 cents an hour. After the fire he did considerable of the experimental work on the development of the truck axle made by the Celcor plant, as will be related later.

After being cracked up in a railway accident Herb Hanover started at Lee & Porter about the beginning of the century as an apprentice machinist at 11 cents an hour, with the understanding that he was to receive an increase at the end of every six months so that at the end of the four-year apprenticeship he would receive 25 cents an hour as a full-fledged machinist. H. D. Schulte worked on assembly in the automotive department of Lee & Porter a while before the fire at 18 cents an hour. The above will probably illustrate fairly the drift of wages there during the last 15 years of operation.

Chief Interest in Amendments

Only City Contest for One Vacancy on Commission

Perhaps the greatest interest in the coming spring election on April 3 is centered in the proposed amendment to the constitution, providing for the non-partisan election of justices of the supreme court, circuit judges, judges of probate and circuit court commissioners.

This amendment is heavily supported by many state leaders in both parties and in all walks of life, and seems likely to carry after several failures, unless defeated by failure to receive a majority of the total vote cast, as required by the constitution.

The substance of the proposed amendment is:

Sec. 23. All primary elections and elections of justices of the supreme court, judges of the circuit court, judges of probate courts and all county judicial officers provided for by the legislature under section 21 of article VII of the constitution shall be non-partisan and shall be conducted hereunder. For the purposes of this section, all elections at which candidates for said judicial offices are nominated are designated "primary elections."

Nominations for justices of the supreme court shall be made as now or hereafter provided by law; nominations for all other said judicial offices shall be made at non-partisan primary elections. This section is declared to be self-executing. Except as in the constitution otherwise provided, all primary election and election laws, including laws pertaining to partisan primaries and elections, shall, so far as applicable, govern primary elections and elections hereunder.

Another proposed amendment would alter the powers of the court commissioners, as follows:

Sec. 21. The legislature may provide by law for the election of one or more persons in each organized county who may be vested with judicial powers not exceeding those of a judge of the circuit court at chambers, and who may be vested with like judicial powers as are exercised by justices of the peace, with power to hold court and perform judicial acts anywhere in the county, and who when acting in any city having a municipal justice may be vested with like judicial powers as the municipal justice.

A contest will be held for one city office, that of commissioner, to be filled at the election April 3, with the filing of Phay Grafton, incumbent, and Fred Hagley for the sole vacancy.

Other filings are: supervisor for Precinct 1, Harold Boyce; supervisor for precinct 2, Ralph Allen; constables (two to be elected), Edward Mitchell and Fred French.

Judge Evans Cites Merits Probation

Judge Fremont Evans of the Berrien County Circuit Court addressed the Lions club here Wednesday evening on the merits of probation in comparison with prison sentences in curbing crime and in effects on the character of the criminal.

The morale of the sentenced man continues on a much better plane as long as he is kept out of prison and in the meantime he remains a useful citizen. Costs are far less, as the expense of handling a man for a year on probation average $10, while the cost of maintaining a prison inmate for a year is $425.

Out of every 100 men sentenced to probation, Judge Evans said, 78 return to society improved, 12 remain about the same, 7 violate their probation and 3 die.

He stated that prisoners whose minimum sentence have expired are not released on probation until the state has located employment for them.

Many Now Using Electric Brooders

Partly as a result of the extension of Indiana & Michigan Electric company service and partly because of the demonstration of results, a considerable sale of electric brooders has been reported in the Buchanan community.

Among those who are now using the Warner Electric brooder are: Mrs. Dave Sarver, R. F. Blomberg, Mrs. Leo Richter, John Weaver, Pat Clemens, Mrs. Schuman Sarver, O. L. York, Fred Koenigshof, Fred Miller, Peter Kudell, Howard Wilson. All of these brooders are of 500-chick capacity except that of Howard Wilson, which is 250-chick capacity.

The users as a rule buy day-old chicks. More chicks are saved because of more even temperatures inside the hover and cooler air in the runways.

I wonder how many people still think of serving lamb only in the spring, and then forget about it for the rest of the season. Perhaps the reason for that is that it is only in the last few years that lamb has been universally distributed and universally available at all markets. No more need we wait for the approach of spring to bring "spring lamb" to our tables. Actually, spring is just the beginning of the supply for the peak market is reached in the early fall.

One very important reason for lamb being a favorite with many homemakers is it is always tender - being young. Then too it goes so well with so many of our spring and summer vegetables and fruits. In buying lamb stop to consider. Just what do you want to use it for. Then select the proper cut. I find in purchasing meats it is always best to ask for branded meats. You are then assured of quality and top results in cooking.

So often I have heard persons at a loss to describe the odd flavor in lamb that they have found objectionable. That "wooly" taste that formerly was found has been entirely eliminated by better improved packer methods and chilling. Then too mutton is little sold in this country so there is little need to worry about getting "old" lamb.

The leg, shoulder, and ribs all make excellent roasts. The ribs are usually formed into a Crown Roast, and is tops both in delicacy and pocketbook. However, the leg of lamb is grand for roasts. Be sure to have the fell (that crisp, papery-like skin on the outside) left on because it hurries the roasting. The shoulder is a good economy buy and can be roasted whole boned for stuffing or cut into shoulder chops or steak. Has more bone than the leg but equally palatable.

The ribs and loin are the favorite cuts from lamb and are used primarily for chops and prepared by broiling.

The budget cuts include the breast which is good for stewing, stuffing and baking or braising. The neck may be sliced and braised in a tasty sauce. The shanks may be stewed with vegetables. Ground lamb shoulder is excellent for loaves and patties.

Any lamb cut is tender enough to roast or broil. Other methods may be used for sake of variety. One thing to remember is lamb cooks more slowly than most meats so be patient. Next roast you have try tucking slivers of garlic into slits made in the meat or rub the clove over the kettle in which stew is cooked—you'll find that lamb and garlic like each other.

Be sure to use a 300-325 degrees oven for 30-35 minutes to the pound when roasting and place roast, fat side up, on rack in an uncovered roasting pan.

Lamb Shanks with Vegetables
3 medium sized lamb shanks
5 carrots
6 small potatoes
1/2 cup parsley
1 cup, canned, whole tomatoes
1 cup cubed turnip
6 small onions
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Flour.
Wipe lamb shanks with a damp cloth, put into kettle and add 3 cups boiling water, salt and pepper. Simmer 1/2 hour, then add carrots cut in halves and onions. Cook 3/4 hour longer before adding potatoes and turnip. Cook 20 minutes longer. Then add tomatoes and parsley. Finish cooking. Sauce may thicken if desired. Serve G.

Washington News Letter

At Last
For two years Senator Vandenberg and Republicans generally have been insisting that the Social Security Act should be amended so as to prevent the collection of excessive taxes, paid by employer and employee, and the spending of the sums so collected for current expenses.

Friday last, before the House Ways and Means Committee, Secretary Morgenthau testified in substance that such a change was desirable; that he thought it should be brought about. Let those critics who say Republicans accomplish nothing by criticism and the offering of amendments note this accomplishment.

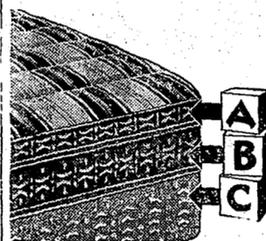

Sure, you get tired of reading and hearing us find fault with New Deal measures, but, if we do not call attention to some of the crazy ideas of the present administration and offer suggestions and amendments which we think will aid in remedying the trouble until we get rid of this outfit which for six years has each year given us a shove along the road toward bankruptcy, are we not failing in our duty?

Another Constructive Suggestion
In season and out, on the floor of Congress and many places throughout the country, I have bitterly criticized the Wagner Act, the National Labor Relations Board and the CIO. This I have done so often and so strenuously that some people have written me saying that on this subject I was making a nuisance of myself (although they do not sign their communications).

Just as when, on the streets of one of our towns I saw a bully or a mob abusing, mistreating, someone. I would do my best to stop it, so, while this Wagner Law, the Labor Relations Board and the CIO continue not only to interfere unjustly with business but to oppress workmen, to deprive them of their jobs, to levy tribute upon them, I shall continue to advocate its amendment.

Read your daily papers, the respectable weekly and monthly magazines, and you will discover that at last a wave of protest against the injustices of this law, its unfairness, its maladministration, is going up all over the country. In my judgment, one of the greatest single tasks that rests upon this Congress is to amend this law. For that purpose I have offered a bill and intend to advocate the amendment of this Act as long as this Congress remains in session. The New Deal administration, John L. Lewis' CIO and the Communists are about the only formidable opposition to such a program.

A Revolving Fund
We have heard much in recent years about revolving funds. Did you ever stop to think of the dues collected by the communistic-controlled CIO from its workers, some $400,000 of which went into the New Deal campaign fund, and the New Deal in turn aided the CIO through its Labor Board and the LaFollette Senate Civil Liberties Committee, in collecting more dues? There is a vicious circle that needs breaking.

Patriotism—A New Test
Just how absurd some of the New Deal columnists can be was indicated in last Friday's Washington Star, where a former New Deal employee, writing under the name of Jay Franklyn, headed his column, "Conservatives See Need of Drafting Roosevelt in 1940 Because of Crisis," and then said: "Will it (G. O. P.) oppose the national interest in order to gain a partisan advantage as in the fight against the League of Nations?"

In substance, his article tells us that "the acid test of American patriotism, according to conservative observers on the Washington scene," depends upon whether or not we support Roosevelt for a third term. To put it bluntly, we out in the stocks are not patriotic unless we support for a third term this wasteful spendthrift, who, so far as can be learned, has never kept a political promise since he was elected President. No man's patriotism can be determined by the sole test of whether he supported any man for a third or any other term.

Another Washington paper a few days before announced the purpose of Labor's Non-Partisan League, the CIO's political affiliate, as follows: "Our purpose at present is to run Roosevelt for a third term and to elect him." Roosevelt's third term supporters are using the "war scare" to force his election. We will have no more of a crisis in 1940 than we always have had since he was first inaugurated.

With the Medal Men at Clarks

Continued from Page One men lived then, setting forth facts and figures to show whether or not the wages paid then would go as far as those paid now. Not that I intend to settle the matter finally. I will leave that to the soap boxers of each side. But I have received some quite interesting information, especially from one Buchanan housewife who kept accounts in those days and the information may surprise many readers. I intend to devote one chapter on that legendary institution that was wont to sputter and cough and start and stop along the highways and byways in the first years of the century—the first car in Buchanan. To date I have some important clues but have not definitely identified the first car. Was it Myron Mead's 2-lunger? Was it the Harry Brown car (not our Harry of today) on which a tow rope was standard equipment? Was it Bill House's auto bus, built by the Michigan Motor & Machine Company, and named Autourban, as the result of the winning contribution turned in by Harry Weaver in a $2 contest for the best name?

That, ladies and gentlemen, will be the question before the house in a future issue. In the meantime, if you have information which may influence the decision, phergosh-sakes, lead us to it!

George Ditto furnished me with an interesting word picture of the old hammer room at the Lee & Kelley plant in its early years. Ditto went to work at common labor in Nov. 1900, getting $1.25 a 10 hour day. In a short time he went to work as a helper to Hod Bruce, the head blacksmith, at $1.75 per day. Then he got a contract at welding piecework, netting from $2.50 to $3.00 per day. Each axle was in two parts, one on each hub, and they were welded in the center to make the completed axle.

Pete Bachman was the foreman of this room. Hod Bruce's blacksmith department was in the southwest corner of the room, where he had four forges. Along the riverward or northerly side of the room were the three big hammers, suspended on long heavy wooden beams, operated by water-wheel power. At these hammers over a period of years worked George Thatcher, Elmer Moyer, Pete Bachman, Arthur Voorhees, Jimmie Conway and others. One of the workmen, George Bennitt, got a piece of steel embedded in his arm and died from infection.

On the other side in the middle and southeast from the blacksmith department was the oil furnace, usually fired by John Long. Each hammer man had a helper to keep the billets of steel for the axles hot and carry them to and from the furnace to the anvils.

"Those," George added reminisciently, "were the happy days." (To Be Continued)

Mottl is ill at his home with pneumonia. Mr. Walden, who bought the Claude Mitchell farm, started a grass fire on his premises Thursday, and it spread over 40 acres belonging to Bert Mitchell. With the aid of neighbors the fire was extinguished before it reached the Milton Mitchell place. It is feared that the fire killed out a new grass seeding.

O'Keefe began his career as a film extra. After a few years as vaudeville trouper and writer and director of amateur plays, he rocketed to screen prominence after a small role in "Saratoga" for which he was awarded the romantic lead opposite Virginia Bruce in "The Bad Man of Brimstone."

He gathered them up and reported the find. There was wild excitement, and Walter Connolly and William Frawley, in scenes with him, started prospecting. But when they took the nuggets to John Nickolaus, head of the M-G-M laboratory, the bubble burst with a bang. Nickolaus' tests disclosed that they were only iron pyrites, known to miners as "fool's gold."

Grade News

Sixth Grade—Miss Jeffery

We have a new book "Sharp Ears" for our library corner. Harold Good, Dorothy Weaver, John Conrad, Robert Mitchell, Gomer Gross, and Mark Myers each reviewed a chapter.

Both boys and girls are practicing for the operetta. Nineteen students had a perfect spelling test on Wednesday.

We are looking for information on Coronado, De Soto, Cortes, and Cartier. After we study our textbook we tell the class any additional information we found.

Our World Letter this week was about Valparaiso, Chili.

We saw a movie on Mexico last week. We wrote a story about it during our language period. You may read it in our "School Tribune."

Miss Jeffery sent for a booklet describing the Science lessons that will be given over the radio. We enjoy the lessons better when we have an idea what the program is about.

We illustrated the stories "Gone is Gone" and Shawneen and the Gander.

One of our mothers visited our English class. We enjoyed having a real audience situation and appreciate the interest shown.

Sixth Grade—Miss Reams

Miss Ream's sixth grade is studying Switzerland in geography. Switzerland is a very interesting country to study about. The whole room is making a scrapbook. Each person is responsible for a page. Some are going to draw pictures and others are going to write about Switzerland. The following description was written by Joy Jerie.

Switzerland is a small country. Its mountains are covered with white glittering snow. The land is very rocky. In some places it is very beautiful to see the clear white snow glittering all around like a bunch of sparkling stones. The trees are the color of the rich green grass. The rocks and stones are such colors as bright black, brown or gray.

Fifth Grade—Miss Spear

We have finished work on our Colonial Unit and feel that we have gained much from this study. We people of today don't realize the hardships our forefathers had. We seem to take our homes, furniture, clothing, lights, heating plants, radios, etc. for granted. Since our Colonial study we have a greater understanding of the first "Americans."

Fifth Grade—Miss Ekstrom

The class listened last Friday to a radio program called "Tales from Far and Near." The book "Shawneen and the Gander" was reviewed by its author, Richard Bennett. It was an Irish story of a boy and a bugle. Shawneen always looked at it when he went to town. It was the color of gold and so shining he could see himself seven times in it. Shawneen wanted it but wanting the bugle and owning it were two different things. But adventures fell upon Shawneen and he earned the coveted bugle.

Fourth Grade—Mrs. Fuller

Our people are making special study of birds and their homes for this week. Trees are also being introduced since they are often the homes of birds. Birds and bird's calls thus far recognized are robins, jays, cardinals, doves, bobwhite, catbirds, and thrashers. Bird poems and stories are also being enjoyed.

Third Grade—Miss Kinney

We are learning many interesting things about different kinds of soil. The boys and girls have brought jars of loam, sand, and gravel, and we will have humus, clay, and others this week.

We are reading to find out the kind of soil which is best suited to cotton, so we can transplant our cotton plants to that kind of soil. Neale brought us some sandstone. A piece broke off and we were sure that freezing had caused it to break.

Second Grade—Mrs. Heim

Dickie Davis brought us a box of Ceiba. This fiber comes from Jamaica and the Netherlands. It is used for insulation in refrigerators.

Mrs. Lamb gave us two new books about Mrs. Gray Bunny for our Health Class.

Second Grade—Miss Fritz

Carol Covert brought a toy piano to school. We have numbered the keys of the piano and have translated the notes of some songs into numbers. As a result the children are learning to play many tunes they like.

First Grade—Miss Connell

Miss Connell's room will present a "Sleep Dialogue" and songs at the March Assembly Program.

Phy Ekelbarger moved to the country with his parents Monday. We are sorry to have Phay move before school closed.

We are glad to have Charles Smith with us again. Charles has been ill and has not been in school much this winter.

First Grade—Miss Carnagan

Besides the reading done in the regular class period, each child is doing individual reading, too. Dale Rifenberg is reading his third book, Shirley Casto, Robert Quick, Bobby Phiscator, and Harold Bratton their second book. After each book is read, an oral review is given to the group.

Mich. Savings & Loan Assoc. Set A Record in Jan., Feb.

The heavy volume of thrift funds pouring into insured savings and loan associations in Michigan during the first two months of 1939 resulted in a record total of savings invested in these institutions as of March 1, Nugent Fallon, General Manager of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, said today. On that date such private investments aggregated $35,987,000.

"Thrifty Michigan people certainly are taking advantage of the protection given their savings up to $5,000 per investor in these insured institutions," Mr. Fallon said. "We are delighted with the reports from Michigan."

During February the 42 insured associations in that State reported 293 loans on homes for a total of $656,000. These loans were made on the direct reduction plan, by which easy monthly payments are applied to both principal and interest until the borrower owns his home free of debt.

As of March 1, such direct reduction loans on the books of these associations had reached a total of $25,398,000.

Insured associations in Michigan are located in: Adrian, Ann Arbor, Battle Creek, Birmingham, Buchanan, Charlotte, Coldwater, Dearborn, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Ludington, Midland, Mount Clemens, Muskegon, Niles, Owosso, Plymouth,
